LA CYGNE.

This town is finely situated in the valley of the Marais des Cygnes, on the line of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad, north of Pleasanton. It was started in 1869, as soon as the location of the line of the railroad was known. The Town Company was composed of the following gentlemen: A. H. Davis, President; B. S. Heath, Secretary; W. E. Moore, Treasurer; Nathan Pratt, A. G. McKinzie, B. S. Henning, H. J. Hayden and J. B. Grinnell. This company purchased 1,400 acres, but had laid out for a town site only 140 acres.

La Cygne was incorporated as a village January 14, 1870, with the following Board of Trustees: B. S. Heath, Henry Priser, D. S. Bentley, W. D Hesser, and Bona Dale, and E. A. Foot, Clerk. In the fall of that year, it being ascertained that La Cygne had inhabitants enough, the town organized as a city of the third class, by electing, August 23, E. A. Foot, Mayor, and the following Councilmen: George W. Moore, Henry Priser, W. E. Moore, H. Dellinger and John Howard; T. W. Williamson was elected Clerk; W. E. Moore, Treasurer; and J. V. Dobson, City Marshal. Since that time, the following gentlemen have been successively elected Mayors of La Cygne: Henry Dellinger, elected in 1871; Henry Briser, in 1872; J. S. Lane, 1873; W. A. Jones, 1874; J. S. Lane, 1875; I. Croxton, 1876; Robert Slater, 1877 and 1878; J. V. Donaldson, 1878 and 1880; S. D. Cady, 1881; J. V. Donaldson, 1882.

Just before the laying-out of the town site, Mr. Chetland built a store, and immediately afterward S. D. Cady erected a building for the purpose of carrying on the dry goods business. The next business house, erected also in the fall of 1869, was by J. J. Starks and Henry Briser. At the end of six months, they dissolved partnership, and Mr. Starks erected, in 1871, the first brick building in the town, designed also for the dry goods business. In 1869, W. A. Jones started a hardware store, Lyman Dearborn a furniture store, and George J. Miller a produce and grocery store. The first hotel was the Walker House, built by J. A. Walker. The second was the La Cygne House, built in 1869–70, by Joseph Goss.

Quite a number of dwelling houses were built in 1869, and a few more pretentious residences in the same year by Henry Briser, Dr. A. Davis, B. S. Heath and others.

The first school in La Cygne was taught in 1869, by Miss Webb, in Cady's Hall. This was a subscription school, and was continued until the fall of 1870, when a public schoolhouse was built. In the year 1871, a large, two story brick schoolhouse was built at a cost of $10,000. The school in this building has been graded from the first. The successive Superintendents have been I. N. Moon, Mr. Coates, J. H. G. Weaver, G. W. Botkin and I. D. Elliott.

The first physician was Dr. Seaton, who built a house in 1869–70; the next, Dr. B. S. Heath, a member of the original town company, and then Dr. J. H. Sanford. The first lawyer in La Cygne was J. D. Holden, from Wisconsin, now of Emporia; the next the firm of Watson & McArthur; then J. V. Donaldson, present Mayor, who came in the summer of 1870, and then James D. Snoddy, who came in the spring of 1871.

CHURCHES AND OTHER LOCAL MATTERS.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1870, with ten members, by Rev. J. Biddison, who erected the church building and parsonage. The former is a frame building, 24x60 feet, and cost $1,000; the latter cost $600. This church has been somewhat unfortunate in its ministers, most of them having been men whom the patrons of the church could not commend as men. Revs. Biddison, Noah Asher and John Kirby were notable exceptions. The church is now composed of sixty members, and although not in a flourishing condition, is as able as ever to appreciate true worth and Christian manhood in its ministers. The troubles are chargeable to the conference, or are attributable to the lack of proper material in the ranks of the Methodist ministry.

The first Superintendent of the Sunday school which was organized in 1870, was J. I. Foot. The present membership of the school is sixty-five.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in 1870 with five members, by Elder W. H. Vroom, who preached the first sermon and remained until 1874. He was succeeded by Revs. James Mitchell, in 1875; Mr. Mayon in 1877; H. M. Green, in 1879, who remained until 1881. The corner-stone of the building was laid in July, 1871, and the edifice completed in the following fall. It is a frame building, 28x44 feet, seats 400 people, and cost $1,400. The highest membership has been forty, present fifteen.

A Sunday school was organized in 1870, first Superintendent, Benjamim Shuart, present membership of the school, sixty.

The Baptist Church was organized in 1870, Rev. Alfred Gore preaching the first sermon.

A Catholic Church was organized about the same time, but it has been discontinued.

The La Cygne Flouring Mill was built in 1870 by Chatterson & Hungerford. In 1880, it became the property of D. Coonrad, with Philo Coonrad, manager. The building is three stories high, and with the machinery cost $9,000. It is supplied with "patent process" machinery, put in in 1882, at a cost of $3,000. The capacity of the mill is eighty barrels of flour per day.

A bank was started in 1870 by S. D. Cady, called the Farmers' Savings Bank. It was conducted by him until 1871, when a stock company was organized, of which S. D. Cady was elected President, and F. M. Davis, Cashier. This company erected a brick building, and in 1874 S. D. Cady purchased the stock and continued the business under the firm name of S. D. Cady & Co. He afterward sold out to Ellis & Saunders, who now conduct the business under the name of the Linn County Bank.

Shortly after the starting of the Farmers' Savings Bank, Bentley, Pratt & Moore started a private bank and carried on the business until 1877, when a stock company was organized, of which G. F. Hamlin was elected President, and W. E. Moore, Cashier. This company carried on the banking business successfully until March, 1879, when it was discontinued.

In 1879, a building association in the form of a stock company was organized for the purpose of erecting business houses. J. V. Donaldson was elected President, and H. W. Cooper, Secretary. A two-story brick block was erected at a cost of $16,000, which is occupied by excellent stores. In the upper story of one of these buildings is an elegant hall, 40x80 feet, 18 feet high, with a truss roof.

The La Cygne Organ Factory was started in 1880, by Swisher & Shrake. Up to the present time, the business of making organs has been carried on on a small scale, but there is good ground for encouragement. A reed organ of any size, style and price can be obtained at this factory.

Coal.—In July, 1881, a few of the citizens of La Cygne raised the sum of $1,000 and gave it as a bonus to Mr. George Morely, a practical miner, to sink a shaft in search for coal. This shaft is located one-half mile north of the town. It was sunk to the depth of one hundred and twenty feet, when a thirty-six inch vein of excellent coal was found. A company for mining organized, consisting of Morely & Son & Cady. This company purchased considerable ground, and in the winter of 1881–82 Mr. Cady became sole proprietor. Another stock company was organized in the south part of the town, and another shaft sunk, with similar results. Both shafts are now leased to a mining company from Illinois, and the coal sold at the mine at about $2.25 per ton.

Silver, etc.—In the year 1872, acting upon the advice of the spirit of an Indian chief, the advice being communicated through a Spiritualistic medium, a company sunk a shaft on "Silver Mound," with the hope of finding silver. The owner of the land was offered $100 per acre for forty acres of land, which offer he refused. About $3,000 was expended in sinking the shaft to the depth of about one hundred feet, without avail, and the project was abandoned. Acting under a similar hallucination, a young man spent $15,000 in a fruitless search for lead in Potosi Township. From these experiences, we may conclude that the "clairvoyance" of the living or the dead is not a much safer guide then enlightened reason.

La Cygne Lodge, No. 61, A., F. & A. M., was originally located at Twin Springs, where it was chartered in 1867. It was chartered at La Cygne, October 20, 1870. Its first officers here were Thomas Preston, W. M.; D. Underhill, Jr., S. W.; A. G. Seaman, J. W.; S. D. Cady, Secretary; I. N. Lemen, Treasurer. The present membership is fifty-three.

La Cygne Lodge, No. 66, I. O. O. F., was chartered October 17, 1870, with seven members. It now has sixty-one, and has lost by death only four. The charter officers were Morris Davidson, N. G.; J. H. Sifers, V. G.; W. H. Ellis, Secretary, and B. F. Smith, Treasurer.

The La Cygne Weekly Journal.—The first number of this paper was issued June 18, 1870, by L. C. Carey and J. P. Kenea. Mr. Carey having died September 17, 1872, it was then published by Mr. Kenea and his sister, Mrs. Carey, until March 22, 1873; then by Mr. Kenea and Rev. Albert Gore until March 14, 1874; then by Kenea & Carey until November 28, 1874; then by Kenea & Gore until March 20, 1875; then by Kenea & Carey until July 17, 1875, and from July 24, 1875, to the present time by Kenea and Ed. C. Lane. The paper was started as a six-column folio; November 26, 1870, it was enlarged to a seven-column, and to an eight-column in September, 1875. The paper has always been Republican.

Ed. C. Lane was born in Kendall County, Ill., August 11, 1855, and lived in Bristol, that county, until 1872; received a common school education; learned the printer's trade in the office of the Kendall County Record; then worked in the Beacon office, Aurora, Ill., and in the Courier office, Lockport, Ill. In 1872, he went into business with his father, L. H. Lane, in Prescott, Linn Co., Kan., and in 1875 bought an interest in the La Cygne Journal, which he still retains, and of which paper he is one of the editors; is a Mason, and a Republican; was a delegate to the Kansas Republican State Conventions of 1880 and 1882, and a member of the Second Kansas District Republican Congressional Committee from 1880 to 1882.

Late in the fall of 1882 a destructive fire occurred in La Cygne, burning the following buildings: A. Friedman, unoccupied building; George J. Miller, building rented for real estate office and building occupied by George Eyer, grocer; H. Dellinger & Co., harness shop; D. Coonrad, mill office; William Sharon, partial stock of groceries; Judson & Davis, building and furniture; I. Croxton, billiard hall; B. Seaton, buildings containing Porter's barber shop and Tilgner's meat market; Robert Whisner, billiard hall; F. W. Pollman, meat market; C. C. Atkinson, dental office; Burton & Brothers' restaurant; Darius Ross, barber shop; David Gow, boot and shoe shop; George F. Hamlin, two-story frame building, unoccupied; Nivison & Seymour, billiard hall; D. S. Kelly, three buildings rented for harness shop, carpenter shop and doctor's office. A clean sweep was made on the west side of Broadway, from Market to Walnut. The Gulf depot caught fire on the roof. The roof of the La Cygne House was covered with sparks, and several buildings including the post office adjacent to the scene of the conflagration, had a narrow escape. The losses foot up to about $20,000; insurance, $2,600.

His parents died when he was about four years old; was adopted by and lived with a cousin up to his ninth year, when, the cousin dying, he was thrown upon his own resources for support, working by the month for different parties until in his twenty-second year. Up to this time he had no schooling of consequence. In the following three years he managed to receive a pretty fair common district school education. In February, 1861, he came to Atchison County, Kansas; worked the following summer on a farm in company with a brother and cousin; sold his share of crop the following fall, as follows: Wheat, delivered at Atchison, eighteen miles distant, for 30 cents per bushel; corn in crib for 12½ cents per bushel, on twelve months' time; oats 10 cents per bushel in bin on farm. He joined a company of Home Guards, was elected Orderly Sergeant of the same, but prior to the company being mustered into the service, was assigned a position as Regimental Teamster, which position he filled for two years, when he was assigned to duty on one of the Government farms near Fort Leavenworth, occupying this position until near the end of the war, after which he returned to Illinois and engaged in farming for one year only. His success was rapid until the fall of 1874. In September of this year, he lost his wife and only child by death. The following season the grasshoppers destroyed his entire nursery, leaving him alone and worse than penniless, about $700 in debt. In October, 1875, he married a sister of his deceased wife, Miss Lillie M. Hill, locating near the city of La Cygne. He began the establishment of the well-known La Cygne nurseries in company with Hon. A. G. Seaman, and continuing the business under the firm name of A. G. Last year Mr. Cozad's planting consisted in part of 100 bushels of osage orange hedge seed, a large lot of apple seed, 200,000 apple grafts, fifty bushels peach pits, and other seeds and stock in proportion. His sales the past year, 1882, were nearly $6,000. He employs a large number of men. In the busy season from twenty to thirty men; in the grafting-room we found seven men at work putting up from 7,000 to 10,000 grafts daily. The town site was laid out in March, 1870, by Edward Billings, eighty acres of whose farm was a part of it, the remainder, twenty acres, being a part of the farm of W. H. Billings. A. D. Perrin built the first dwelling, a two story frame; the second by William Bower, the third by G. H. B. Hopkins. About the 1st of April, R. Odell started a general store, Dr. Rader a drug store, and William Bower a blacksmith shop. In May or June, the post office was established, William Bower first Postmaster. BLUE MOUND.

This town is situated fourteen and one half miles southwest of Mound City, on the line of the proposed St. Louis & Emporia Railroad. It is on high, almost level prairie, and surrounded by a country well adapted to farming and grazing. The first post office in the vicinity was opened on Blue Mound, an elevation one half mile north of the present town, in the year 1854, John Quincy Adams, the first settler in the township being appointed Postmaster. Some time afterward, it was moved one mile south, and later three miles to the west, where it remained until June 1, 1882, when it was finally moved into the village of Blue Mound by the present Postmaster, George T. Wolf. The elevation, called "Blue Mound," is about fifty feet high, and was so named by John Q. Adams, because from a distance it looks blue; the more moisture there is in the air the bluer it looks. The town was named after the mound, and was located where it is on the assurance of the St. Louis & Emporia Railroad authorities that that road should run near it. The Blue Mound Town Company was organized in April, 1882, and was composed of the following members: Capt. Barnes, President; Nathan Corbin, Secretary; H. A. B. Cook, Treasurer; O. R. Deland, H. M. Brook and Thomas Brook. The town site was surveyed in April, 1882, by Gen. Harrison. The first building on the town site was a store moved from the windmill, three miles southeast, by D. J. & W. S. Alley, May 1, 1882; the second was moved from Wall street, by Innis Bros., and was utilized as a hotel until their new hotel was completed in June; the third building was erected for a shoe shop by T. H. Blise. The blacksmith shop was moved to Blue Mound from the windmill. The first sermon in the town was preached by Rev. Mr. Hinton, a United Brethren minister. The first school was opened October 2, 1882, by Miss M. E. Weatherbie, with thirty scholars. The first birth was that of a son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stuteville, in August; the first death that of the wife of John Michael, September 29, 1882.

The growth of the town has been phenomenally rapid. On the 1st of May there was but one or two buildings on the town site; on October 1, there were fifty-six, and a population of nearly two hundred, with three general stores, one hardware store, one furniture store, two blacksmith shops, one drug store, one harness shop, one lumber yard and one hotel. With a prospect of one railroad, possibly two, and a union depot, the people are full of enterprise and hope. Should they get neither, they will, upon a near approach, be a great deal bluer than the Mound looks at a distance.

"Cross City" is a possible future town laid out one mile northeast of Blue Mound, as an opposition town to that village. Its fate will be determined by the location of the St. Louis & Emporia Railroad and its station.

TRADING POST.

This town is located on the banks of the Marais des Cygnes, about four miles from the State line, and is one of the oldest settlements in the State. The land where it stands was purchased at an early day of a Frenchman named Jarien, by another Frenchman named Chouteau, the latter carrying on a heavy trade with the Indians; hence this post was called the Chouteau Trading Post. There was no town laid out here until 1865, when the Montgomery Town Company was organized, and the town of Montgomery laid out and platted October 17, that year, just east of the present town site of the trading post; but the town not being a success was finally abandoned. Trading Post is located on Section 5, Township 21, Range 25, and was laid out and platted in March, 1866, by Dr. Massey and George A. Crawford. But everything in this town dates from the Marais des Cygnes massacre. Previously to this time, John F. Campbell was keeping store here. Soon after it, Dr. Massey & White opened a store in a log house near the bridge. A grist-mill was erected in 1857. It has been purchased and much improved by J. & A. Brockett, and is now one of the finest mills in the State. It is two and a half stories high, and has two run of buhrs. There is a saw-mill attached. During most of the year, it is run by water, but during the dry season, in August and September, the motive power is steam.

It is not ascertainable who preached the first sermon at the Post, but John R. Williams, a Baptist minister, preached to an outdoor congregation in August, 1856. There are two church organizations in this vicinity, one Baptist, the other Southern Methodist, both of which use the "Swayback" church, situated three miles north and one mile east of the Trading Post as a house of worship. There is also a United Presbyterian organization four miles east, known as the State Line Church.

The present schoolhouse, a two-story frame, was built by the Masons in 1865, and the lower half sold by them to the district.

The first birth in the vicinity was that of Jasper and Newton Nichols, twins, in 1855; the first marriage that of Samuel Brown to Miss Hobbs, in 1856; and the first death that of Mrs. Bartemas, in 1856.

Blooming Grove Lodge, No. 41, A., F. & A. M., was organized in 1862, with twelve members. Its charter officers were: A. C. Doud, W. M.; William Goss, S. W.; W. W. Silsby, J. W.; Samuel Brown, Secretary; Jackson Lane, Treasurer. The present membership is fourteen.

Trading Post contains at present three general stores, one drug store, two blacksmith shops, one agricultural implement dealer, and about 100 inhabitants.

Barnard is the trading post station, and nearly three miles distant toward the northwest. It is situated on "Hensley's Point;" the town-site, eighty acres, was purchased by J. B. Grinnell, of Arthur Barnard. Mr. Grinnell had a survey made, and held a sale of lots in the fall of 1869. The first building erected in the town was built for a store and grocery by John V. Leabo, who was appointed first Postmaster in the same year. In March, 1870, David Sibbett was appointed Postmaster and has held the office ever since. The first dwelling erected in Barnard was the section house by the railroad company, the next by James Leabo, both in the fall of 1869. The first birth in this part of the county was that of Millie B. Ward, daughter of Sylvester and Nancy Ann Ward, October 11, 1866; the first marriage that of Robert Edwards to Mrs. Mary Bemus in 1871, and the first deaths those of Jacob and Richard Gudgel, father and son, which occurred at almost the same time, in 1872. The first school was taught in John Morrison's house, by William Stark, in the winter of 1869–70. Barnard now contains eight dwellings, and about forty inhabitants.

OTHER VILLAGES AND POST OFFICES.

Hail Ridge is situated nine miles southwest of Mound City and five miles east of Blue Mound. There is here only a store and post office.

Oakwood is a country post office established in 1858, with John Jones, Postmaster. The post office was frequently moved from one farmhouse to another until 1878, when a grange store was started under the management of W. B. Scott, and the post office was permanently located therein. In addition to the grange store, there is a drug store, blacksmith shop and physician's office.

Woytown is situated on the open prairie, and was named after H. H. Woy, one of the first settlers. The first settlement was made by C. O. Best in the spring of 1881, who was appointed Postmaster in October of that year. The first birth was that of Winfred J. Darley, August 18, 1881. The first store was opened by S. W. Kiser. The town contains about twenty-five inhabitants.

Cadmus Post Office was established in 1877, J. S. Payne being appointed first Postmaster.

DEFUNCT TOWNS.

Mansfield was located about four miles northwest of Mound City, and the same distance southwest of Paris, from which latter town a part of the houses were moved, and a portion of the people moved over to the new town of Mansfield. This was in 1860. The Mansfield Town Company was composed of R. B. Mitchell, Pleasant Chitwood and J. H. Barlow. A store was started and kept for a short time by Coleman Brothers, and soon afterward J. M. Hawthorne became Postmaster, and started a small store. The town reached the height of its prosperity in 1867, at which time it contained from twelve to fifteen houses, and about fifty inhabitants. From this time it gradually dwindled away and was abandoned in 1868 or 1869.

Paris was situated about six miles north of Mound City. It was owned by Pro-slavery men, and was a rallying-point, in the early history of the county, for them when making raids on Free-State men. In the early history of the town, a store was kept by Rogers, Badolet & Co., and one by Zadock Lewis. Jesse Brown was Postmaster, and a saw-mill was owned by Gwynn & Bronson. In its palmiest days, Paris contained from 300 to 400 inhabitants. This was about the time of the removal of the county seat from Paris to Mound City. From that time it diminished in size and importance until in 1866 or 1867, it was almost entirely abandoned as a town. The Paris Town Company was incorporated by special act approved February 14, 1857, and consisted of James P. Fox, John H. Tate, I. T. Glover and Luke Grimes. The first Republican Convention held in Linn County convened at Paris March 12, 1859. It was a mass convention, and there were about 150 Republicans in attendance. They met Free-State men, separated Republicans. The delegates chosen to go to Osawatomie May 18, when the Republican party of Kansas was organized, were Addison Danford and J. H. Jones.

Moneka was located on Section 1, Township 22, Range 23, one mile north and one-half mile west of Mound City. It was commenced in February, 1857. The Moneka Town Company was composed of the following gentlemen: Augustus Wattles, John O. Wattles, John B. Wood, Andrew Stark, Dr. Gilpatrick, and a few others. The first store started here was kept by O. E. & O. S. Morse; the first hotel by George E. Dennison, and the first tin-shop by F. C. Bacon. The Moneka Academy building was raised July 4, but was not enclosed until March, 1858. In April, Miss Sarah A. Wattles, daughter of August Wattles, commenced the first term of school in the town. William Hobson built a saw-mill on Little Sugar Creek, the first saw-mill in Linn County. Soon after starting it, he attached a corn-cracker to it. In 1858, Moneka contained a population of nearly 200 people, but from this time it dwindled away until in the fall of 1859 all the inhabitants had gone to other localities. The business men moved mainly to Mound City. The academy building was moved to Linnville, where it remained until 1871, when it was removed to Pleasanton.

Brooklin was situated seven miles northwest of the present site of Barnard. In the fall of 1855, E. O. Brooks & Co. built some cabins here, and started a store. At the suggestion of David Sibbett, Mr. Brooks' name and Linn, the name of the county, were united so as to the form the name Brooklin, for the name of the town. At this time, there was no bridge across the Marais des Cygnes, near which river Brooklin was located. So the settlers cut down a very large tree and fashioned it into a canoe for the purpose of transporting their goods across the river to the new town. Among these goods were two barrels of whisky, which cost exactly the same price; but upon their arrival at Brooklin, one was found to be of "a little better brand" than the other, and hence was sold at 30 cents per gallon, while the "inferior brand" was sold for 25 cents.

In the spring of 1856, David Sibbett, being a frail young man, opened a school, but it was soon broken up and scattered, as were also most of the people of Brooklin, by the report that John Brown, who had just committed the Pottawatomie massacre, Jim Lane and others were coming in that direction, and killing all the Pro-slavery men before them. Mr. Brooks hastened to Missouri with his stock of goods. Shortly afterward, when quiet had been restored, and it had been discovered that the report was false, David Sibbett and Z. W. Leasure bought the goods, brought them back to Brooklin, re-opened the store, and for a considerable time carried on a flourishing business. David Sibbett was appointed Postmaster, and continued to hold the office until 1870, soon after which time the town was abandoned, a part of the people removing to Barnard, part to La Cygne, and some to other places. At the present time there are left but two blacksmith shops.

Potosi was situated on Mine Creek, about two miles east of Pleasanton. The original town site consisted of 320 acres. It was laid out in 1856, the original town company being all Pro-slavery men. When the Free-State men gained control of affairs in the county the town site of Potosi passed into other hands, as R. B. Mitchell, John W. Garrett, O. H. Sykes, Lewis Cummings, J. Elsrode, J. W. Babb and others, most of whom were Free-State men. A store was started and kept for a number of years by J. E. Hill. John W. Garrett was Postmaster. Mr. Garrett and O. H. Sykes built a saw mill, commencing it in 1857 and completing it in 1858. At one time, Potosi had six houses in it and about thirty inhabitants. It continued to exist until 1869, when Pleasanton was started, when it was abandoned.

The original Potosi Town Company was incorporated by a special act, approved February 20, 1857, and consisted of James P. Fox, Jesse Davis, Bernard Hogan and John H. Tate.

Twin Springs.—This town was situated in the northern part of the county, near the Miami county line. It was started in 1860 or 1861, in which year a store was opened. Mr. Trovinger was first Postmaster, and occupied a store built in 1861 by Lafayette Dunbar. A store was started in 1862 by Cady & Lane. Some time afterward, Bona Dale started a drug store, Mr. Whittacre a dry goods and grocery store, and Mr. Jamison a furniture store. When the prosperity of the town was at its height, there were about 300 inhabitants in it, and, besides its other businesses, two hotels. Barlow & Sanderson ran a stage line through it between Kansas City and Scott, some of the time running six stages each day. A Methodist Church was erected there, which is now one of the best schoolhouses in the county. During a portion of the time, Cady & Lane did a business of $37,000 annually, there being two other stores there at the time; but when the railroad was built and La Cygne started Twin Springs was abandoned, and its inhabitants and business men divided themselves up among other towns; some going to the then new town of Fontana, in Miami County, others to La Cygne, and still others to Fort Scott.

Jackson was the first post office established in Liberty Township, and Isaiah Jackson was the first Postmaster appointed, but, on account of his finding it necessary to leave the Territory, the papers were returned to Washington and the name of D. Underhill, Sr., substituted. This was in November, 1857. D. Underhill, Jr., became Postmaster in 1860, and was succeeded by A. G. Seaman in 1866. The post office was discontinued in 1872.

CRAWFORD County lies in the eastern tier, and in the second tier from the southern boundary of the State. It is bounded on the north by Bourbon County, on the east by Missouri, on the south by Cherokee County, and on the west by Labette and Neosho Counties.

The boundaries of the county were defined by an act of the Legislature, approved February 13, 1867, in the following language: "That the territory included within the following boundaries shall constitute the county of Crawford, to wit: Commencing at the southeast corner of the county of Bourbon, thence run south on the east line of the State of Kanas to the southeast corner of Section 13, Township 31, Range 25; thence west to the east line of Neosho County as defined in an act approved February 26, 1866; thence north to the southwest corner of Bourbon County; thence east to the place of beginning." As thus defined the county is twenty-three miles from north to south, and nearly twenty-six miles from east to west, containing 592 square miles, or 578,880 acres.

The general surface of the county is undulating. A water-shed extends from the middle of the western boundary northeasterly until near and to the west of Farlington, when it turns southeasterly and leaves the county at the middle of the eastern boundary. Most of the county slopes toward the south, but Lincoln Township slopes toward the north. The highest land is in the center of the county about 1,100 feet above the level of the sea. The bottom lands average in width three-fourths of a mile, and comprise fifteen per cent of the area, uplands comprising eighty-five per cent.

The principal streams are Drywood, Bone and Coxes Creeks in the northeast; Cow Creek, with its branches Middle Cow and Little Cow Creeks, flowing southeasterly; Lightning Creek rising in the northern part of the county and flowing south into Cherokee County, with its tributaries, Elm, Thunderbolt and Lime Creeks; Hickory Creek flowing southwest into Neosho County, and Big and Little Walnut Creeks, also flowing southwest into Neosho County. Springs are not numerous, but good well water is obtainable at depths varying from ten to forty feet.

The native timber belts are in the bottom lands, and average one-half mile in width. About ten per cent is covered with forests. The principal varieties are cottonwood, elm, hackberry, hickory, black, burr, post and red oak, poplar and walnut.

The soil varies in depth from one to five feet, is exceedingly fertile, and well adapted to the growth of all the cereals. The subsoil varies in depth from ten to twenty feet. Beneath this lie various kinds of stone, clay, etc.—sandstone, limestone, slate, fire and pottery clay, hydraulic cement and coal. This valuable mineral underlies the entire county, but the vein is thickest in the southeastern corner, across which it extends from Cherokee County into Missouri. In Baker Township, the vein is four feet in thickness, lying at from thirty to fifty feet below the surface of the ground. In Lincoln Township there are also valuable coal mines. There are two and three different strata of coal underlying all the eastern third of this county, with a thickness of from two to five feet. The surface vein is about twenty-two inches, the lower vein, from thirty to sixty feet deeper, is from four to six feet. It is thought that the lower vein underlies the entire county

PRIMITIVE OCCUPANTS AND EARLY SETTLERS.

Crawford County lies within the tract known as the "Cherokee Neutral Lands," a history of which is given in connection with Cherokee County. White men began to settle on the lands about the year 1850, Harden Matthews settling in Sherman Township in that year. Quite a number of white men entered the county in 1852, and in 1857 some settlements were made in Walnut Township, and in 1861 W. Banks settled in Crawford Township on Big Cow Creek. From this time on, quite a number of settlers entered different parts of the county.

John Lemans, a blacksmith, settled in Osage Township in 1848, and resided there until 1861, at which time he was driven out by United States soldiers under command of the Cherokee Indian Agent.

Pleasant M. Smith settled in Baker Township in 1851. He lived here only a short time, building no house, but instead living in a tent. In 1856, a Mr. Sears made the first permanent settlement in this township, building a log house near the mission crossing on Cow Creek. Quite a number of settlers had commenced to make houses here, when, in 1859, Cherokee Indian Agent Cowan, under orders from James Buchanan, President of the United States, came in from Missouri with a company of regular soldiers under command of Capt. Sturges, and drove them from their homes, lighting their pathway by fires made of their burning haystacks, houses and barns. In 1865, other settlers came into this part of the county, among them Marion Medlin, John Hobson, Frank Dosser, and S. S. Georgia; Hobson selecting for his home the spot formerly occupied by Mr. Sears. In 1866, S. J. Langdon and A. J. Georgia came in. During the winter of 1866-67, the Government surveyors sectionized the township, which made lively times among the settlers making rails and fencing in their claims. At that time the only obtainable substance from which flour could be made was corn. The corn had to be hauled from a distance of from thirty to forty miles in Missouri, and cost $2 per bushel.

J. F. Gates, Stephen Ogden, W. J. McWirt, Capt. John Hamilton and others, settled in Sheridan Township in 1865. Lincoln Township was settled in 1852 by the Hathaways and others, and Walnut Township in 1857.

At the election of April 15, 1867, A. T. Crawford was elected a Justice of the Peace. The first case that came before him was of assault and battery upon a Dutchman named Osterman by Jeremiah Elixison. The case was tried before a jury of six, who brought in a verdict of guilty, and imposed as a penalty a fine of $5 and costs, amounting in all to $14. This amount was turned over to County Treasurer S. J. Langdon, and was the only money received by him as such officer during his term of office.

The first Justices of the Peace in the county were Levi Price and Heman Martin. Price was appointed by the County Commissioners. During his Justiceship, he performed a marriage ceremony, in March, 1867, the parties united being Homer Howell and Mrs. Rachel Turney. This was the first marriage in the county, and as there was then no Probate Court, Justice Price issued the license, performed the ceremony and signed the certificate, which was sent to Bourbon County for record. It was afterward ascertained that the marriage was void, and an act of the Legislature legalizing it was passed—the bill having been prepared by James T. Bridgens and passed through the influence of Capt. John Hamilton.

The first legal marriage license was issued December 27, 1867, to W. M. Breckenridge and Miss Elner Stone, the ceremony being performed by James F. St. Clair.

The first saloon license in the county was issued April 6, 1868, to Charles L. Russell in Lincoln Township.

The Crawford County Agricultural Society was organized February

5, 1870, with thirteen Directors. The first officers were J. W. Earles, President, S. A. Atwood, Secretary. Dr. William H. Warner served as Secretary of this society for six years. As editor of the Girard Press, he urged the necessity of such an organization. The old, or first organization, held fairs every year, and purchased forty acres of land on the east of Girard, which was sold by the new organization and another lot purchased west of Girard. Dr. Warner represented this society in the State Board of Agriculture at Topeka several years. The society was re-organized May 27, 1882, and the following officers elected: W. H. Braden, President; James Evans, Vice President; A. P. Riddle, Secretary; Albert Allen, Treasurer; A. N. Winchell, Superintendent, and C. Zigler, Chief Marshal.

WAR RECORD.

During the war, many of the settlers suffered severely at the hands of rebel guerrillas and bushwhackers. Most of the outrages were committed by Livingston's men. The following are the names of some of the men killed by his and other bands: Capt. Dobbins, of the Sixth Kansas, and a number of private soldiers; a Mr. Manly; Capt. John Rogers, who lived in Lincoln Township, while home on a furlough in 1863, was called out of his house at night and shot in his own door yard; H. Howard was killed on Bone Creek while home on furlough; John Simons was killed in his own house; Heman Martin lost all his property in the same year by bushwhackers; and John Pearson had his house burned. In May, 1866, four brothers named Tippy came into the county for evil purposes. Two of them visited Ralph Warner and a Mr. Shannon and talked about buying cattle. After they had gone away, Warner and Shannon were apprised of their character and so put on their guard. Warner asked some neighbors to stay with him at night, but only one neighbor besides Shannon came before night. After dark another neighbor came, and soon the other two Tippy brothers approached. Shannon and one neighbor named Lamb were in the house, Warner and the other neighbor on the wood pile. The two brothers, passing Warner and his companion, approached the house, opened the door, and fired upon Shannon and Lamb. Shannon and Lamb returned the fire, when the women interfered, but Shannon fired the second time. The Tippys between them fired five times. One of them was wounded and afterward died in Missouri from the effects of the wound. Shannon was killed almost instantly, having been hit twice. Warner escaped into the brush. The neighborhood was alarmed, a posse collected, organized, and started in pursuit of the two that had purchased Warner's cattle and were driving them away. The posse soon overtook the cattle drovers and brought them back to Monmouth for trial, as accomplices in the murder of Shannon. The trial was regular, before a jury of twelve men, and resulted in a verdict of guilty and sentence of death. They were hanged on a tree three-fourths of a mile southwest of Monmouth, one having confessed, the other having denied being an accomplice.

NEUTRAL LAND TROUBLES.

As supplementary to what appears in connection with the sketch of Cherokee County, a few instances of violence on the part of the settlers in opposition to the building of the Missouri River, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad, and to "proving up" under the "Joy contract," are here introduced.

The survey of the road was made in the early part of 1869. A portion of the settlers were in favor of the road being built, and in favor of purchasing their claims from Mr. Joy; others were opposed to both. The questions were debated with earnestness and on some occasions with a great deal of acrimony. Meetings were held on either side, at which resolutions expressing the sentiments of the participants were passed and promulgated. A meeting of those favorable to the road was held at Girard, April 24, 1869, which was addressed by A. A. Fletcher, C. H. Winsor, C. Dana Sayrs and D. S. McIntosh, in favor of the road. E. E. Parker responded in opposition to it. After the speaking was concluded, a series of resolutions was adopted, one of which was as follows:

"That the enterprise (the building of the railroad) meets with our entire approbation, and that we will in all suitable ways aid and encourage said company in the speedy construction and completion of the same."

Another resolution was to the effect that the building of the road could not in any way affect the title to the lands.

This reasonable proposition was not satisfactory to the minds of some of the settlers, and the fact that a large and respectable portion of all within the county entertained the views and sentiments expressed in the above-quoted resolutions, had little or no weight with those who were opposed to Mr. Joy. They were firmly set in their opinion that he had no title to the land, and were fully determined that he should build no railroad on their property. In order to make their will effective, they had to resort to violence. On the 30th of April, six days after the above and similar resolutions were adopted, a shameful and criminal outrage was committed by a body of misguided settlers upon the engineers of the railroad who were locating the road. The engineers were taken prisoners, and their wagons, tents and instruments destroyed by fire. The engineers were ordered never to come upon the line again under penalty of hanging, and then released. One thousand railroad ties were burned on Cow Creek about the same time. In addition to this, railroad employes were driven from their work, and Anti-League settlers were driven from their homes under penalty of hanging if they should return. The animus of, at least, the leading Leaguers may be plainly seen by reading the resolutions of the Lincoln League, given in connection with Cherokee County, and their effrontery by reading the following resolution, which is one of a series passed at Cato, Crawford County, June 2, 1869, by members of the League: "That we assert to the world that civil law is unobstructed on the Neutral Lands, and that not one man has ever been hung or shot here on account of our land difficulties, or during the last two years for any cause."

But notwithstanding these and other instances of violence were committed, justice demands the recording of the fact that at the most but very few of the Leaguers were mobocrats The majority of them believed themselves in the right, and this because they had been misled as to the nature of the title of the Cherokee Indians to the Neutrals. They acted upon the advice of men who were knowingly holding out to them illusive hopes and inciting them to the commission of deeds which could but check their prosperity and bring disgrace upon their names. One of these advisors was W. R. Laughlin, whom the Anti-Joy or Settlers' Unions had employed to represent them in Washington, and who was pleased to prolong the contest in order that he might live as long as practicable a life of ease upon the contributions of the settlers, who earned their own livelihood by their daily toil. An extract from his address to the settlers, delivered June 4, 1869, will suffice to show the character of the advice he gave them:

"We may be called mobs and outlaws. The same cry was raised at the Boston Tea Party. * * * The same cry was raised against the Vigilance Committee of California, and to-day the people of that State bless them for what they did. Then look at the Rensselaer Anti-Renters. They shot a Sheriff dead in violation of law and nothing was ever done with them, because they defended their rights. 'If this be treason, make the most of it.' I have asked Judge Lawrence what the people should do if Joy forced himself upon them with his railroad. He replied, 'I can not advise shooting or killing, but if a man wanted to force himself into my house, I'd kick him out.' Ben Butler said, 'If they come to disturb you, damn them, hang them.' Senator Sprague said to Gen. Cameron, 'Tell them to fight.' 'Tis vain to call you a mob when two-thirds of you have your discharges as good and faithful soldiers in your pockets. We must fight them legally if we can, forcibly if we must. They may try to stigmatize us, but they cannot stigmatize a United States soldier. * *"

But Mr. Laughlin was not alone in giving advice of this kind. Hon. Sidney Clarke delivered an address at Iowa City, Crawford County, about July 8, 1869, from which the following is a well-authenticated extract: "I do not advise violence to be used to prevent the construction of the Missouri River, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad through the lands occupied by the settlers; but I do advise you to stand firm and united to a man, and no road ever can be built without your consent. Why? Because if a weary traveler should come along, and wishing to rest, sit down upon a pile of railroad ties, and, while smoking his pipe, a spark should happen to fall and burn up the ties, could any one blame you for it, and say that you were using violence to prevent the construction of the road? I reckon not. Or suppose the prairie grass should, by some such accident, take fire and burn up the wagons, tents and instruments of the engineers, could that be charged to you? I think not. Now, who ever heard of railroad cars running through a country without rails or ties? I never did. Yet I don't advise force to prevent this most damnable railroad swindle, but I know that these accidents do and will happen in the best regulated communities. Now, gentlemen, if any such thing should happen to this swindling road, you must all be in bed and asleep when it happens, or as soon after as possible."

The meaning of this harangue was patent to the assembly, as was soon afterward demonstrated. The speaker was scarcely off the neutral lands when, in the night a large party of men went to the Assessor's house in Osage Township, called him out, put him under guard, went into his house, took the abstract of lands owned by the railroad company, and carried them away in order to prevent the assessment of the lands. A similar attempt was made in Baker Township, but the abstract could not be found. On the 17th of July, a large armed force attacked the workmen on the railroad in Bourbon County, near the north line of Crawford County, and burned all the wheelbarrows, shovels, picks, tents, shanties, everything that belonged to the workmen and contractors. At this time, the troops were at Crawfordsville, twelve miles away, and could render no assistance to the workmen who were unarmed and could themselves offer no resistance. But the most fiery speech of all was made by a Methodist minister—Vincent by name. He was, he said, determined to "fight Joy until hell froze over, and then fight it out on the ice."

The presence of troops on the neutral lands was extremely annoying to the Leaguers. In consequence, a select committee was appointed under resolutions of the Legislature for the purpose of investigating the question of the necessity of their presence. In February, 1870, this committee took testimony at Fort Scott, Girard, Columbus and Baxter Springs. After concluding their labors, a report was made to the Legislature, which was signed by Col. John T. Burris, of Johnson County, Hon. J. K. Wright, of Davis County, and Hon. E. H. LeDuc, from which the following is an extract: "We find from the evidence that as early as February, 1869, an organization existed on those lands known as 'The Land League;' that such an organization still exists there, and that its name now is, 'The Neutral Land Home Protecting Corps;' that it was and still is a secret quasi military organization numbering about 1,500 men, commanded by a general and drilled into regiments, battalions and companies commanded by colonels, lieutenant colonels, majors, captains, and other officers with military designations; that one of the objects of said organization was to prevent the building of the Missouri River, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad through the neutral lands until James F. Joy should relinquish his right to claim these lands; that in accordance with the settled purpose of the League, about 200 of their number being fully armed, marched upon Baxter Springs to break up the railroad land office at that place, and did by threats and intimidation compel its removal therefrom; that during the spring and early summer of 1869, members of "the League" forcibly burned about 26,000 railroad ties in Cherokee County on those lands; also that they arrested Col. J. A. J. Chapman and Capt. John Runk, Jr., engineers on the road, together with their party of assistants and laborers, and after burning the wagons, tents, surveying instruments, blankets, commissary stores, etc., drove the subordinates of the surveying party from the lands with orders never to return in the employment of the railroad company under penalty of death, and that they then marched Col. Chapman and Capt. Runk several miles south, stripped off the coats from their prisoners, blindfolded them, administered to each of them fifteen lashes, and then ordered them to leave, never to return, and to never mention what had occurred under penalty of death; also, that they forcibly drove from the line of the railroad laborers, agents and other employes, and from the neutral lands many persons because of their opposition to the League and their friendship for the railroad company."

The opposition of the settlers to the building of this railroad was a strange anomaly. While others before and since have been so anxious to obtain railroad facilities that they have in some instances bonded themselves almost to bankruptcy, part of the citizens of Crawford and Cherokee Counties were for months attempting to prevent a railroad from being forced upon them, and it was necessary, in order that the road might be built, that the workmen should be guarded by soldiers. The people of these two counties who caused the troubles could not then realize that progress is irresistible. But gradually the opposition ceased. During the closing months of 1869, a more peaceful condition of society obtained, and so numerous became the applications for contracts for the lands that the whole clerical force in the office of Gen. Clark, commissioner for Mr. Joy, was constantly employed in preparing the necessary papers. Yet when a test of strength was made early in November between the Leaguers and anti-Leaguers, the former out-voted the latter nearly two to one, Langdon, the League candidate for Representative, receiving 546 votes, while all the opposing candidates, three in number, received but 282. The majorities were about the same for all the League candidates for county offices, and, in November, 1870, eight months after the railroad was completed to Girard, at an election for State and county officers, the friends of the League were still largely in the majority in the county. For State Representative, Langdon, the League candidate, received 676 votes, while Mason, the Republican, received but 387, and Fletcher, the Democratic candidate, received but 210.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION.

The county was organized in 1867, and named after S. J. Crawford, who was then Governor of the State. J. W. Wallace, Lafayette Manlove and Henry Schoen were appointed special Commissioners, and F. M. Logan, County Clerk. Wallace was from Lincoln Township, Manlove from Sheridan, and Schoen from Sherman Township.

The first meeting of the Commissioners was held March 16, 1867, at the residence of William Campbell, adjoining Crawfordsville. After having taken the oath of office, and organized by electing J. W. Wallace Chairman, the board proceeded to the transaction of business. The first order acted upon was "That the county of Crawford be and is hereby laid off into nine representative townships." These townships were the same as now. The second order was one establishing election precincts, and the third was that dividing the county into three Commissioner's districts. The fourth directed the County Clerk to give thirty days' notice of a special election for county and township officers, and for the permanent location of the county seat. The election was held April 15, 1867, and resulted as follows: Commissioners, J. W. Wallace, Andrew Hussong and F. M. Mason; Clerk, F. M. Logan; Sheriff, J. M. Ryan. On the 7th of May, Logan, having failed to qualify as County Clerk, L. Manlove was appointed to fill the vacancy. On the same day, James Wamsley was appointed Probate Judge. On the 2d of September, a tax of 1.1 per cent was levied for county purposes, and four mills for schools. Crawfordsville was selected at the same time for temporary county seat, and Lafayette Manlove was appointed County Assessor.

An election was held November 5, 1867, for county officers, at which the following persons were elected by the number of votes attached to their respective names: Commissioners, F. Dosser, 202; I. Evans, 191; Joshua Nance, 166; Probate Judge, Levi Hatch, 148; Register of Deeds, H. Coffman, 155; County Clerk, H. Germain, 197; Treasurer, R. B. Raymond, 170; Surveyor, R. Stalker, 201; Assessor, William Roberts, 160; Attorney, L. A. Wallace, 131; Coroner, Jacob Miller, 215; Clerk of District Court, C. H. Strong, 160; Sheriff, J. M. Ryan, 218. The highest total vote cast for the candidates for any one office was 390. On the 6th of April, 1868, the County Surveyor elect having failed to qualify, J. T. Bridgens was appointed to fill the vacancy, and also to the office of County Clerk. The total vote, 390, indicated a population of about 1,900, and the taxable property in that year was $20,712.75.

At the first election held April 15, 1867, Rossville and Center contested for the honor of being the county seat. Center was situated on the northwest quarter of Section 24, Township 29, Range 23,—the same section on which now is located the larger part of Girard. Rossville was two miles northeast, on what was then known as the Silket farm. No meeting of the Commissioners appears to have been held at either place.

At the election of November 5, 1867, Girard was selected as the county seat, but as Crawfordsville had been by the Governor designated as the county seat, the Commissioners, at a meeting held by them on the 3d of February, 1868, at the house of Henry Germain, in Sheridan Township, adjourned to meet next day at the place designated by Gov. Crawford. At a meeting held here on the 11th of May, 1868, an order was made by the Board of Commissioners to the county officers, directing them to remove all their records, books and other papers to Girard, they, the Commissioners, deciding that to be the county seat. The removal was accordingly made. At the September term of the District Court, the citizens of Crawfordsville, through D. W. Crouse, applied to the court for a writ of mandamus on the County Clerk to compel him to remove the county records back to Crawfordsville, claiming that that place was the county seat legally. After hearing the testimony, the court sustained the writ, and directed the records to be removed to Crawfordsville. The order of the court was obeyed. At a meeting of the Commissioners, held November 7, 1868, a petition signed by 577 citizens was presented, asking that an election be ordered for the permanent location of the county seat. The request was granted, and an election held December 15, following, resulting in the casting of 375 votes for Girard, and 312 for Crawfordsville. Thus the question was finally settled in favor of Girard.

State Senators from this county, with date of election, are as follows: H. D. Moore, 1870; William Simpson, 1872; D. F. Davis, 1874; P. I. B. Ping, 1876; A. P. Riddle, 1880.

Crawford County has had the following State Representatives, date of election as given: Capt. John Hamilton, 1867; James Wamsley, 1868; S. J. Langdon, 1869 and 1870; S. D. Ashmore and S. J. Langdon, 1871; S. J. Langdon and A. J. Vickers, 1872; W. H. McGuire and A. B. Mitchell, 1873; W. H. Brown and W. H. Merriweather, 1874; W. H. Hoyt and E. M. Bellaine, 1875; W. H. Magil and E. A. Bellaine, 1876; James Hossack and E. W. Majors, 1878; W. B. Cochran and J. H. Millington, 1880: E. V. Hibbard, 1882.

RAILROADS AND SCHOOLS.

The Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad runs through the county from north to south. On this road are four stations, Farlington, Girard, Beulah and Cherokee.

The Missouri Pacific Railroad runs southwest through the northwest part of the county, having on it two stations, Hepler and Walnut.

The Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad Company have a railroad entering the county near the northeast corner, extending south through Arcadia, Coalvale and Mulberry Grove to Litchfield; here it turns southwest, and runs through New Pittsburg to Cherokee, where it turns west and runs through Monmouth and McCune to Parsons, and on to Cherryvale. There is also a branch from Cherokee southeast to Weir.

The St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad runs from Girard southeast through New Pittsburg and Opolis to Joplin, Mo.

The N. T. I & M. R. R. runs northwestward from Girard through Brazilton and Walnut, into Neosho County. The construction of this road was begun in June, 1882, and reached Walnut August 16, 1882. It is the expectation of the company to complete the road to Topeka during the year 1883, and southeast to Memphis in the near future. The officers of the road are S. G. Clark, of Chicago, President; H. M. Clark, Vice President and General Manager; George A. Bowlus, Secretary and Treasurer; Caleb H. Malin, General Superintendent; J. H. Richards, Attorney, and Frank A. Hill, Chief Engineer.

The first schoolhouse built in the county was at Pleasant Ridge, about two miles southeast of the present site of New Pittsburg. The first after the war was in District No. 50, known as the Taylor Schoolhouse, in 1867; the second was at Iowa City the same fall. A schoolhouse was built in 1868, in District No. 52. The settlers hauled the logs, and the shingles and windows were brought from Kansas City.

Probably the first school taught in the county was in Lincoln Township in 1858, in a small log house, formerly occupied as a dwelling. In 1867, Miss Florence taught a school in a private residence in Osage Township, and the same year J. W. McWirt, John Hamilton and others taught schools in Sheridan Township.

The number of school districts in the county is 111 and the number of schoolhouses 111, 1 stone, 3 brick and 107 frame. The total number of scholars enumerated in 1882 was 7,114—males, 3,648, females, 3,466; total number enrolled, 5,546—males, 2,889 females, 2,657; average daily attendance, 2,999—males, 1,510, females, 1,489. The number of teachers employed was 126—males, 62, females 64. The average monthly salary of the male teachers was $34.45, of the female teachers $27.35. The total value of the school property was $75,000.

Girard had a population of 1,842; Pittsburg, 1,755 and Cherokee, 704.

TORNADO.

Quite a number of tornadoes have occurred in Crawford County since its settlement, but the most terrific one was that of May 22, 1873. It came from the southwest, across the southeast corner of Neosho County, and crossed Crawford County in a northeasterly direction. The following named persons were killed: Mrs. Hezekiah Smith, Uriah Spurgeon, a baby of Mr. Roseberry's, one of G. W. Surgeon's, Frankie Dumbauld, a child of Mrs. Hooper's, and Ellen Hammond. Thirty-four were more or less severely wounded, some of them fatally, and a great deal of property destroyed, the loss being $4,457.

A recital of some of the freaks of the storm will convey some idea of the force of the wind. A boy, son of Mr. Black, was carried over a peach orchard and reached the ground uninjured. John Spurgeon, a lad about eight years old, was carried about 100 yards and had a thigh broken in two places. A baby was carried 300 yards and afterward found in a cornfield. Two horses were in a log stable hitched to one of the logs; the stable was blown down, and the horses, with the log to which they were tied, were blown through the air one-fourth of a mile without injury, and when found were still hitched to the log. Fifteen houses were entirely demolished. So great was the devastation worked that the County Commissioners gave assistance to the following parties in the following sums: Mrs. Hooper, $625; William Blaylock, $100; John Frogge, $200; B. R. Addis, $100; Theodore Metcalf, $50; W. T. Gunn, $50, and F. H. Dumbald, $100.

GIRARD.

This city, the county seat of Crawford County, is located on a gently undulating prairie at the center of the county. It is regularly laid out, has a public square in the center, surrounded by numerous fine business buildings, many of them of brick, and has a large proportion of neat frame residences, surrounded by incipient shade trees. Its elevation is 988 feet above the sea.

The town was started in the spring of 1868, in opposition to Crawfordville. The Girard Town Company was first composed of the following gentlemen: A. Danford, President; C. H. Strong, Secretary; Dr. Couch, Dr. B. F. Hepler, E. J. Boering, Levi Hatch, John Lash, D. S. McIntosh and Col. J. Alexander. This company was formed upon the survey of the railroad through this portion of the county and the town located upon the line. It was named by C. H. Strong, after the town Girard, in Pennsylvania, which had previously been his home.

The first buildings erected in Girard were by the following parties, in the order given: Col. J. Alexander, a general store; C. H. Strong, a dwelling house; Chauncey Doyle, a saloon; N. Sinnet, a general store. Some time during this year (1868) the first blacksmith shop was opened in the town; the first frame house was built by A. A. Fletcher, and the first hotel was opened early in the year. In December, James Hull erected the first part of a building which was used temporarily as a court house. The first birth in Girard was that of Mary Fletcher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Fletcher; the first marriage, that of A. J. Vickers to Miss Margaret McIntosh, and the first death that of Mrs. Dr. L. F. Crawford in the spring of 1869. Immediately after the death of this lady, Judge McIntosh located the cemetery southwest of the town.

The first celebration in Girard occurred on July 4, 1868. It was a Sunday school celebration and a celebration of the Nation's natal day, both in one. The Hon. A. Danford and Dr. Couch were the orators of the day. When these festivities took place the town had made considerable progress. There were three stores, a saloon and about six dwelling houses within its limits. Still its growth, until the fall of 1869, was much slower than would have been the case had it not been for the difficulties over the building of the railroad. When these were settled, when it became known that the railroad would come despite all opposition, opposition in a measure ceased, and the development of the county and its towns made more rapid strides. In February, 1870, Girard had five hotels, eight saloons, six grocery stores, five dry goods stores, two hardware stores, two furniture stores, one drug store, one newspaper and job printing office, other businesses in proportion, and seventy-two dwelling houses, a total of 140 buildings. On the 10th of this month the location of the depot of the M. R., F. S. & G. R. R. was determined upon, in the north part of the town, by Mr. Chanute, and, on the 12th, a meeting was held to prepare to appropriately celebrate the advent of the iron horse whenever that advent should take place. It was universally realized by the citizens that that event, which no one could prevent, as had been proved, was one of great significance, and the preparations made were commensurate with its importance. The celebration came off on the 3d of March, the day on which the first passenger train reached the town. This train brought down 200 of the leading citizens and dignitaries of Fort Scott, who united with the citizens of Girard in a jollification, the equal of which, in heartiness and enthusiasm, is seldom witnessed, for the former were as much interested as the latter in the success of the enterprise of building the railroad through the neutral lands. The telegraph wire was put up to Girard on the 22d of March. During this spring a schoolhouse was built by Frank Playter, Trustee, and W. H. Warner, Secretary of the School Board, and several church organizations were effected. The town had been incorporated and a Board of Trustees appointed by the Probate Judge on the 10th of the preceding November; but so long as Girard remained the terminus of the railroad the disorderly classes were numerous and large, and all the influences that could be brought to bear by the civil authorities, by the churches and by the moral elements of society, were much more than counterbalanced by the seventeen saloons that for some time were in full and constant blast. The necessity for some special effort in the direction of temperance was clearly perceptible, and in the winter of 1871–72, a lodge of the I. O. G. T. was organized, which did what could be done to prevent the granting of licenses. But the first Board of Trustees, having been appointed by the Probate Judge, did not feel that their authority was derived from the people, neither did they feel sure that the people would sustain them in vigorous measures to suppress salooning, and, as a consequence, matters were permitted to take their own course until the railroad had been built south and until a Board of Trustees had been elected by the people. Then an impression began gradually to be made. But it was not until after the Murphy movement commenced, in 1878, that satisfactory results were achieved. In that year a blue ribbon lodge was organized, of which C. Dana Sayrs was President, E. W. Majors, Secretary, and Miss Jennetta McMurray Treasurer. This organization vigorously prosecuted the temperance work until the prohibition amendment to the constitution was adopted by the people, since which time there has been no open saloon in Girard, and peace and prosperity have prevailed. In Girard Precinct the majority for the amendment was 248, while in the county it was only 186.

Ths first Board of Trustees, appointed November 10, 1869, was as follows: L. F. Crawford, N. Sinnet, D. W. Burnet, W. E. Blandon and James Hull. On the 10th of April, 1870, an election was held for a new board, resulting in the selection of the following gentlemen: A. J. Vickers, George Eyestone, Harvey Brown, William Reynolds and A. B. Turner.

Under a law passed in March, 1871, Girard became a city of the third class, and in the early part of April elected her first city officers. The last meeting of the trustees was held April 5, and the first meeting of the new Council was held on the 7th. The result of the election was that George Ryan had been chosen Mayor, and A. J. Vickers, J. E. Raymond, E. Fanger, H. P. Grund and F. B. Andrus, Councilmen. At the first meeting of the Council, A. M. Cook was elected Clerk. Since that time the following gentlemen have been elected Mayor of Girard: George Ryan, 1872; J. E. Raymond, 1873; Thomas Ping, 1874; James McMurray, 1875; J. Riffer, 1876 and 1877; M. Robinson, 1878; J. D. Barker, 1879 and 1880; Joseph Ennis, 1881; John Tontz, 1882.

The post office was established in Girard early in 1868, C. H. Strong being appointed first Postmaster. He was succeeded by N. Sinnet, who, on account of his opinions on the neutral land controversy, was opposed by the "settlers," and was removed and succeeded by F. Danford, in 1870. George Ryan was appointed in September, 1870, H. E. Perkins in July, 1873, C. G. Hawley in 1875, and Eli Wasser was appointed in 1883.

The first meeting of the School Board of the Girard, District No. 37, was held August 7, 1869. D. S. McIntosh was Director; F. Playter, Clerk; and L. F. Crawford, Treasurer. In response to a petition of the citizens, an election was appointed for November 26, 1869, for the purpose of voting on the issuance of $1,000 in bonds for the building of a schoolhouse. The vote was unanimous in their favor, and the contract for building the schoolhouse was let to Gardner & Bowman for $640. Miss Maggie T. Hill taught the first school in the new building in the summer of 1870, for $40 per month. In the spring of 1872, at an election held for that purpose, $15,000 in bonds were voted for the building of a new schoolhouse. This building was commenced in the fall of 1872, and completed in the spring of 1873. The main part of it is 58x44 feet in dimensions, and three stories high, including the basement, which is of stone—the two upper stories being of brick. The total cost of the building was $13,300. The Principals of the school have been Prof. A. F. Allen, commencing April, 1873; Prof. H. Quick, 1877, and the present Principal, John Randolph commencing in July, 1881. A high school was established in the fall of 1882.

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

The Methodist Church was organized in 1869, Rev. Robert Stalker preaching the first sermon, in that year, in the upper story of a house owned by A. A. Fletcher on the north side of the public square. This was probably the first sermon preached in Girard Rev. Thomas B. Palmer preached in the schoolhouse April 16, 1870. The following have been the pastors of the church: Rev. J. A. Kershner, 1871; J. E. H. Day, 1872; Thomas Moffett, a short time; W. McWhirt, 1873; Noah Asher, 1874 and 1875; James Murray, 1876; T. Weed, 1877; C. C. McCabe, 1878; H. A. Tucker, 1879; C. C. Boaz, 1880, and C. C. Durborow, 1881, 1882 and 1883. During Mr. Durborow's ministry Girard became a station.

Up to 1873 the society occupied the Presbyterian Church, but in that year Rev. Mr. McWhirt bought the schoolhouse which was built by the Girard district in 1870, becoming himself individually responsible for the purchase in order to be no longer without a church. The society purchased, in 1877, two lots at the corner of Summit avenue and Buffalo street, paying therefor $450. In the same year they commenced the erection of a church building, a frame structure 40x60 feet, and costing $2,900. A neat parsonage has also been provided, and the value of the church property—two lots, church building and parsonage—is $4,000. The membership is at present 140. There is also an excellent Sunday school connected with the church, having an enrollment of 160 scholars. S. R. Tuttle is Superintendent.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in 1869. At a meeting of the trustees held December 18, a building committee was appointed. A festival was given January 27, 1870, in aid of the building fund, at which $218.30 was realized. February 12, a meeting was held for the purpose of determining upon a plan of construction for the new church. Its erection was commenced in August by William Adamson. An entertainment was given in it December 15, 1870, before it was plastered. A second festival was held March 23, 1871, also in aid of the building fund, at which was realized $452.70. The church was dedicated June 18, 1871, having cost $3,500.

The first regular minister was Rev. S. F. McClure. He has been succeeded by Rev. Messrs. Schafer, 1874 to 1876; Warren Mayo, 1876 to 1880; Dr. Bement about three months in 1880; and the present pastor, Rev. Mr. McKinney, who began his ministry in April, 1881.

St. John's (Episcopal) Church was organized March 19, 1870, on which day a meeting was held for the purpose. A parish was organized under the name of St. John's Church, according to the canons and constitution of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States and the diocese of Kansas. Dr. William H. Warner was elected Senior Warden and Mark Elliott, Junior Warden. Col. C. J. Hawley, C. Dana Sayers, J. S. McKinley, M. A. Wood, George A. Richey and Percy Daniels were elected Vestrymen. At that meeting a statement was made that the total value of the church property was $200. The first sermon was preached April 14, 1870, by Rev. A. Beattie, in the schoolhouse. Services were held in the Presbyterian Church for a few months until a building standing at one of the corners of Summit avenue and Buffalo street was purchased of C. G. Hawley for church purposes. On the 5th of June, 1874, the society transmitted thanks to Mrs. Julia E. Brewer, of Sewick, Penn., for a donation of $100. Two lots at the corner of the same two streets where the building purchased stood, were bought for $500. Rev. D. W. Coxe succeeded Rev. Beattie and preached on the third Sunday of each month, until the coming of Rev. George P. Coming, of Hannibal, Mo., August 18, 1879, who still remains with the church.

The first meeting of the Sunday school was held March 27, 1870. The first Superintendent was Mrs. Patterson, who was assisted and succeeded by Dr. W. H. Warner, who served the Sunday school in that capacity eight years. To no man is this church and Sunday school more indebted than to Dr. Warner. He was succeeded by C. Dana Sayers, the present Superintendent.

The Baptist Church was organized December 16, 1871, with eight members, by the members themselves. The first preaching before the society was on February 10, 1872, by Bro. J. M. Lappin. Bro. C. A. Hewitt succeeded and remained until March, 1875. Brother John Smith served as pastor from July 11, 1875, to November 13. He was followed by Bro. J. M. Garrison, who remained until August, 1877. Willis S. Webb, the present minister, began his labors in May, 1878, on one-fourth time. This arrangement continued until December 3, 1882, when it was changed to one-half time. Rev. Eugenio Kincaid, who had been a missionary in India thirty years, joined this church November 11, 1876.

The church building was begun in 1873 and completed in 1876, at which time the church had thirty-nine members. The present membership is eighty-one.

The Christian Church was organized in 1870 with twenty-five members. Services were held in the schoolhouse until 1871. Subsequently a very neat church building was erected costing $2,800, which was dedicated February 10, 1882. The present membership of the church is 106, and of the Sunday school, 140. The present minister, Rev. Christian Poole, is also Superintendent of the Sunday school.

There is also a Catholic Church and two colored churches, one Baptist, the other Methodist.

Girard Lodge, No. 55, I. O. O. F., was instituted May 6, 1870, by D. D. G. M. W. A. Shannon, assisted by several Odd Fellows from Fort Scott. There were five charter members. S. A. Atwood was chosen N. G.; E. A. Wood, V. N. G.; E. A. Wasser, Recording Secretary, and N. Sinnett, Treasurer.

Girard Garden Grange No. 99, was instituted March 3, 1875. The first officers were: A. A. Hulett, M.; J. F. Leonard, Treasurer; Morris Franklin, M. E. R.; C. M. Mauker, Secretary.

The Olive Encampment, No. 25, was instituted January 28, 1875, by M. E. G. H. P. Luke, M. Havens, of Fort Scott, assisted by a number of others. There were eight charter members. The first officers were, N. Sinnett, Chief Patriarch; J. E. Raymond, Senior Warden; E. R. Ridgley, Junior Warden; A. P. Riddle, Scribe; E. A. Wasser, Treasurer; W. B. Crawford, High Priest; J. G. Eastwood, Guide.

Girard Lodge, No. 93, A., F. & A. M., was organized under dispensation, May 17, 1870, by D. G. M. J. D. Rush, of Rising Sun Lodge. The first officers were A. B. Turner, W. M.; H. W. Brown, S. W.; Thomas Palnton, J. W.; Percy Daniels, Treasurer, and S. A. Atwood, Secretary. The first election under charter was held November 21, and the same officers re-elected with the exception that James H. Amt was elected Treasurer.

Hiram Chapter, No. 50, R. A. M., was organized under a dispensation May 10, 1875, by Rev. D. W. Cope, D. G. H. P., of Fort Scott. Those first elected officers were: J. H. Waterman, High Priest; A. B. Turner, King; C. H. Merriam, Scribe; A. A. Hulett, Captain of the Host; W. M. Smith, Principal Sojourner; H. Brown, Royal Arch Captain.

There were nine charter members. The first officers were: J. B. Garrison, W. C. T.; Mrs. M. C. West, W. V. T.; C. D. Sayrs, W. Secretary; C. F. Squires, W. F. Secretary; J. W. Stumph, W. Treasurer; W. H. Warner, W. C.

BANKS AND THE PRESS.

Frank Playter started the first bank in Girard in June, 1871. In 1872, he erected for the accommodation of his business a two-story brick building, the first brick building in the town. This bank was closed in July, 1877, and in August re-organized and started again on a new basis as the Merchants' and Farmers' Bank, with Frank Playter as President. Mr. Playter retired from the bank in January, 1878, and, in June, 1879, this bank was succeeded by the Bank of Girard, established by E. R. Moffit. The Bank of Girard was succeeded in 1882 by the Girard Bank, a private institution of which Chapman & Adams are the proprietors. It is in the Playter Building.

Citizens' Bank.—J. H. Booth started a bank in May, 1878, and, on February 6, 1882, was succeeded by the Citizens' Bank. This is a private institution, and does a general banking business. The company is composed of four members—J. D. Barker, President; J. T. Leonard, Cashier; H. P. Grund, Vice President, and E. H. Brown.

The first newspaper published in Girard was the Crawford County Times, April 16, 1869, by Scott & Cole. Only one number was issued, as the object of its issue was accomplished viz.: the bringing of the Osage Mission people to time.

The Girard Press was moved by Warner & Wasser from Fort Scott to Girard in November, 1869, the first issue appearing at the latter place on the 11th of the month. The paper took strong ground in favor of the validity of Mr. Joy's title to the neutral lands, and on this account its office and material were set fire to on July 14, 1871, and destroyed. The loss was $4,000. New material was obtained, and the paper, enlarged and improved, re-appeared August 13, and has since been published as a nine-column folio weekly. When Horace Greeley became a candidate for the Presidency, Dr. Warner, the senior editor, supported his candidacy much to the disappointment of the then junior, present senior editor, E. A. Wasser. In consequence of this disagreement of the two proprietors in regard to politics, Dr. Warner sold his interest June 16, 1873, to A. P. Riddle, since which time the Press has been published as a stanch and able Republican paper by Wasser & Riddle.

The Girard Herald was started July 26, 1878, with J. W. Womack as editor. It is an eight-column folio weekly paper, and is Democratic in politics.

The People's Vindicator was started July 28, 1870, by P. R. Crisp and Charles B. Lindsey, and discontinued in November.

The Girard Pharos was started March 12, 1873, by W. K. Goode. It was sold by the mortagee in 1874 to J. F. McDowell, and by him moved to Columbus.

The Crawford County News was started August 6, 1875, by T. P. Fulton and C. C. Covell. After passing through numerous hands, it was finally suspended November 21, 1878.

The Girard News was started December 13, 1878, by J. K. Black and W. F. Laughlin.

Summary.—Girard at present contains six general stores, three hardware stores, four drug stores, three grocery and boot and shoe stores, three dealers in agricultural implements, one exclusive boot and shoe store, two exclusive groceries, three hotels, three livery stables, one machine shop and foundry and a population of 2,000 inhabitants.

MANUFACTORIES, ETC.

There are no manufactories in Girard, except one machine-shop and foundry and three flour mills—the Girard Mills, the Crawford County Mills and the Custom Mills.

The Girard Mills were built in 1870, and began operations in the spring of 1871. The first building was a two and a half story frame, costing, with the machinery and power, $10,000. The property was owned by Tontz & Hitz. In 1879, Tontz retired from active participation in the management of the business, and in 1882 sold his interest to Hitz. Mr. Hitz thereupon erected a three and a half story brick mill, put in five run of buhrs, and two sets of Gray's patent rollers, thus making it a combined mill, which experience has demonstrated to be best adapted to grinding Kansas wheat. The machinery is propelled by a fifty horse-power engine, and has a capacity of 100 barrels of flour per day. The old building has been converted into an elevator, with a capacity of 6,000 bushels. The entire property is worth $25,000, and is owned by Mr. C. Hitz.

The Crawford County Mills were built in 1870 by a stock company. In 1875, they were sold to Frank Playter, and in 1876 to B. C. Redlow, who, in 1879, sold them to C. D. Patterson. These mills are two and a half stories high, contain three run of buhrs and one set of rollers, thus being also a combined mill, and the machinery is propelled by a twenty-five horse-power engine. The entire property is worth $10,000.

The Custom Mills are located west of the northwest corner of the public square, confine themselves principally to grinding grists, and are worth about $5,000.

The Water Works.—One of the most important institutions in Girard, in a material sense, is the Water Works, a brief history and description of which is subjoined:

In the year 1874, it was proposed that a subscription of $15 to $20 each be taken up from several citizens, with the view of prospecting for coal within the limits of the town. A Mr. Calkins was employed to drill down into the earth. After having drilled to a depth of 220 feet, he claimed to have found a vein of coal, but on account of a difference between him and the company that engaged him, about the amount of pay he should receive for his labor, he refused to reveal what strata his drill had penetrated, and the work was given up.

The subject was frequently discussed, and in 1881, the season being very dry, it was realized by everybody, that it was of the utmost importance that the city be supplied with water. In July, a fire-engine was purchased, and soon afterward a petition, signed by many of the leading citizens, was presented to the Council, asking that a special election on the proposition of issuing $3,000 in bonds for the purpose of drilling a well. The election, held September 5, resulted in the casting of 115 votes for the bonds to 34 against them. In pursuance of this vote an ordinance was passed authorizing the issuance and sale of the bonds.

On the 14th of October the Council made a contract with C. B. Swan to drill a five-inch hole, and put in five-inch cast iron casing. If coal were found before reaching the depth of 600 feet, the drilling was to cease, but payment was to be made for the full 600 feet. A record was to be kept of the number and kinds of strata penetrated, and a report made to the Council as often as required. In accordance with his agreement, Mr. Swan drilled to the depth of 857 feet four inches, when the work was ordered to cease by the Council. At that depth water was found, which rose in the well to within 160 feet of the surface of the ground. A pump was fixed in the well, a fifteen horse-power engine attached, and kept steadily at work up to its full capacity for forty-eight hours, and still the water remained at the same height in the well as at the beginning. From this fact, and from the further fact that when the ear is placed to the top of the tubing which reaches to the bottom of the well, a noise as of running water is heard, it is inferred that the bottom of the well is in a wide and rapidly flowing river. The fact that the water remained at the same height in the well through two full days of steady pumping, led the citizens to solicit the Council for an opportunity to vote bonds for waterworks. The election occurred June 20, 1882, and resulted in the casting of 115 votes for the bonds, $5,000 in amount, to 30 against them. The bonds were issued and sold, and a contract made with the United States Wind Engine and Power Company for a tank, wind-mill, pump and all necessary piping for the works. As a result of this contract a tower was erected and surmounted by a tank, a pump set up and a wind-mill erected, and the new machinery and apparatus, constituting a complete system of waterworks, went into operation November 15, 1882. The well and works are in the center of the public square. A six-inch water main extends from the tank to one side of, and then all round the public square, to which hydrants are attached, and there is a cistern capable of holding 1,500 barrels at the center of each side of the square.

The tower is two stories high, the lower story being used for an engine room, and the upper for the meetings of the fire company. The tank is twenty-four feet in diameter and eighteen feet in height. The wheel of the wind-mill is twenty-five feet in diameter, and is capable of making thirty-two revolutions per minute. The pump-barrel is three inches in diameter, and the stroke of the pump is two feet. The strata penetrated in drilling this well were as follows, according to Mr. Swan's report: Clay, 15 feet; limestone, 14; slate, 4; limestone, 18; soapstone, 104; limestone, 11; slate, 4; soapstone, 130; shale, 97; soapstone, 75; sandstone, 25; gray, white and black flint, 220; green shale, 60; sandy limestone, 20; magnesian limestone, 57.

DAVID L. GRACE, editor and proprietor of the only Democratic newspaper in Crawford County, Kan., is the son of David Grace, a noted iron manufacturer in East Tennessee, and grandson of Col. Grace from Kilkenny, Ireland, who was killed at the battle of King's Mountain, while fighting for the freedom of the colonies in the Revolution. He was born September 1, 1826, on the Virginia and Tennessee State line, and claims a large connection among the Dorans, Donnellys, Smiths, Lowrys and Keyes in that section of country. For the purpose of studying the Cherokee language, when a boy of ten years, he attended Potter's Mission in Alabama, and when the Indians were removed to their reservation, he acted as interpreter for the soldiers in charge of the rebellious Cherokees under the leadership of Ridge, John Ross being the leader of the peaceable Cherokees. He tells many an entertaining reminiscense of his life at the Mission, and his journey westward illustrative of that people in those, to them, trying times. Upon his return he was placed in the Seminary at Marysville, Blount Co., Tenn., in the theological department of which Rev. Henry Ward Beecher was a student, that reflected great credit upon it as an institution of learning. In 1846, he married Elizabeth, third daughter of Maj. John Ward, and in 1850, moved westward to Edgar County, Ill. Not satisfied with his choice of location, and with his eye still turned westward, he visited the lands now within the State of Kansas, but was deterred from establishing his home more on account of the troubles existing among contending parties than because of the then uninviting features of the millions of acres of grass-matted prairies that lay before him. He selected Jasper County, Mo., and two years afterward was appointed sub-agent for the Indians that were returned on the incompetent list, as persons incapable of properly transacting business for themselves in the organization of the Territory of Kansas. These Indians were scattered all along the Missouri and Kansas line, but the bulk of them were at Wyandotte on the Kaw River. Many and interesting scenes and situations are depicted by him when "i' th' vein," of the stirring times spent among this people. At one time when in command of a company guarding the United States train to Santa Fé, Capt. Grace relates in a graphic and highly sensational manner, an attack upon them by Kiowas and Comanches, at Pawnee Rock, who had become emboldened by their success in killing Mr. Mason in charge of a Government ranch at Pawnee Fork. Being of an observant disposition, he ably describes the country through which he passed, and dwells upon the evidences all along his route of the ancient inhabitants of the western part of this continent. His position as sub-agent continued under the Lincoln administration. But his Union sentiments becoming offensive to neighbors in McDonald County, Mo., led to a duel between himself and Maj. Russell, Assistant United States Marshal, near Pineville, Mo., in which his friend, Capt. John Carroll, Mayor of Eureka Springs. Ark., participated, and they came off with flying colors. Finally, in consequence of this prejudice against his Democratic Union bias, he found it safer to remove his family to Cape Girardeau, Mo. In 1875, D. L. Grace was appointed School Superintendent in Crawford County, Mo., to fill out the unexpired term of the deceased school officer. Having spent a greater portion of his life in the schoolroom in the management of seminaries and central schools, Prof. Grace made such beneficial use of his opportunity to do a good work for the public schools, that he was elected two successive terms. The wife of his youth being in the grave, his children grown and moved to the great and growing West, he in 1879, led to the altar, Miss Nellie, eldest daughter of Thomas H. Roberts, editor and proprietor of the Crawford Mirror, and shortly afterward resigned his commission in order to take his wife southward for her health. A short stay at Eureka Springs, Ark., restored Mrs. Grace to the best of health, and he then entered upon the publication of the Eureka Springs Daily Herald; a financial crisis in business circles of that marvelously built city, caused him to invest in a Democratic journal in Girard, Kan., where he expects to end his days. Mr. Grace has living four children, now in Oregon; Thomas, a farmer, and a widowed sister, near Oregon City; George, managing a stock ranch, and William, a druggist. As will be seen, although born in the eastern part of the South, the subject of our sketch is pre-eminently a western man, and his life identified with the growth of the West. To-day he is occupying a home won from the great American Desert, over which he had traveled twenty-eight years before, in search of a home.

In 1876, he was appointed City Clerk and Attorney of Girard, which incumbency he held until 1880, when he was elected to his present position, which he has reputably held for each consecutive term since, usually carrying his majority, as Democratic nominee in each instance, equal to the regular Republican majority of this county. He is and has been an active worker in the A., F. & A. M. society, for many years. In 1860, by dispensation, and when on a visit to his native town, he was initiated in the first three degrees of masonry, in Washington, Alexandria Lodge, No. 22, D. C., the same lodge of which President Washington was a member and its first master. In 1872 he received his demit from this lodge and became a member of Girard Lodge, No. 93, A., F. & A. DR. D. W. SCOTT was born at Locust Grove, Brooke Co., West Va. Locust Grove was a charming place of residence, embowered in shade and fruit trees, and for more than a quarter of a century was the scene of attraction and interest to a wide and influential circle of friends. Robert Scott, father of D. W. Scott, built the mansion in 1825. He was for years recognized as a leader in all moral, educational and religious enterprises. He was an extensive stock raiser, and his large farm was a model of order and skill. Seven sons and as many daughters cherish recollections of this place as their happy childhood home. All of these children but one received an academic education, after graduating at the old schoolhouse "down the lane." D. W. Scott was educated at Allegheny College and the Wesleyan University. In 1856, he removed to Iowa, purchased a farm adjoining Mount Pleasant, and engaged in mercantile pursuits in that city. He was a sufferer in the disastrous financial crisis of 1857, and hence decided to lead a professional life. After attending a course of lectures at Lind University, Chicago, he began the practice of medicine at Shawnee, then the county seat of Johnson County, Kan. Here, for three years, he enjoyed a large and lucrative practice, but, upon again entering commercial life, he suffered another reverse. During the perilous times of early days, he became widely known as a fearless Free-State man. His home and storehouse were burned down by the notorious Quantrill, and his life was threatened more than once. For his alleged proceedings against his Pro-slavery neighbors, he was one of the "spotted men," and the rope was even purchased for his execution. When the war broke out and the waves of loyalty and disloyalty met along the border, it became more perilous than ever, and many of the people were obliged to flee from their homes for safety. The Doctor's health not being sufficient to endure army life, he returned to Mount Pleasant, Iowa. Here he successfully followed the practice of his profession, and was placed in charge of the camp hospital of the Twenty-fifth Iowa Regiment. Of the large number of soldiers treated by him, all recovered, and were either sent to their homes, or were forwarded to their respective regiments in the field. In the winter of 1862, Dr. Scott removed to Eddyville, Iowa, and engaged in the drug business. Unremitting attention to business for two years and a half made another change necessary, and in the spring of 1864, he sold out and made the overland trip to Denver. He returned to Iowa in the fall greatly improved in health. Within sixty days from his return, himself and family, with an outfit of two teams, and wagons well stocked with provisions, reached Colorado, with the view of making that their future home. While living in Iowa, he had been licensed to preach by the Methodist Episcopal Church, and had been ordained by Bishop Ames. On going to Colorado it was his purpose to enter the ministry, and did acceptably supply the pulpit at Golden City one year. Besides this he built up two other prosperous societies, but as there were only a few opportunities within the entire Conference to earn a living for his family, he removed to the city of Cheyenne. This city was one of the wonders of its day in its magical enterprise and growth. Thousands of people came rushing together from all parts of the world, and in the brief space of one year, Cheyenne was built up and had assumed the spectacle of a busy mart, with every trade, institution and facility of a first-class city. The Doctor was now in his element. He immediately opened an office in Beckwith's pioneer store, and erected a store room in the heart of the city. He wrote editorials for the Tri-Weekly Leader, and, after organizing the First Methodist Episcopal Church, supplied it with hymn-books, and with one of Smith's first-class American organs. He was afterward re-imbursed by the Society for these outlays, besides being publicly presented by the citizens of Cheyenne with a purse of $350. This is undoubtedly, to him, one of the most pleasant reminiscenses connected with the early history of that city, which is so full of tragic scenes of terror and wickedness. The schoolhouse furnished a chapel for the church of which he was pastor, and when it became too small to seat the congregation he was permitted to put in folding doors between adjoining rooms, thus acquiring ample room to accommodate both Sunday school and church. After about a year Bishop Simpson visited Cheyenne, and at the request of Dr. Scott, sent a minister from Wilmington, Del., to take charge of this important work. Upon his arrival this minister was delighted to find a well-organized society and a flourishing Sunday school already in existence. From Cheyenne Dr. Scott removed to Lincoln, Neb., where he resumed the practice of medicine and the drug business. Here he built and owned the Commercial Hotel, and numerous other buildings. For three years he was connected with the State Board of Building Commissioners. He was also President of the Board of Trustees for the State Insane Hospital, and was a short time Superintendent of the Hospital. He took an active interest in the cause of education, of temperance, morality and religion. He was President of the State Temperance Association, and published a campaign paper in its interest during his residence in Lincoln. Becoming embarrassed in 1875, through the failure of others, he reluctantly left the beautiful city of Lincoln and returned to Kansas, settling in Girard. Here for nearly eight years he industriously prosecuted the drug business, and also followed the practice of medicine, and has been frequently called to the advocacy, on the platform, of education, temperance and religion. He has recently been appointed a delegate to the National Medical Convention, which meets in Topeka in June, 1883, and is one of the Trustees of the new Medical College located at the same place. Dr. Scott was married in 1856, to Miss E. J. Martin. Mrs. Scott has always been an active co-laborer with her husband, especially in the temperance work. She is several years younger than her husband, who has just passed his fiftieth year. Of their eight living children, Miss May V., the eldest daughter, hold a position in the United States Treasury Department; Charles F., the eldest son, is in the employ of Meyer Bros. & Co., wholesale druggists; their second daughter is married to H. O. Sitter, of Bloomington, Neb., and the five younger children are attending school in Girard.

NEW PITTSBURG.

This city is situated in the southeastern part of Crawford County, thirty miles from Joplin, Mo., and twelve miles from Girard. In 1876, the firm of Moffett & Sargent built the Girard & Joplin Railroad, a short line connecting those two points. This road passed through the extensive coal fields in the southeastern part of Crawford County. The coal interests in this section had already been tested in a small way but as yet had no convenient outlet until the building of this line of road. The extent of the coal interests and the probability of its being the site of manufacturing enterprises were the chief reasons for the founding of the town. In the spring of 1876, Col. Ed H. Brown, working in the interest of Moffett & Sargent, established and laid out the site. Prior to this, however, this firm had purchased two tracts of coal land from the K. C., F. S. & G. Railroad Company. One of these tracts lay in the immediate vicinity of the town site, and the other a short distance from it, both tracts comprising an area of 25,000 acres.

The land upon which the site was located was originally the property of Jacob Pugh. It comprised one hundred and sixty acres, made up from adjacent forty-acre tracts in Sections 19, 20, 29 and 30, in Township 30, Range 25. At the time the site was laid out there was but one building upon it which belonged to Jacob Pugh, and stood where J. R. Lindburg's drug store now stands. It was moved away June 5, 1876. G. W. Seabury & Co. built the first business house in which they put a general stock of merchandise. It was a one-story frame house twenty feet square. J. T. Roach erected the first dwelling July 18, 1876. From the time the town was laid out until October of the same year, the population increased to about 100, and it contained three stores, two blacksmith and wagon-shops, a hotel and post office.

The Cherryvale Division of the K. C., F. S. & G. R. R. was constructed through the town in the fall of 1882. The Girard and Joplin Railroad was sold in the summer of 1880 to the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad Company for $300,000, and the land owned by Moffett & Sargent was sold to the Pittsburg Town Company for $50,000.

The Town Company was composed of C. M. Condon, President, and B. F. Hobart, who thus became owners of the town site. These parties also comprised the Oswego Coal Company, and were engaged in the development of the coal interests upon their land. Subsequently they sold about fifty-five per cent of the stock to the St. L. & S. F. R. R. Co. and a new coal company became organized under the name of the Rogers Coal Company.

The capital stock of the company is $200,000. The operations at this place is that of two shafts, and the production is about fifty cars of coal per day, employing a force of four hundred men. The sale of the coal is confined mainly to points along the St. L. & S. F. R. R. in Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas.

The business of the town company is in the hands of Maj. J. J. Rochusen as agent. Additions of forty acre tracts have recently been added to the site, one on the north and one on the east side. Another addition of forty acres is soon to be made, which is to contain a park. The company have a large number of lots on sale at prices ranging according to the quality and location. Business lots of 170 feet depth are held at from $8 to $24 front foot; residence lots vary in price according to size and location from $100 to $225 per lot.

The Pittsburg Coal Company are engaged in the mining of coal. The entire shipment of coal from this point is from seventy-five to 100 cars per day.

The manufacture of zinc is also an important industry in the place. There are already three large zinc smelters in operation and another extensive one is in process of construction. The zinc ore which is smelted in these works is shipped from mines in Missouri, since it is cheaper to ship the ore to this point where coal is abundant than to ship the coal to points where the zinc ore is mined, as it takes about three tons of coal to smelt one ton of zinc. Both the coal mines and the zinc smelters give employment to a large force of men and are the chief support and incentive to the building up of the city.

Pittsburg was incorporated as a city of the third class in the fall of 1879. M. M. Snow was elected first Mayor. He was re-elected and was succeeded in office by H. C. Willard.

The first City Council was composed of the following-named persons: J. R. Lindburg, W. McBride, F. Kalwitz, P. A. Shield and D. S. Miller. The present Councilmen are J. R. Lindburg, A. J. Georgia, C. S. Jennings, E. N. Aikin and J. W. Braidwood.

The first school was taught in the town in the fall of 1877; A. J. Georgia was teacher. It was kept in a schoolhouse that was erected during the summer. The building is a two-story frame, containing two departments. A second school building was erected in 1881, and is a one-story frame. The first school numbered an attendance of forty. The attendance at present is about 600, and the school population of the city is 850. The schools were graded in the summer of 1880, and was made to comprise three departments. Since then they have been divided into four departments, under charge of D. Hollinger, Principal, and Miss Ida Bromback, Miss Cora Edson and Mrs. James Officer, teachers.

A post office was established here in 1876, soon after the site was located. George Richey was the first Postmaster. He was succeeded in March, 1877, by A. J. Georgia, who has since occupied the office. It was made a money order office July 1, 1879, and the first order for $2.50 was issued on the 7th of that month to Dr. W. W. Watkins in favor of C. C. Archer, of St. Louis, Mo. The whole number of orders issued up to this time is 6,684. The office began the issue of foreign money orders July 1, 1882, and up to the present has issued 200 of these orders. The office does an important business in money orders. On the first day after it became authorized, $72 in orders were issued. Since then the business has greatly increased, so that from the 1st to the 15th of January the issue of orders amounted to $1,800.

OPOLIS.

Opolis is situated in the extreme southeastern part of Crawford County, on the Girard Branch of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad.

A town was laid out at this point in 1868, by J. L. Davis and E. B. Hoyt, called State Line. It was so named from the fact that it lay immediately upon the line between the States of Missouri and Kansas. The cause which gave rise to its establishment was the apparent certainty of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad being constructed along this line, which was not only talked of, but even the preliminary survey was made. The town site was laid off and four houses were built before anything was done toward the construction of the road. J. L. Davis had the honor of building the first two houses, one of which was used for a hotel and store, and the other was a dwelling. Then E. B. Hoyt and J. H. Gould erected a storeroom, in which they put a stock of goods. Following this, G. W. Scott erected a residence building. With this the building of the town ceased, since all the bright prospects were defeated. The railroad, instead of being built on the State line was located and built several miles to the west, thus leaving the town far inland, so far as the road was concerned. In 1876, the Girard & Joplin Railroad was built, passing through the town. This road was afterward sold to the St. Louis & San Francisco Company and is now a branch of that road. This gave a new impetus to the building of the town. The site was re-surveyed in July, 1877, on lands owned by J. L. Davis and E. B. Hoyt. The name Opolis, a Greek word meaning city, was given to the town for the reason of its being a rare and odd name.

A rapid growth ensued, so that by the end of the year 1877 the town numbered several business houses and a population of about 200.

The post office was established in 1877; J. H. Osborn was the first Postmaster. He was succeeded by T. L. Holden. The first school was taught in the district schoolhouse, which stood about one and one-half miles east of the town. A school building was erected in what is called West Opolis, in 1881, in which the first school was taught by Mrs. Hicox and Mrs. Bishop. A schoolhouse was built in East Opolis in 1882, in which Miss Campbell, of Carthage, Mo., thught the first school. The present school population of the town is about 100. The town contains two church organizations, the Methodist and Quaker; both of which have buildings. There are also two society organizations, the Odd Fellows and Good Templars.

A small mill was built in 1880 by —— Stroup. It contains two run of stone, and is operated in the manufacture of flour, meal and feed.

In 1881, Dr. C. A. Lynga made an addition on the east side of the town, just across the Missouri line. On this addition are several buildings, among which are one drug and one general store and three saloons. The following is a summary of the business houses of the entire town: Two drug, five general, two grocery and one furniture store, two hotels, one meat market, one harness shop, two lumber yards, two barber shops, two livery barns, three blacksmith shops, one shoe-maker shop, three physicians, one Justice of the Peace and three Notaries.

The increase of population has been highly encouraging, now numbering about 500. The town is favorably situated in the midst of a fertile and thrifty farming community, from which is sustained a brisk and flourishing business.

CHEROKEE.

Cherokee is situated on the southern part of Crawford County, twelve miles south of Girard, at the crossing of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad, by the branch running from Fort Scott to Cherryvale, formerly the narrow gauge, but now a part of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad. The town dates its beginning from the early part of 1870, when the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad was in process of construction. Various points were established along the line of the road for the accommodation of construction hands, in supplying them with provisions, etc. The first institution of this sort, and the first building on the town site, was a small box house erected by William Sharp. This was occupied as a store room in which was kept a stock of groceries, feed, and bad whisky. In a short time after this, the railroad section house was built.

It became necessary for the company to give names to these various boarding stations, along the line as it was built, for purposes of facilitating the consignment of supplies. This place was supposed to lie just within the north line of Cherokee County, and from this took the name Cherokee. It was afterward discovered to be in Crawford County instead of Cherokee.

The land which forms the site of the town was originally the property of John J. Hoke and John G. Knox, by whom it was entered and deeded.

The country, at this time, was sparsely settled, and the land was held at a very low price.

The town site was donated to the railroad company, by which the original plat was surveyed and laid off in April, 1870. Through the attraction of a naturally fertile and promising country, and the extravagant advertisements of the railroad company, was induced a rapid influx of settlers. The town occupying a favorable position received a proportionate share of emigration. At no time has it, by any cause, been impelled to unnatural and inordinate growth, having from the beginning progressed with the natural demands as a point of trade and supply. For this reason the growth has always been healthy, stable and permanent. As the surrounding country, which is finely adapted to agriculture, improves the town, also progresses to a suitable degree.

The city has a population of about 1,200, and is an active trading point, full of thrifty, enterprising and energetic business men.

FIRST THINGS.

The first marriage ceremony was performed in the town by Capt. Jamison, Justice of the Peace. The contracting parties were a Mr. Cook and a widow lady living on Cow Creek. The bridal procession consisted of the two parties in wagon drawn by an ox team. The compensation for the performance of the ceremony consisted of two bushels of potatoes and half a dozen chickens.

The first marriage of resident young people was that of Jared Bartee and Miss Sarah Nance.

The first birth was that of Willie Manlove, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Manlove, in the summer of 1870. In the following spring, he died, which was the first death.

The first saloon was kept by Tom McGraw.

The first lawsuit was that of Thomas Pursell against John Pennington. The action was brought against the latter for "jumping a claim," to which the former claimed title. The case was adjudged in favor of the defendant. The defendant's attorney was E. A. Perry, who afterward said that neither of the parties to the suit had title to the land.

The post office was established in Cherokee in 1870. W. R. Sharp was the first Postmaster. The office has since been held by Joseph Lucas, S. Manlove, and since April 1, 1878, by J. C. Gove, the present incumbent.

The first school taught in this vicinity was that established in 1870, by Capt. Jamison. During the summer of that year Jamison built a house about a mile south of the town, furnished the teacher, his daughter, now Mrs. M. H. Alberty, and books to those unable to procure them, free of charge. A mounted herald was sent abroad through the land proclaiming its establishment and inviting all who wished to come and drink from this Pierian Spring.

This, in truth, was a "free school," since Jamison furnished its support and extended its accommodations to all the children of the neighborhood without charge. The average attendance was about thirteen.

The first school in the town was taught in 1871, by Miss Sarah Jamison, now Mrs. E. A. Perry. It was kept in the old section house. The attendance was extremely small, the enrollment numbering seven, and the school was of short continuance. A school building was erected in 1872. The plan of the house was only one story, upon which the lodges erected a second story. This building continued in use for school purposes until the completion of the new schoolhouse in the latter part of 1882. It is a large two-story brick structure of elegant design and finish, costing about $8,000.

The schools, enrolling 324 pupils, comprise four departments, under charge of as many teachers, as follows: C. E. Cory, principal and teacher of the higher grade; E. E. Shafer, teacher of the first intermediate; Matie Wilkinson, teacher of the second intermediate, and Jennie Coman, teacher of the primary department.

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

Christian sentiment early found expression and promulgation in this section. Perhaps the first public organization of this sort was that of the Union Sunday school, which was made early in 1870. Thomas Graham was the first Superintendent, and the exercises were conducted in a hay shed on Mr. Heiner's farm. During the summer it was held in Jamison's schoolhouse.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in 1872, by Rev. B. Combs, with a membership of six. It was effected in the school building, in which services were held until the erection of a church house in 1874. It is a one-story frame, 36x68 feet, and cost $2,700. A parsonage was built in 1878. It is a neat frame cottage costing $600. The membership of the congregation is 110. The following is a list of the names of the pastors who have labored in this charge: B. Combs, C. A. King, H. Carter, T. Audas, James Murrey and W. T. White.

The Christian Church was organized March 24, 1877, by Rev. E. R. Childers, of Fulton, Mo. The church began with twenty-one members and now has forty. The organization and early services were conducted in the Methodist Church. Meetings are now held in the Presbyterian Church.

The United Brethren Congregation was organized in 1875. In 1879, the church building was finished. The body at present is without a regular pastor.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in 1876. The church was built in 1880. The building was finished with a steeple, which was blown off by a wind storm, July 3, 1882, doing considerable damage to the entire structure. The colored people have an organization and hold meetings in the United Brethren church building.

The city contains three secret organizations, the Odd Fellows, Ancient Order of Workmen and the Masonic.

The Cherokee Lodge, No. 107, I. O. O. F., was instituted March 24, 1872, by District Deputy Grand Master N. Sennett, of Girard. The lodge began with seven charter members and nine initiates. The present membership, in good standing, is forty.

The Cherokee Lodge, A., F. & A. M., was instituted in October, 1873. This order contains a membership of fifty, in full standing.

The Lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen was organized in August, 1879, and now has a membership of forty-five, in full and regular standing. The Odd Fellows and Masons together own a hall, in which all the lodges hold their meetings.

THE PRESS AND OTHER LOCAL MATTERS.

The Cherokee Pharos was taken from Girard to Cherokee in May, 1874, by W. K. Goode. It was continued at this place only till the fall of the same year, and, in September, was returned to Girard.

The Cherokee Index was started by Mrs. Mary A. Spring June 3, 1875. In July of that year, H. C. Brandon became editor, who in a few weeks was succeeded by P. J. Coston. After editing the paper until November 5, 1875, Coston gave up the editorship. On the 17th of December, Mrs. Spring sold out to G. W. B. Hoffman and John T. Metcalf. In April, 1876, Metcalf sold his interest to Hoffman, by whom the paper, which had hitherto been published as an Independent sheet, was converted into a Democratic organ. March 16, 1878, Metcalf bought back his interest and re-formed the partnership. On September 21, 1878, it was taken to Columbus, Cherokee County.

The Young Cherokee was established by H. H. Webb and H. L. St. Clair, two boys. It was started as a small amateur concern, the first number of which appeared May 13, 1876. St. Clair retired in June, and, in the following month Webb largely increased the size of the sheet. At the time of the great lead excitement at Short Creek, in the spring of 1877, the paper was taken to that place, the first issue being made May 26, 1877. The paper afterward became the Mining Echo.

The Cherokee Banner was started in the fall of 1877, the first issue appearing on the 6th of October. H. H. Webb was also the founder of this paper. It was purchased July 12, 1878, by S. Smith, who continued its publications. The paper finally suspended.

The Temperance Rural was established July 4, 1878, by J. F. St. Clair and J. S. Moore. It was devoted to the advocacy of temperance, but was subsequently suspended.

The Cherokee Sentinel was established in April, 1879, by Charles M. Lucas. It was begun as a four-column quarto, but at the end of the first year was enlarged to an eight column paper. New presses, machinery and material have since been added. Besides the publication of the paper, considerable job work is also done. The paper since its beginning has enjoyed a constantly increasing patronage and prosperity, and has become one of the firmly established institutions of the city.

There is but one monetary institution in the place. This is the banking firm of G. W. Pye & Co. The business of the firm began in October, 1881, since which time they have conducted a prosperous business. G. W. Pye is the head of the concern and J. C. Smith is Cashier.

The Cherokee Flouring Mill was built in 1871 by Alberty & Vaughan. The cost of the building, machinery, etc., was about $20,000. It contains three run of stone, etc., and a steam corn-sheller. The mill is held under lease by the firm of Morley & Moore, who are engaged in its operation.

The Anchor Flouring Mill, the property of S. E. Leigh, was built in 1873. It contains two run of buhrs, and is operated in connection with a flourishing business.

The Cherokee Machine Shops were established in 1874 by Frank Webster. They were begun as a blacksmith shop, and gradually machinery was added. The shop contains a lathe, polishing and grinding machinery, drill press, full set of pipe tools, etc. The whole is run by a ten-horse power engine. This enterprise, it is safe to predict, is the ground work for machine shops of considerable magnitude in the future.

A broom factory was established in 1882 by Edwards & Robertson. They run two machines, and are turning out considerable work of an excellent quality.

MONMOUTH.

This town is located in the southern part of Crawford County, six miles west of Cherokee, on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad. It was laid off in 1866, by L. Manlove, on his own farm. The name Monmouth was given to it after the city of Monmouth, Ill. It is the oldest town in the county. The first house erected on the site was a two-story log building, belonging to Manlove, which he occupied as store-room and residence. This house remains standing as a monument of pioneer days. The next building was erected by Ralph Warner, for a dwelling, which was followed by the erection of a residence by Dr. Moore. In 1869, A. M. Chadsey built a store-room, in which he put a stock of general merchandise. The town has made slow progress from the beginning, and now contains a population of about 400, and five business houses.

The Post Office was established here in 1866. L. Manlove was the first Postmaster. He was succeeded by A. M. Chadsey in 1870, who held the office for several years, and was succeeded by Jacob Miller, the present Postmaster.

The first school was taught in 1870, by Mrs. Van Bibber, and was kept in a schoolhouse that had been erected during the summer of that year. This building was burned, and another one was built in 1880. It is a one-story frame structure, containing three apartments.

A society of the Ancient Order of United Workmen was organized in 1882.

A Post of the Grand Army of the Republic was formed January 11, 1883.

The town is situated in a fine agricultural district, in the supply of which, with the various articles of merchandise, a lively business is sustained. It is also a considerable point in the shipment of grain and produce. With such advantageous surroundings, the permanence, future growth and prosperity of the town is abundantly insured.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

JULIUS BRIDEGROOM, of the firm of Bridegroom & Gambill, millers, was born in Germany in 1846. His father was one of the German patriots of 1848, who, like Carl Schurz, Hecker and a host of others, since prominent as lovers of freedom in America, were forced to flee to the United States for refuge from the powers of kingcraft in their native land. The subject of this sketch came to America with his parents in infancy. His childhood was passed on a farm in Illinois, where he received such education as the common schools afforded. He was a resident of that State during the war of the rebellion, and entered the service in 1864 and remained until the close of the war. He carries the scars of four gunshot wounds as proof that he bore himself as a true soldier should. At the close of the war he returned to Illinois and entered the Illinois Soldiers' College, Fulton, Ill., from which he graduated in 1872. He was subsequently in the grain business for a short time, and taught school for five years, three years of which time he was Principal of the public schools at Princeville. He came to Kansas in 1875 and located in Cherokee County, on a farm of 200 acres, where he remained two years teaching mean while during the winter months. In the fall of 1880, he purchased a half interest in the Monmouth Mills, with which his business connection still continues, the mill doing a large custom and merchant business. He is now a resident of Monmouth, where he owns a fine residence and ten acres of land in connection with his mill. He is also the owner of a fine farm of 200 acres. He is a member of the A. O. U. W. and of the G. A. R., being now Commander of his Post. Both he and his wife are consistent members of the Methodist Church. He was married in 1872, to Miss Corilla Carter, of Ohio. They have two children—Freddie W. and Nellie Grace.

JACOB MILLER, dealer in drugs, groceries and grain, was born in Ohio in 1816, and was raised at the carpentering business. He went to Michigan in his eighteenth year, returned to Ohio for a short time, was then in Vicksburg, Miss., one winter, then to Virginia, where he spent thirteen years at his trade, then to Knox County on a farm two years, then merchandising two years in Illinois, then to Missouri in the mercantile business one year, then to Illinois on a farm until 1860, at which time he went into the grain and grocery business, continuing until 1865, when he came to Kansas and located in Crawford County on a farm of 160 acres, which he opened and improved and ran as a grain and stock farm until 1879, at which time he opened a general store in Monmouth and ran it three years. Mr. Miller owns two farms—one of 160 acres and the other of forty acres, with a full line of all kinds of fruits. He owns a fine residence and one business house in Monmouth, also forty acres of coal land. He has been Postmaster at Monmouth for ten years. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has been for forty-eight years and has been a class-leader for the same length of time. He is a member of the order of Freemasons. He was married to Miss Sarah Adam, of Virginia, in 1839. They have three children—Abigail, Robert H. and George B. He lost his first wife and was again married to Miss Paulina Adam, of Virginia. Mrs. Miller is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

McCUNE.

The land upon which this town is situated was entered by Leroy Akers in 1869. The farm soon afterward was sold to Isaac McCune, who was engaged in its cultivation for some years prior to the establishment of the town. The town is situated in the southwestern part of Crawford County, on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad, on the divide between the Neosho River and Lightning Creek. In this part, there was a wide and fertile district, measured from a central point by a radius of about fifteen miles, more or less, to Girard on the northeast, Cherokee on the east, Columbus on the southeast, Oswego on the southwest, and Parsons on the west. The country surrounding the place is filled up and well cultivated by thrifty and enterprising farmers. From such circumstances, it was plain to be seen, not only that it was a favorable point for the establishment of a town, but also that the demands of the country required it. In May, 1879, Isaac McCune laid out a town which was named McCune, in honor of its enterprising founder.

The survey and plat was made by the railroad civil engineer. The original site comprised sixty acres. Since then, R. N. Canada made an addition of ten acres on the north, C. Crank, made one of ten acres on the west, and Isaac McCune made a third addition of ten acres on the south, making a total area in the town site of ninety acres.

The first building erected on the site was a dwelling belonging to J. Z. Sherfic. It was afterward used as a hotel, and now forms a part of the Western Hotel.

I. V. McCune built a store house which J. D. Rogers occupied with a stock of general merchandise. This was the second building in the town, and was erected in August, 1879. The next was a store house built by Thomas Stutterd, in which he kept drugs and dry goods. In about two months, it was purchased by Dr. E. P. Davis. In the spring of 1880, W. W. Gibson erected a building and opened a general store, and later in the fall F. M. McCaslin put up a house, putting in a stock of miscellaneous merchandise. This house is now occupied by Wilson & Son. The next business house established was a grocery, by Davidson & Granthum.

For the short period since the starting of the town, it has made surprising progress. In less than four years' time, it has grown to a city with a population of 500, and contains eight general stores, three hardware, two drug, two grocery, two millinery stores, two hotels, one billiard hall, two blacksmith shops, one cabinet shop, three carpenter shops, two lumber yards, two coal yards, two livery stables, one flouring mill, one grain elevator, and nine grain buyers.

Pursuant to a petition to the District Court of the Eleventh Judicial District, signed by Isaac McCune, E. L. Ball, and sixty-three others, the town became incorporated as a city of the third class, October 8, 1881.

Isaac McCune was elected the first Mayor, and was succeeded by J. L. Ward, who was elected in April, 1882.

The first City Council was composed of I. V. McCune, R. O. Harris, M. Casey and K. P. Minard.

A post office called Time, was established in this vicinity in 1875. It was kept by W. Welch, about half a mile east of where the city now stands. In 1878, it was moved to the town and was given the same name. At the time of the change of location, J. F. McCune became Postmaster, and has held the position up to this time. When J. F. McCune first became Postmaster, the office consisted of a small box containing fifteen pigeon holes, which he was accustomed to take under his arm and move about, taking up his quarters in stores with such merchants as were agreeable.

It soon became necessary to supersede this box with one considerably larger. Both of these pieces of post office furniture are retained in the office, which has been greatly extended, and is now a considerable point for the distribution of mail matter, and in the registry business.

The first school in this district was taught in 1869 by Miss Mary Ball. The school building in which it was kept afterward fell within the town limits. The first school after the town was laid out was taught by Daniel Hollinger. The schoolhouse was a small frame building, to which an addition was built in the fall of 1881. The school population numbers about two hundred. The schools comprise three departments under as many teachers.

THE PRESS, ETC.

In July, 1881, D. A. Burton started a paper called the McCune Standard. It subsequently came into the hands of his son, J. A. Burton, who, after running it a short time, sold out to W. W. Liggett, in the fall of 1882. Liggett, out of the material, presses, etc., of the Standard office, brought out a six-column folio paper, called the McCune Times, the first issue being made September 9, 1882.

W. W. Liggett, editor and proprietor of the McCune Times, was born in Greene County, Ohio, February, 1857. When he was yet of tender age, his parents moved to Livingston County, Ill., from where they moved to Warren County, that State. He attended school at Monmouth, Ill., finishing his education at Mount Ayr, Ringgold County, Iowa. For some two or three years following this, he was engaged in learning the printer's trade. In 1878, he went to Kansas City, and was engaged upon the Times, Journal, Star and Mail. He became foreman on the Kansas City Indicator, which position he held up to February, 1882. After this he came to Girard, then went to Walnut, where he worked at his trade until August, at which time he came to McCune, bought the McCune Standard office and began the publication of the McCune Times, in which he is now engaged.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in 1879, with seven members, by Rev. Mr. Hill, of Kansas City. The organization took place in the schoolhouse, in which services were held until the church house was built. The house was built in 1880, and dedicated in 1881. Rev. Mr. Thayer was the first regular pastor.

There is a Methodist Episcopal congregation here and also a Methodist organization. The former has a church building which was erected in 1882, but the latter is without a house of worship.

The Christian congregation was organized in 1881 and the church was built in 1882.

The United Presbyterians and Baptists have flourishing organizations, but neither is supplied with a church building.

McCune Lodge, No. 193, I. O. O. F., was instituted October 24, 1881, by D. G. M. A. P. Riddle, assisted by a number from lodges in various surrounding towns. The following were elected as officers: J. A. Gasey, Noble Grand; G. T. McCaslin, Vice Grand; S. L. Minard, Recording Secretary; J. T. Smith, Permanent Secretary; C. E. Metcalf, Treasurer.

McCune Lodge No. 70, A. O. U. W., was organized in February, 1882, with twenty-six members.

The only manufacturing establishment in the town is the McCune flouring mills. This mill was built in May, 1882, by the firm of Carter & Allen. Subsequently, Carter sold out to a man named Galyon, and the firm became Allen & Galyon. The mill contains three run of stone and turns out an excellent brand of goods.

M'CUNE COAL COMPANY.

This organization was formed in 1882, and is composed of Isaac McCune, I. K. Vance and Jonathan Rigney. The object of the company was to prospect for coal in the vicinity of the town. In the summer of 1882, a prospect shaft was sunk to a depth of four hundred feet, which passed through five veins of coal of varying thickness. A vein five feet thick was reached at a depth of about three hundred and fifty feet. The shaft was sunk within the limits of the town, showing that beneath it lies a wealth of this mineral. The design of the company is to develop this interest in the immediate future, and thus the city will receive another great impetus to her progress.

The surroundings of this young city are favorable, and its prospects of growth in the future are to an extent certain. The country around is rich in the growth of agricultural products of all kinds, and McCune is thus rendered an important shipping point. During the year 1882, there were shipped from this station twenty-eight cars of oats, eighty-eight of wheat, ninety-one of corn, eighteen of castor-beans, five of flax seed, twenty-eight of hogs, and two of cattle.

The men of the town are live and energetic, and an extensive and prosperous business is sustained.

WALNUT.

Walnut is a small town located in the northwestern part of Crawford County at the junction of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad with the Nebraska, Topeka, Iola & Girard Railroad. It is distant from Fort Scott about twenty-seven miles; eight miles from Osage Mission, and about sixteen miles from Girard, the county seat of the county in which it is situated.

The town was founded in 1871, by a town company, of which J. Miller, H. Burns, F. Robins, J. Burk, Dr. J. C. Petit and Louis Giddings were members. The land upon which it is situated was taken as a claim by H. Burns, who was furnished with money by the company with which he could obtain legal title to the ground. The original site comprised forty acres, which was laid off into town lots. This being a part of the Osage lands, and the title being in dispute between the M., K. & T. Railroad Company and settlers, but little progress was made by the town.

The first house that was erected on the town site was that built by H. Shackleton, and was a little box house which stood at the foot of Main street, and which he used for a store room, dealing in general merchandise.

The next building was a grain elevator, built by Jacobs & Burk, and is the one now occupied by Davis & Co. For a time, W. Jacobs used the building for a residence, until the completion of his dwelling house, which was the third building erected in the place. Jacobs, for awhile, used his dwelling for a boarding house, and is the room now occupied by W. McFall with a stock of hardware. S. H. Cover next erected a store and began dealing in general merchandise. Newton & Kelly followed next, with a merchandising establishment consisting of general goods.

Newton & Kelly, after running the business for a short time, sold out to a man named Neighbors, who sold to Jones & Gordon, who in turn sold to a man named Joyce. Joyce continued in business about a year, after which the building was unoccupied until it was taken by the present firm of Steadman & Gregory, in 1880. This firm put in a large stock of general merchandise, and have since conducted a successful business. As was before stated, the growth of the town was extremely slow and unpromising during the first few years of its existence. In 1875, the site fell into the hands of Perry & Goff, by purchase. The town at this time began to exhibit greater life. The site was resurveyed, and an addition of forty acres made to it. About a year later, J. Miller made an addition of twenty acres known as "Miller's Addition," and in the fall of 1882, the Robins & Goff and the Burns Additions were made, of thirty and fifteen acres respectively. By this means the site became very much enlarged, having an area of one hundred and forty-five acres.

In 1876, the title to the ceded lands was quieted by the judgment of the United States Court, which also settled the fears of settlers in regard to property in this section of the State. By this means the town was made ready for the more lively and substantial growth that has since followed. The N., T., I. & M. Railroad running from Girard to this place was built in 1882, crossing the Missouri Pacific road at this point.

The Missouri Pacific, or the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad, was built in 1871, thus giving the town the advantages of two lines of railroad.

The town at first went by the name of Glenwood, but in 1874 the name was changed to that it now bears.

A post office called Walnut was located here in 1870, and was kept by Thomas Jones, in a small box house which stood just off the town site, on the bank of Big Walnut Creek. Soon after the starting of the town, the office was brought into it, and was under the official appointment of Ira Boyle, who has continued to act in the capacity of Postmaster up to the present time.

The first school was taught in the town in the winter of 1870-71, by J. Johnston, and was kept in the school building that had been erected during the fall of 1870. This was a small frame house to which an addition was built in 1879, in order to satisfy the increased wants of educational facilities. A new school building was erected in the fall and winter of 1882, and is a two story frame, 30x50 feet, containing four rooms, and cost about $3,000. The bonds of the district were voted to raise this amount.

The town contains four church organizations, viz., the Methodist, Presbyterian, Catholic and Baptist. The Methodist congregation was organized in 1869. It was effected in the residence of F. Robins, with a membership of ten, which has since increased to sixty.

The first services were held in Robins' residence during bad weather, and when the state of the weather allowed were held in the groves. The church building was erected in 1880, at a cost of $1,500, and is a tastefully constructed one-story frame, finished with a spire and furnished with a bell.

The Catholic Church was first organized in Neosho County in 1869, and was effected in the farm residence of John Mudd, by one of the fathers from Osage Mission. In 1870, the place of holding meetings was changed to Walnut, where at that time a small church building was erected.

The Presbyterians became organized into a church body by Rev. H. H. Camburn, who has since been pastor. The work of organization took place in the schoolhouse, where the services were subsequently conducted for some time. The church building was erected in 1880. It is a one-story frame structure, and cost about $1,000.

The Baptist denomination have a church organization, but they are yet not supplied with a regular church house, the services being conducted in the schoolhouse.

The social orders are represented by two lodges—that of the Odd Fellows and the United Workmen—both of which are in a flourishing condition.

Journalism is represented by two publications—the Walnut Journal and the Walnut Herald.

The Walnut Journal was begun in December, 1881, by E. O. Green. On the 1st of November of the next year, Green sold a half-interest in the concern to W. M. Holeman, who became associate editor and proprietor. The paper is a six-column quarto, independent in politics, and has a circulation of 480 copies.

The Walnut Herald is a five-column sheet, published by J. Scurry. The circulation is gratuitous, the only revenues being that obtained from advertisements.

The manufacturing industry is represented by a grist and flour mill. This is the Walnut Mills, which was built in 1879 by H. C. Bruner. In February, 1882, the building was sold to McCullough & Hollister, who fitted it up with a full line of new and improved machinery. It contains three run of stone, and has a capacity for grinding 100 bushels of wheat and 300 of corn per day. The principal market for the goods made is in Texas, and the orders received are much in advance of the supply. The mill building is a two-story frame, 24x36 feet, and the power is supplied by a forty-horse power engine.

The business interests of the town are represented by three general stores, two hardware, two drug and three grocery stores, one restaurant, two hotels, one millinery and dress making establishment, two meat markets, one cabinet and furniture shop, two lumber and coal yards, three grain elevators, two livery stables, one hay press, two blacksmith and wagon shops, one harness shop, one carpenter shop, one barber shop, one shoe shop, two land offices, etc. Being situated at considerable distances from all important surrounding points, the town has the support of a large country trade. With the surrounding of a fertile agricultural district, the advantages of railroads, etc., it only awaits the further development of the country, when the town will, in proportion, attain considerable size and importance.

OTHER TOWNS.

Arcadia is situated in the northeast part of the county, in a healthy location, near Coxe's Creek. Formerly it was a stopping-place on the old military road between Fort Scott and Fort Gibson. This was before the war. In 1862, there was a double log tavern at Arcadia. Now this town is on the Ft. S., S. E. & M. Railroad. When this road was constructed by the Gulf road as a branch simply for coal, into Lincoln Township, Arcadia took the name of Findlay City, after a certain coal contractor. It has now taken back the old ante-bellum name, Arcadia. Before the war Arcadia consisted of only the double log hotel, which is even now well remembered by every one who passed in either direction through the town when it existed. The town has broad and clean streets, lined on both sides with neat and tasty buildings. Among the business houses of Arcadia are five general stores, one hardware store, three blacksmith and wagon shops, one harness shop, one bakery, one shoe shop, one grist-mill, one grain elevator, one lumber yard, two drug stores, two hotels and two churches. The prosperity of the town is attributed to the tact of its shrewd business men. It contains a population of about 300, and is surrounded by some of the best farming lands, and the most picturesque country anywhere to be found.

Hepler.—This town is located in the northwest part of the county on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, on undulating prairie. The first settler here was John Vietz. A town company was formed in January, 1871, composed as follows: B. F. Hepler, of Fort Scott, President; T. H. Annable, Secretary; George A. Crawford, Treasurer. The first Board of Trustees was B. F. Hepler, Annable, S. Pratel, E. C. Hays and A. Pratel. Among those who settled here in 1871–72, were the following: J. N. Strawn, Sebo Vietz, Thomas Sparks, Dennis Moran and Isaac Stevens.

The first business building was erected by John Vietz in 1871. J. N. Strawn soon afterward started a general country store, but sold out in a short time to Mr. Vietz. Mr. Strawn was appointed Postmaster in 1871. The first birth was that of Frank Strawn, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Strawn, in 1872; the first death, that of a child of Thomas Sparks in 1873; and the first marriage, that of Dr. A. M. Griffin to Miss Grace Hitchcock in 1882. William G. Tittle taught the first school in 1874, and Rev. A. Jackson preached the first sermon in 1875. The Methodist Episcopal Church society erected a church on Main street in 1880, costing about

$2,500, and the Christian denomination built a church in 1882, costing $2,000. The Hepler Leader, a seven column folio weekly paper, was started January 4, 1883, by William D. Wright. The population of the town is about 200, and if it is not growing rapidly "it makes up in solidity of growth what it lacks in speed of development."

Beulah.—This town is located on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad, five miles south of Girard. It was started in 1874 by a colony of Methodists, composed in part, of the following members: Thomas Crowder, Henry Brown, H. T. Potter, C. A. King, R. G. Hermance, J. S. Schofield and B. F. King. At that time there was but one small house in the vicinity. By the first of January there was a population of 200.

The Methodist Episcopal congregation erected a church edifice in 1881. It is a handsome structure, 30x50 feet in size, and cost about $2,000. Besides the church there is a good school and a number of good business houses. Beulah now contains a population of 300.

Farlington is situated on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad, seven miles north of Girard. The site is as attractive as need be desired. A grove has been started, and near the town is a beautiful lake. The town contains quite a number of substantial business houses, a good schoolhouse, and a Baptist Church organization which erected an elegant church edifice near the depot in 1882. There is a wagon shop and a blacksmith shop, and the town is considerable of a shipping point for coal, nearly all of the merchants dealing in this mineral, which is mined in the vicinity.

Mulberry Grove is a mining town in the eastern part of the county, on the Cherryvale Division of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad. It is surrounded by a fine farming country, and presents the crude and rustic appearance of all new mining towns.

Midway is a small town in the eastern part of the county, also on the Cherryvale Division of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad, and like Mulberry its mining interests are its principal support. The post office was established in February, 1871.

Cato is the oldest town in the county, but it is quite small. It is located in Lincoln Township, it contains a store, blacksmith shop, flouring and saw mill and a church.

Iowa City was situated two miles southeast of the present site of Pittsburg. It never contained more than a store and a residence, both owned by Isaac Hobson, who located there in the fall of 1866. It is now famous on account of the speech delivered there by Hon. Sidney Clarke, an extract from which may be found elsewhere.

Brazilton is located on the N. T., I. & M. R. R., eight miles from Girard. It has been started since the building of the railroad. It is destined to be an important town; it already contains two stores, a lumber yard, about twelve houses and fifty inhabitants. Thomas Brazil and H. M. Clark own the town site; W. H. Ryan is the Postmaster. About fifty car loads of grain were shipped from this station in 1882.

Idell Post Office was established in June, 1870, C. W. McCloud being appointed Postmaster. It is situated on Hickory Creek. A Catholic Church is located two miles to the northeast.

Green Elm is also a post office on Hickory Creek about five miles southwest of Idell.

Litchfield is located four miles northeast of New Pittsburg. It is a coal town in every sense, about 500 car loads of coal being shipped each month. There are here a post office, public school, a general store, a drug store, two blacksmith shops, a wagon shop and about 200 inhabitants.

Hopefield Post Office was established in Baker Township in 1871, J. W. Lane being appointed first Postmaster.

His farm contains 320 acres of improved land, well fenced, watered and stocked, with good buildings, and has over 300 trees of assorted fruits. He handles about 300 head of stock annually.

BRAZILTON.

WILLIAM H. RYAN, Postmaster, Brazilton, dealer in grain and coal, was born in Omaha, Neb., August, 1857, and came to Neosho County, Kan., at an early age, with his people, who settled there, where he was reared and educated, and was identified with farming industry there till 1878. In that year he came to this county and settled on Section 36, Walnut Township, where he has been successfully connected with farming and stock business since. In 1880, he engaged in nursery business, as dealer, and carried it on till 1882, when he retired from it and established the grain and coal business, and was appointed to the Postmastership of his place the same year. He married in Neosho County, Miss Ella Songer, who was born and reared in Iowa. They have a family of three sons—Charles Henry, William Harrison and Clarence. The family are members of the Roman Catholic Church. His farm contains 160 acres of improved land, an orchard of 150 trees of nicely assorted fruits, and good buildings. William Ryan, father of the above, was born in London, Eng., and was reared in Canada; came to Omaha in 1854; lived there till 1870, when he settled in Neosho County, Kan. He married Bridget Daughney, a native of Canada. They have a family of six sons and five daughters—Ellen, now Mrs. John Starkey, D. L., John, William H., Margaret, now Mrs. W. L. Watson, Thomas, Mary Ann, now Mrs. John Linihan, Anastasia, Andrew and James.

CHEROKEE COUNTY

BOUNDARIES, TOPOGRAPHY AND GEOLOGY.

CHEROKEE County is situated in the southeast corner of the State. It is bounded on the north by Crawford County, on the east by Missouri, on the south by the Indian Territory, on the west by Labette County. It lies within what was originally McGee County, which, according to the "Bogus Statutes," was bounded as follows: "Beginning at the southeast corner of Bourbon County; thence south to the southern boundary of this Territory; thence west on said boundary twenty-four miles; thence north to a point due west from the place of beginning; thence east twenty-four miles to the place of beginning."

The name of the county was changed from McGee, which name had been applied to it in honor of A. M. McGee, of Kansas City, a noted Pro-slavery leader of those early days, to Cherokee, in honor of the Cherokee Indians, on the 18th of February, 1860, by the Territorial Legislature in the following language: "That the name of the County Magee (McGee) be and the same is hereby changed to that of Cherokee, and detached from Bourbon County, and the town of Freepoint shall be the temporary county seat thereof." By the same act John Sears, John Lemon and B. M. Blanton were appointed Commissioners to divide the county into townships, not exceeding three in number, each township to be an election precinct; and a special election was appointed for the fourth Monday in March, for the election of county and township officers. On the 27th of the same month, the western boundary of Cherokee County was declared to be the line between Ranges 21 and 22.

The next legislation, with reference to the boundaries of the county, was had February 18, 1867, when the following was enacted: "That the boundary of the county of Cherokee shall commence at the southeast corner of the county of Crawford; thence run south on the east line of the State of Kansas to the southeast corner of the State; thence west along the southern boundary of the State of Kansas to the southeast corner of Neosho County, as defined by the act approved February 26, 1866; thence north to the southwest corner of the county of Crawford; thence east to the place of beginning."

Thus the boundaries remained until October 31, 1868, when an act approved March 3, 1868, went into effect, Section 12 of which act is as follows: "The county of Cherokee is bounded as follows: Commencing at the southeast corner of the county of Crawford; thence west with the south line of the said county of Crawford to the southwest corner of Section 14, Township 31 south, Range 21 east, of the Sixth Principal Meridian; thence south on section line to the Neosho River; thence with the channel of said river to the south boundary line of the State of Kansas; thence east on said boundary line to the southeast corner of the State; thence north on the east line of the State of Kansas to the place of beginning; Provided that at the next general election the legal voters on the strip between the west line of Cherokee County as above defined, and the west line of the Cherokee Neutral Lands, shall decide by ballot for or against being attached to Cherokee County, and the ballot so cast shall be returned and canvassed as other election returns, and the result certified to the Governor, who shall issue his proclamation in accordance therewith. If a majority of the votes cast shall be in favor of being attached to Cherokee County, the west line of said county shall remain as above defined, but if a majority be against being attached to Cherokee County, then the line between said Cherokee County and the County of Labette shall be the west line of the Cherokee Neutral Lands, anything in this act to the contrary notwithstanding." This contemplated election not being held, the boundary between Cherokee and Labette Counties has not been settled, but supposing it to be the west line of the Neutral Lands, the area of the county is about 588 square miles, or 376,320 acres.

The general surface of the county is gently undulating prairie. A water-shed extends through it from north to south, dividing it into two nearly equal areas. The east half is drained by Spring River and its tributaries, while the west half is drained by the Neosho and its branches. Nowhere are there any high bluffs or precipitous descents. The variation in the elevation of different parts of the county is not over 200 feet; Baxter Springs being 831 feet above the sea level, while the highest land, which is in the vicinity of Columbus, is about 1,000 feet above the same level. The average width of the valleys is one and a half miles. The bottom lands constitute twenty per cent of the surface, balance upland.

The principal streams are the Neosho and Spring Rivers. The former enters the county from the west, about the middle of the western boundary, and flows southward, leaving it in Section 16, Township 35, Range 22. It receives as tributaries, commencing with the most northerly one, Lightning Creek, Cherry Creek, Fly Creek, Four Mile Creek and Tar Creek, the three latter forming their junctions with the Neosho in the Indian Territory. Spring River receives as tributaries, commencing similarly with the most northerly one, Cow, Shawnee and Brush Creeks, from the northwest, and Short Creek, from the southeast. In addition to these constantly flowing streams, there are numerous springs of soft water in all parts of the county, and good well water is found at depths varying from ten to fifty feet.

Spring River, flowing through the southeastern corner of the county, is, on account of its beauty, worthy of special mention. Its entire length within the county is fifteen miles; its average width is about 100 feet, and it is fordable in many places. It is fed by innumerable springs, hence its name, and, flowing over a rocky bottom, its water is remarkably and beautifully clear. Having quite a number of miles of rapids, it furnishes illimitable water power, which is already utilized to a considerable extent. It is one of the most, if not the most, beautiful of the rivers in Kansas, and in its beauty the people of Spring River Valley and of the entire county feel a just and pardonable pride.

The timber belts are along the streams, and average one-half mile in width. The heaviest growth is along the Neosho River and its branch, Cherry Creek. Not over 10 per cent of the area is covered with native forest. The principal varieties are the ash, cottonwood, elm, hackberry, hickory, maple, mulberry, oak, pecan, sycamore and black walnut.

The soil varies in depth from one to five feet. It is of a dark vegetable mold, underlaid by a reddish brown clay subsoil. It is exceedingly fertile, and well adapted to all the cereals and garden vegetables. The heaviest yield of wheat so far reported is that of M. Martin in Shawnee Township, of fifty-four bushels per acre. The heaviest yield of oats is ninety-two bushels per acre, and of corn ninety bushels. Sweet potatoes sometimes grow to enormous size, one specimen having been raised which weighed fifteen pounds. Cotton also is an excellent crop, two bales per acre having been raised.

There is an abundance of building stone, both magnesian limestone and sandstone. The variegated sandstone quarried near Columbus is one of the most beautiful varieties found in the world. It is susceptible of the highest finish, and continues to harden the longer it is exposed to the air. Had the Tower of Babel been erected from this quarry, it would probably have been in a perfect state of preservation to-day.

Coal is found most abundantly in the western and northern portions of the county. The vein enters the southeastern part of Labette County from the Indian Territory, then it enters Cherokee County, crossing it in a northeasterly direction into the southeastern corner of Crawford County, and extending in the same direction toward Boonville, Mo. This vein is within sixty feet of the surface, and varies in thickness from twelve to fifty-four inches. One-half of Townships 33 and 34, in Ranges 23 and 24, is underlaid with it, and it is also found in Townships 31 and 32, in Ranges 23, 24 and 25. Here it is from three to four feet thick.

Fire clay is found in the northern part of the county, and pottery clay, lead and zinc in the southeastern.

The Cherokee Neutral Lands.—Previous to 1827, the land now embraced in Cherokee and Crawford Counties belonged to the Osage Indians. During that year a treaty was made between the Osages and the United States Government, by the terms of which a strip fifty miles north and south by twenty-five miles east and west should be unoccupied by either white or red men, and should be a barrier between the two races, or a neutral land. Originally, therefore, it might appropriately have been called the Osage Neutral Land. But, on account of a treaty subsequently made between the Government and the Cherokee Indians the strip became known as the "Cherokee Neutral Lands."

These lands are located in the southeast part of Kansas, and are situated between the west line of the State of Missouri and the Osage Reservation, beginning at the southeast corner of the same, and running north along the east line of the Osage lands, fifty miles to the northeast corner thereof; thence east to the west line of the State of Missouri; thence with the said line south fifty miles; thence west to the place of beginning, estimated to contain 800,000 acres.

The Cherokee Indians became entitled to this tract of land in the following manner: As the white population, in the thirteen original States, increased to such an extent as to render the Indians therein uncomfortable and dissatisfied, it became necessary, by treaty, to provide for them new homes. The Cherokees, at that time, were living on reservations in Georgia, and were removed thence to Arkansas by the treaty of January 8, 1817, and the convention of February 27, 1819. A treaty was then made in 1828, between the United States and the Cherokee Nation, which had for its purpose the securing to the Cherokees "a permanent home, which should, under the most solemn guarantee of the United States, be and remain theirs forever—a home that should never, in all future time, be embarrassed by having extended around it lines, or placed over it the jurisdiction of a State or Territory—nor be pressed upon by the extension over it, in any way, of the limits of any existing State or Territory."

Under this treaty, the Cherokees exchanged the lands possessed by them in Arkansas, for 7,000,000 of acres of land in the Indian Territory, which was guaranteed to them forever; and, in addition to this tract of 7,000,000 acres, they had guaranteed to them a perpetual outlet west, and free and unmolested use of all the country west of the said tract.

By the treaty of February 14, 1833, the boundaries of the above tract were somewhat modified; but otherwise the treaty of 1828 was left materially the same. But by the treaty of December 29, 1835, the lands of the Cherokees, in Georgia, which had not been ceded to the Government, were ceded, relinquished and conveyed to the Government of the United States for the sum of five millions of dollars. But the Cherokees, fearing that the 7,000,000 acres already ceded to them in the Indian Territory, would be inadequate to their future necessities, procured the incorporation into the treaty of the following clause: "The United States, in consideration of the sum of $500,000, hereby covenant and agree to convey to the said Indians and their descendants, by patent in fee simple, the following additional tract of land, situated between the State of Missouri and the Osage Reservation," etc., as before described.

This body of land so purchased remained the property of the Cherokees until 1866, when, on account of the encroachments upon them of white people, many of whom had settled upon the land, they became desirous of selling it. A treaty was therefore made and concluded August 10, 1866, whereby the Cherokees ceded in trust to the United States this tract of land in the State of Kansas, which was sold to the Cherokees under the provisions of the second article of the treaty of 1835; also that strip of land ceded to them by the fourth article of said treaty, which is included in the State of Kansas. The Secretary of the Interior was made the agent of the Cherokees to sell the lands. He was authorized to advertise for sealed proposals, and to sell to the highest bidder for cash, in parcels not to exceed 160 acres each, at not less than $1.25 per acre; or to sell the whole body of land to any one responsible party for not less than $1 per acre, except such portions as were occupied at the time of the ratification of the treaty by actual settlers, and reserving for each actual settler not exceeding 160 acres.

Recognizing the difficulty of selling such a large body of land (800,000 acres) in parcels of 160 acres or less, and the length of time that would be required; and also recognizing the importance to the Cherokees of promptly realizing upon the whole body of the land, and of having all the money it might bring at interest, the Secretary of the Interior entered into a contract August 30, 1866, under the treaty of August 10, 1866, to sell the whole of the land in a body at $1 per acre. But this first contract of sale was set aside, for the reason that it was a sale for cash on time, whereas, by the terms of the treaty, the sale was to be for cash down. An attempt was then made to conclude a treaty, amending the treaty of 1866, to the extent of permitting the sale of these lands to Gen. Fremont for $1.25 per acre, or $1,000,000; but this supplemental treaty failed of ratification, and the land was then again placed on the market at $1 per acre. In June, 1867, James F. Joy, of Michigan, made a proposition through an agent to O. H. Browning, Secretary of the Interior, to take the whole body of the neutral lands at $1 per acre. The Secretary declined the proposition, in order to give time for higher bids to be made; and, in order to secure such higher bids, advertised in the public journals for proposals, and giving notice of the final sale of the lands on October 1, 1867, to the highest bidder. Mr. Joy's offer was the only one made, and so he became the purchaser of the whole body of the neutral lands, except such parcels as had been taken by actual settlers previous to the treaty of August 10, 1866, and which parcels they were allowed to purchase at the appraised value of from $1.50 to $4 er acre.

The first sale had been made by Secretary Harlan to the American Emigrant Company, a corporation chartered under the laws of Connecticut, and, on the opinion and advice of Attorney General Stanberry, was held to be null and void. But the American Emigrant Company did not quietly submit to the opinion of the Attorney General, and, in consequence, a dispute arose between the company and James F. Joy, relative to their titles under their respective purchases. Mr. Joy, not desiring to be involved in a contest concerning the title to the lands, requested the Secretary of the Interior, O. H. Browning, to cancel his contract, but the Secretary declined so to cancel it, upon the ground that he had done the best thing possible for the Cherokees, and that they would lose the lands if not sold. In 1868, the American Emigrant Company made a proposition to Mr. Joy, to assign, on certain conditions, their contract to him, to have it sanctioned by the Cherokees, and to have the transfer confirmed in a new treaty between the Cherokees and the Government of the United States. This supplemental treaty was concluded April 27, ratified June 6, and proclaimed June 10, 1868. By this treaty, the American Emigrant Company assigned their contract, and all their right, title, claim and interest in and to the said "Cherokee Neutral Lands" to James F. Joy, and Mr. Joy agreed to assume and conform to all the obligations of the company under their contract. Thus, Mr. Joy became the owner of the "Cherokee Neutral Lands," provided the Cherokee title to them was valid, and as such opened a "Cherokee Neutral Land Office" in Fort Scott December 18, 1868, for the convenience of such settlers as might desire to purchase and make entry of any portion of them. This office was placed in charge of Maj. John T. Cox. The price asked by Mr. Joy for his lands ranged from $2 to $5 per acre, average price $3.50 per acre.

At the time of the ceding of this tract to the United States, in trust, August 11, 1866, there had settled within its limits 1,031 families, or upward of 5,000 individuals, the first settlement having been made in 1857. These settlers and all who had settled on the lands previous to June 10, 1868, were permitted to purchase their selections at an appraised valuation of from $1.50 to $4 per acre, or about $2 per acre less than those who might purchase under the Joy contract. A difficulty now arose in regard to the lands. Many of the settlers claimed that the Joy purchase was a swindle, asserted their right to settlement under the homestead and pre-emption laws, and demanded permission so to settle. They were encouraged to maintain their position by politicians of two classes, both those who had, and those who had no interest in either their rights or votes. Of the first class was the Hon. Sidney Clarke, Member of Congress from Kansas. The Legislature of Kansas, by a unanimous vote in the House and a vote of 18 to 5 in the Senate, passed concurrent resolutions setting forth their opinion, and the reasons therefor, that the Cherokees never had a legal title to the lands, and requesting the Congress of the United States to pass such laws as might be necessary to fully secure the rights of the bona fide settlers (of whom there were then about twenty thousand) upon the lands, under the homestead and pre-emption laws. In order to obtain legislation satisfactory to themselves, the settlers employed William R. Laughlin as their agent to represent them in Washington and lay their claims before Congress. In answer to his inquiries, the Hon. William Lawrence, of Ohio, the Hon. George W. Julian, of Indiana, and the Hon. Benjamin F. Butler, of Massachusetts, all Members of Congress, formulated their opinion that under the treaty of December 29, 1835, the Cherokees acquired a right of occupancy only in the neutral lands, and not the right of alienation; and that the Cherokees having abandoned the lands, the lands reverted to the United States. This opinion was entertained by many Members of Congress, and much time was occupied in that body in attempting to legislate on the subject in order to carry it into practical effect. The principal argument employed in support of this opinion was that the treaty-making power has no right to sell any of the property of the United States without the authority or consent of Congress. And it was claimed that the Cherokees, when they made a treaty at Talequa, October 7, 1861, with the Confederate States of America, by the terms of which they entered into an offensive and defensive alliance with that then power, and passed to and vested in that power all their right, title, interest, etc., in the said neutral lands, an abandonment of the lands was effected; and that therefore they could not cede them to the United States and could not therefore authorize a sale.

It was also claimed by the settlers that even if a sale were authorized by the treaty ceding the lands to the United States in trust for the purpose of sale, the terms of the treaty had not been complied with, inasmuch as the said treaty authorized the sale of all the Cherokee lands in Kansas, whereas the sale to Mr. Joy included only the neutral lands, leaving unsold the "Quapaw strip," or "Cherokee strip," a strip two and a half miles wide lying between the "neutral lands" and Osage lands on the north, and the Indian Territory on the south, and being a part of the seven million acre tract; and also, that the sale was void because, notwithstanding the proviso declared that nothing should prevent the Secretary from selling the land, yet there was no authority to sell

On the other hand it was shown that the "Quapaw" or "Cherokee strip," was not ceded to the Government at all, that that part of the treaty which by the settlers was supposed to have reference to this strip, really applied to lands lying in the Indian Territory, fifty miles south of Kansas, and to other lands lying on the Marais des Cygnes, where this river crosses the State line of Missouri at the mouth of Mine Creek, on Double Creek and at Harmony. And it was argued that the treaty of 1835, which covenanted and agreed to convey to the said Indians and their descendants, by patent in fee simple, this neutral tract, which was supplemented by act of Congress in 1836, recognizing and approving the treaty by the appropriation of money to carry it into effect, and by the execution by the President of the United States, on December 31, 1838, of a patent, as contemplated by the treaty, containing these words: "To have and to hold the same, together with all the rights, privileges and appurtenances thereunto belonging to the said Cherokee Nation forever," did convey to the said Nation not only the right of occupancy, but also the right of alienation, or, in other words, a fee simple title to the lands, and that by a threefold title—by treaty, by act of Congress, and by patent. But the question of title had to be settled in the courts. This was done May 27, 1871, by the United States District Court, for the District of Kansas, deciding the whole matter in favor of the Missouri River, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad Company, Mr. Joy having previously to this date transferred his interest in the lands to this company.

In the meantime a great deal of excitement and trouble had resulted from the opposition of the settlers to Mr. Joy's title. Anti-Joy Leagues were organized in many of the townships of Cherokee and Crawford counties, and a general organization was effected having for its object the defense of the settlers in their "rights." The Leaguers attempted to prevent the railroad from being built through the lands, and many quarrels ensued between the Leaguers and Anti-Leaguers. On the [illegible] of June, 1869, Jeremiah Murphy, a Leaguer, who was very zealous as such, and active in the persecution of Anti Leaguers, was shot and killed by one of the latter. On the other hand, many of the Anti-Leaguers were driven from their homes, taking refuge in Fort Scott and other places. Among them were Capt. A. V. Peters, of Petersville, Dr. R. M. Elliott, of Millersburg, and Mr. F. Fry, of Columbus, Cherokee County. The following official letter of the Spring Valley League forcibly illustrates the controlling animus of the Leaguers:

PETERSVILLE, June 2, 1869.

MR. PETERS—Dear Sir: I presented your case before the league last night, who after consideration agreed to permit you to return, if you would sign an obligation to refrain from speaking, acting, writing or otherwise operating against the league, or objects that institution have in view. Said obligation is in my hand and the oath will be administered by me. Please call at my house immediately after your return.

By order of the Spring Valley League.
WILLIAM HAYHURST.

As further exhibiting the state of feeling of the settlers on these lands, the following "resolutions of Lincoln Township, Crawford County, Anti-Joy League" are introduced:

1st. Resolved, That if John T. Cox, does establish an office in Crawford County, Kan., for the purpose of affording the settlers an opportunity of "proving up," as it is termed, under this contract, we will hold the same as a common nuisance, working hurt, and doing injury and annoying the people, and (the right of self-preservation being the paramount law of nature) we have the right and will abate such nuisance; PEACEABLY if we can—FORCIBLY if we must.

2d. Resolved, That any member of our League, who shall refuse to assist in abating said John T. Cox and office, shall have meted out to him, the like treatment, that we propose to John T. Cox.

3d. Resolved, That any person living in Lincoln Township, who shall after this date, "prove up," before said John T. Cox, under the Joy contract, shall have the same or like treatment administered to HIM.

4th. Resolved, That any one sympathizing with, aiding or abetting said John T. Cox in establishing or maintaining his NUISANCE, is no better than he is, and deserves the like treatment.

5th. Resolved, That any settler belonging to this league, who will remain firm, and not "prove up," shall be protected; and any one "proving up," or buying said settler's claim shall never enjoy the land—that we pledge ourselves to HANG him higher than Haman, and without benefit of clergy.

6th. Resolved, That we mean action, and will put in force the above resolutions, and will make an example of the first person who violates any of said resolutions.

W. G. CUNNINGHAM,
J. S. ARMSWORTHY,
W. G. CLARK,
Committee.

Other similar resolutions were adopted by other leagues, and numerous violent proceedings occurred under and in accordance with them. On the 8th of February, 1869, a body of men entered the town of Baxter Springs, and proceeded to the land office. A squad went to the hotel, arrested Maj. John T. Cox and W. B. Shockley, who were in charge of the land office, took them to the office and, under the penalty of hanging Maj. Cox, demanded that the papers of the office be given up within ten minutes, but neither Cox nor Shockley knew the combination of the lock, hence a delay was occasioned during which Sheriff Seright, Capt. Hyland and many of the citizens assembled with the determination to protect the safe and the papers. The leaders of the mob thereupon held a consultation, and decided to leave the town without further efforts to obtain the papers.

Meetings were held on the one side approving the course of State Senators and Representatives, and on the other side denouncing them, some of said Senators and Representatives taking sides with and others opposing the Leaguers.

The threats made were so numerous and so terrific that it became necessary to send troops into the troubled districts to preserve law and order, and to protect life and property. The following is the proclamation issued by Gov. Harvey in relation to the troubles.

TOPEKA, May 31, 1869.

WHEREAS, Official information has been received at this office from the local authorities of the counties of Crawford and Cherokee, to the effect that the execution of the law is impeded, and that personal security and private property are endangered by the acts, and the public peace disturbed by the threats of lawless men in said counties;

Now, therefore, I, James M. Harvey, Governor of the State of Kansas, and charged by the Constitution to see that the laws are faithfully executed, do issue this my proclamation, enjoining each and all the people within the counties aforesaid, to yield due obedience to the officers of the law, to cease all acts of violence and lawlessness, and to look to the properly constituted authorities for the redress of grievances and the determination of legal rights.

JAMES M. HARVEY.

This movement on the part of the Governor was both wise and merciful. Had it not been for the presence of the troops, many outrages that were not, would certainly have been, committed by the leaguers. To the leaguers the presence of the troops was especially galling. As showing the bitterness of feeling, and intensity of hatred entertained by some of the leaguers toward the authorities, for the "tyranny" exercised over them, the following extract from the Workingman's Journal, although not the sentiment of the paper itself, expresses a deep and widespread sentiment among the settlers.

If it is the intention of Gov. Harvey and President Grant to hold the neutral land by military occupancy, we give them fair warning to commence the recruiting business, and we dare them to send another soldier on these lands to overawe the settlers. Forbearance has ceased to be a virtue; and if to fall at the hands of tyrants is our fate the sooner it comes the less it will be dreaded.

The threat was mere bombast, and the opposition to Mr. Joy by many of the leading leaguers was toward the last at least mere empty show; for while they were threatening to hang such as might make contracts for lands with Mr. Joy's agents, they were themselves secretly making such contracts, and kept up the opposition mainly for the sake of obtaining office.

The first troops sent onto the neutral lands was a company of infantry, June 10, 1869. On the 5th of August following, three additional companies of infantry and a detachment of artillery equipped as cavalry were sent. On the 9th of October, the artillery was replaced by a company of cavalry. They were quartered at Fort Scott. One company of infantry was withdrawn early in 1870, and finally, in 1872, after Mr. Joy's title to that portion of the neutral lands he had purchased, amounting to 670,000 acres, had been sustained, the remainder of the troops were from time to time withdrawn.

During the last five months of 1869, there were sold by the M. R., Ft. S. & G. R. R. Co. 117,752 acres of these neutral lands to the settlers, at an aggregate price of $518,634; and during the last seven months of 1870, 165,260 acres were sold, at an aggregate price of $1,186,764.

EARLY SETTLEMENTS.

The first attempt at a settlement within what is now Cherokee County was made in 1842, when a detachment of United States soldiers attempted to establish a fort on Spring River. The site selected by them was owned by John Rogers, a Cherokee Indian, who asked $4,000 for the piece of land, but as $1,000 was the limit, beyond which the officer in command could not go, Fort Scott was finally selected. (See Bourbon County.)

The next settlement was made in what is now Shawnee Township, in 1856, by J. Pickerell.

The population of the county was returned in 1860 as 1,501, but then Cherokee County included what had been included in the old county of McGee, extending northward to within about five miles of the northern boundary of Crawford County. During the years of the war, settlements were made, but not so rapidly as would otherwise have been the case had the Territory been public lands instead of Indian lands. But after the conclusion of the treaty between the Cherokee Nation and the United States Government, in 1866, notwithstanding the dispute between the settlers already there and James F. Joy over his title to the land, the increase in the number of the inhabitants in the county, up to 1870, was 9,537, and the total number, 11,038.

The first marriage license issued in the county was to Clark Johnson and Viena Young, who were married November 6, 1867; but the first marriage was that of John N. Burton to Mary Wilson, December 5, 1866.

The first deed executed and recorded was dated July 20, 1867; grantors, Nathan V. and Sarah A. Williams; grantee, Joseph A. Watson; property, northwest quarter of Section 9, Township 32, Range 25.

The Cherokee County Agricultural and Horticultural Society was organized November 30, 1869, at Brush Creek Schoolhouse, in Spring Valley Township. C. W. Willey was elected President; H. C. Veatch, Vice President; J. Wallace, Secretary, and B. L. Devore, Treasurer. The first fair was held the next year, and an annual exhibition has since been held.

The Cherokee County Teachers' Institute held its first session October 20, 21 and 22, 1869, at Lowell. The most notable resolution passed by the institute was one favoring equal wages to male and female teachers.

LEAD AND ZINC.

The existence of these ores, in what is now Cherokee County, is said to have been known to the Indians long before the advent of white settlers. In 1872, a positive discovery of the ore was made, in the southeastern part of the county, in what is now Garden Township, and, about the same time, indications of its presence were observed in the vicinity of Baxter Springs. Nothing, however, was done toward the development of these resources at this time. In the spring of 1877, two miners from Joplin, Mo., named John Shoe and John McAllen, started out from that place upon a prospecting expedition. Reaching Short Creek, they began making some examinations in the bed of that stream, from which they came to the conclusion that here was good prospect for lead ore. The place upon which they decided for a prospecting site belonged to a man named Nichols, from whom permission was obtained to sink a shaft. They began digging near Short Creek, and at a depth of about fifteen feet struck upon a rich vein of the mineral. Only a very brief time elapsed until the rumor of the discovery was heralded broadcast, creating the most intense excitement. Men crowded into the place from all quarters. The towns of Galena and Empire City were started, and in less than three months, each had a population of from two to three thousand people. The land in the vicinity rose rapidly in value, and that which before could be bought for $3 an acre, now brought vast sums. The 120 acre farm belonging to Nichols, which was comparatively valueless for purposes of agriculture, was sold to the West Joplin Lead & Zinc Company for $7,000. A tract of the same area adjoining this on the south, belonging to E. Moll, was sold to the Galena Mining & Smelting Company for $10,000, and a tract of eighty acres of railroad land, bordering on the east side of Moll's land, brought the sum of $1,500, and was purchased by the South Side Mining & Manufacturing Company.

It was but a short time before shafts were being sunk on every hand, and the field was undergoing rapid and complete development. The production of mineral in the county gives employment to about one thousand men. For the purpose of reducing the mineral, eight steam crushers are employed. At first the mineral was shipped to Joplin, Mo., to be smelted. A smelter was started at Galena, in 1877, by the Galena Lead & Zinc Company, as an air furnace, and, in a short time, blasts were added. The work now contains six blasts, and has a capacity for the smelting of 72,000 pounds of ore per day.

The product of lead from these mines in the first eighteen months is estimated at 6,000,000 pounds. It is now estimated at 275,000 pounds per week.

The territory in which lead ore has, as yet, been found in the county, measures about two miles square.

Zinc ore is also found in various places. It is found in connection with the lead ore, and also in places where there is no lead. This mineral forms a prominent product of mining industry, from which, in the aggregate, there is derived a greater income than from the lead interests.

The Chicago Zinc Works, at Weir City, were established in 1872, by the Chicago Zinc and Mining Company. In 1874, the works were purchased by Dr. L. D. Boone. The number of buildings erected is ten, at a cost of $100,000. Two hundred men are employed, and the capital invested in the business is $50,000. J. H. C. Gross is the present lessee of the works. This enterprise has been of immense value to Southeastern Kansas, hence, a brief synopsis of the method of manufacturing zinc is here introduced: The ore is of two distinctly different kinds—silicate and "black jack." Silicate, often called "dry bone," has the appearance of rusty brown stone, and is of various sizes, from ten inches in diameter, down. When broken, the brown rust is found to permeate the whole mass. The percentage of zinc yield from this substance is quite large, though not so large as from "black jack," a blende or sulphuret of zinc. Of this ore there are several grades, but it usually contains about one-half its weight of zinc, one-fourth sulphur, and usually a small portion of iron.

In the process of manufacture the silicate goes first to a kiln especially prepared, that by a process of intense heat the glistening, or "shine" can be all removed. It now presents, when broken, only a dull grayish cast. This heating process is for the purpose of removing all surplus material, and of preventing the zinc from being burned up in the furnace. It is then crushed or ground between rollers to powder, and then resembles very dry dust.

The "black jack" goes first to the crusher, where it is reduced to the fineness of corn meal, when it is removed to the calcining kilns. These kilns are built four together, two on each side, each having a separate fire, but all using the same smoke stack. They present the appearance of large, two-story brick ovens with three doors to each story, and are called six-story kilns. At stated intervals, a certain amount of crushed ore is poured from the top into the second story opposite the door, furthest from the fire entrance. It is then gradually shifted nearer the fire, and from story to story, until a degree of heat has been reached sufficient to expel all the sulphur. This process requires great skill and care; and even when both are exercised to the utmost, a loss of from fifteen to twenty per cent is unavoidable. There are twelve of these kilns connected with the works.

From the kilns the ore goes to the furnaces, of which there are three styles, all of the Belgian pattern. They are built two together and two pairs in a place, four under each of the two furnace buildings. Owing to the constant heat and danger of conflagration, these buildings are very cheaply constructed. The furnaces are built over a large cellar into which fall the cinders and ashes. Above these are built two narrow chambers three or four feet wide, fifteen to twenty feet long, and eight to ten feet high, with a wall between them. Across these chambers in horizontal rows and with sufficient space between them to allow the free passage of fire, are placed the retorts for the mineral. These retorts are hollow cylindrical vessels, made of fire-clay. They are about ten inches in diameter, with the hollow or core seven inches, and open at one end. Rows of these retorts fill the furnaces to the top, and are so placed that the open end projects through the outer wall and is a little lower than the other end. When the ore arrives at the furnaces it is properly mixed in such proportions as is calculated to give the proper return of quantity and quality of zinc, to which mixture is added about half its weight of powdered coke, and with this mixture the retorts are charged. After the retorts are charged there is placed endwise against the open end of each, and cemented thereto, a conical vessel, also made of fire-clay, and called a condenser. This condenser is eighteen inches long, and is open at both ends—one end is of sufficient size to fill the open end of the retort, and the condenser tapers until at the other end it is two inches in diameter. Each is so placed that the under side is nearly horizontal, and the outer end temporarily closed with clay, except a very small opening left for the escape of accumulating gases. The furnace must now be heated to such a degree as to convert the mineral into vapor, or gas, in the retorts, and upon escaping into the condenser, the vapor becomes condensed and assumes a molten or liquid state, is drawn therefrom and is molded into pigs or blocks of zinc.

The fire once started must be kept up to avoid danger to the retorts, as when furnaces are allowed to cool they are rendered worthless, and the expenditure of several hundred dollars is necessitated to replace them. The retorts are therefore charged, discharged and recharged with the furnaces in full blast—operations requiring experience, skill and great endurance of heat. The retorts must be made without flaw, else after being charged they are liable to break and fall with their contents into the furnaces and be lost. There are required each day, about thirty-five retorts and 100 condensers. To supply this demand, there is connected with the works an extensive fire-clay pottery, in which there is constantly employed a large number of men. The fire-clay is obtained from St. Louis, Mo.

The fire-brick used about the works is made in part from a bed of native clay, found four miles east of Weir City. The workmen call it "Yahoo's Clay," though it is in fact a fire-clay of an inferior grade.

Mr. Hamil, Superintendent of the calcine kilns, has built a new furnace on his own plan, somewhat after the style of blast furnaces for iron smelting, for roasting silicate. It is filled with alternate layers of coal and ore, then fired and run with blast. Though a new plan with zinc works, it bids fair to be successful.

The productions of these works amount to about 18,000 pounds of zinc per day, worth on the market from four to six cents per pound. They use about 20,000 bushels of coal and twenty tons of calcined ore per day. The wages of the 200 men employed, aggregates $9,000 per month.

THE BATTLE AND MASSACRE AT BAXTER SPRINGS, OCTOBER 6, 1863.

BY DR. W. H. WARNER, GIRARD, KAN.

About two weeks prior to the massacre at Baxter Springs, two citizen mail carriers between Fort Scott and Fort Gibson were fired upon by a small band of Quantrill's men, led by Cy Gordon. The mail carriers returned the fire, each party firing from behind trees. Both mail carriers were wounded and surrendered. This skirmish occurred about ten miles south of Baxter Springs.

One of the mail carriers, called "Fatty," was recognized by Gordon as an old chum, with whom he had roamed the streets of Leavenworth, visited the girls, etc. "Cy" had many questions to ask relating to Leavenworth, to his mother, and to various other matters, which were answered by "Fatty" to the satisfaction of "Cy;" so contrary to the usual custom of Quantrill's men, which was to kill their prisoners, the two mail carriers were set at liberty and permitted to pursue their journey to Baxter Springs—after being relieved of horses and mail matter, including dispatches between the Forts, and being informed that, as Quantrill's men were running short of blankets, kettles and other camp equipage, it would be necessary in about ten days for them to take dinner with the Union garrison at the Springs, and to relieve the garrison of such surplus material as they themselves might need.

This polite threat was communicated by "Fatty" and his companion to the commandant at the post, Lieut. Cook, of the Second Kansas Colored Infantry, but little or no attention was paid to it. "Fatty," however, had great confidence in what "Cy" Gordon had told him. He had remained in camp, under my treatment for his wounds, and was in my quarters, a log-cabin I had urged the men to build, that in case of a fight the wounded could be cared for safe from the enemies' bullets. When, on the 6th of October, 1863, we were startled by the rattle of musketry and revolvers. We were attacked, though we did not then realize it, by Quantrill's men. Cy Gordon's promise was being fulfilled.

Our garrison, up to two days previous to the attack, consisted of one company of the Second Kansas Colored Infantry, commanded by Lieut. Cook, and Company D, of the Third Wisconsin Cavalry, commanded by Lieut. John Crites, who had had command of the post, but who had been summoned to Fort Scott, leaving Lieut. Cook in command of the post. On this day, the 4th, we were re-enforced by Company C, Third Wisconsin Cavalry, under Lieut. Pond, who assumed command of the post.

Three sides of the camp were protected by logs and earth thrown up about four feet high, the west side having been removed the day before for the purpose of enlarging the camp, by command of Lieut. Pond.

On the morning of the fight, sixty picked men with all the teams and wagons of the command, were sent out to forage through the country, leaving as a garrison a fighting force of twenty-five cavalry and sixty or seventy colored troops, more than half of the white men in camp having been excused from foraging duty at sick call in the morning.

At 12 M., the enemy having quietly and unobserved crept near our camp, suddenly advanced upon us at double-quick and opened fire. Our camp had been surrounded by skirmishers. The cooking department was one hundred and fifty or two hundred feet south of the camp and near the springs. Both the cavalry and colored infantry were standing around the fire, while dinner was being taken up, when the enemy was discovered advancing and rapidly firing from the east, south and west. Riding at full gallop, they passed on the south between the men at dinner and the camp, discharging their revolvers right and left as they advanced to the balustrade. The colored soldiers and the cavalry at dinner, ran their best for camp, the cavalry seizing their carbines and revolvers and the infantry their muskets, all commenced a return fire with undaunted bravery. While this attack was being made, the main body of the enemy galloped from the woods skirting Spring River on the east, forming in line sixty or eighty rods north of camp, on the ridge, apparently with the purpose of making a charge upon us in full force, simultaneously with an attack by the advance which had passed around the camp to the west.

At the first attack, Lieut. Pond unlimbered the howitzer, manned it the best he could, and loaded it himself with twelve pound shell. Not one of the command at that time was found who knew anything of artillery drill, and as a consequence the fuse was not cut, so the shell fell far short of the enemy; but if it did them no damage, the firing of it notified them that we had such an instrument of death in our hands. Men never fought more willingly nor courageously, and for twenty or thirty minutes there was a ceaseless rattle of musketry and revolvers and booming of the cannon. After the first dash, the enemy on the west retreated, scattered and fought from behind the shelter of trees and the south bank of the creek, and at the expiration of half an hour withdrew, unaccountably to us, one by one, from the fight. The main body on the north, without advancing, countermarched on a gallop back to the woods and advanced toward us a second time as though undecided whether or not to attack. They then returned to the woods. One of the enemy, apparently an officer, had a duel with the saddler of Company D, Third Wisconsin, until the latter having emptied his revolver, rushed from behind his oak tree to his tent after his carbine, which, on his return to his barricade, he brought to his shoulder, with no load, when his adversary, casting his eyes around and discovering himself to be alone, exclaimed, "Where in hell are my men," and galloped away unscathed, the last of the enemy, into the forest.

All was now quiet and still like a calm after a furious storm, and we had time to make a list of the casualties of the fight. Of the forces at the Springs, eight white and one colored man were killed, and from twelve to fifteen wounded, including one woman shot through the heel, and a little child shot through the lungs. Lieut. Cook was killed and a man who was with him, the two being in the woods practicing with their revolvers. The husband of the wounded woman, and the father of the wounded child, were shot in cold blood, the latter by a former schoolmate and cousin. Four or six other married men were killed. A teamster perceiving an old acquaintance among the advancing enemy, tossed his revolver toward him in token of surrender, and was immediately shot by his former neighbor and friend, through the abdomen and died in thirty minutes. The colored man who was killed while within our works and comparatively out of danger, discovering his former master on the hill across the creek, ran to meet him with joyous acclamation, and was, by his old master, shot through the heart, his body rolling down the hillside in the clear waters of the brook.

Among the prisoners of our side taken were two or three who had been mere spectators of the battle and about half a dozen others who were hunting, looking for lumber or strolling in the woods. Near sundown they were paroled and came into camp.

For an hour or two all was quiet with the exception of preparations to receive an expected renewed attack. We did not know who our enemy was, nor why he had so suddenly left us, but we fully expected him to return.

About 2 or 3 o'clock in the afternoon, Maj. B. S. Henning of Gen. Blunt's Staff rode into camp, and told us of the massacre on the prairie, and called on Lieut. Pond for a volunteer guard of two or three men to return with him to search for Gen. Blunt, whom he believed to be alive and hiding somewhere in the vicinity of the massacre. The Major informed us that the enemy was Quantrill and his guerrillas.

Soon after the Major left us, a messenger bearing a flag of truce approached our camp. He brought from Quantrill a request for an exchange of prisoners. As we had taken no prisoners, Lieut. Pond returned as answer a proposition that each party should unconditionally release all the prisoners he held. Soon afterward we heard on the prairie nearly west of us, quick successive reports of fire-arms and it is probable that then the prisoners taken by Quantrill were killed.

Quantrill now at the head of his entire force, supposed to be about three hundred, approached our camp, as we had anticipated, formed in line of battle and halted on the south bank of the creek where now stands the city of Baxter Springs, about eighty rods southwest from our camp. Our men were all quietly awaiting his charge, prepared and determined to give him a warm reception. The gap on the west side of our breastworks had been closed by placing therein sutler's wagons, poles, rails, ropes, etc., etc., and it would have been difficult for cavalry to make a successful charge upon us from that direction, especially as our howitzer was mounted conspicuously in the front with fuse properly cut, and now happily manned with skilled men. Knowing our enemy, we were all, white men and black, commissioned officers and private soldiers, fully determined to sell our lives as dearly as possible, and to die rather than to surrender, for to surrender would only be certain death. Thus we remained thirty minutes—it might have been more, it might have been less, every minute seemed as an hour, when suddenly he wheeled and left us, marching south, and to our great relief we saw him no more.

About sundown, Maj. Henning returned to our camp accompanied by Gen. Blunt. After dark, one by one, the wounded from the prairie came into camp. They were most of them so badly disfigured and covered with blood as not to be recognizable. All had been left upon the prairie for dead. Jack Arnold came in with five or six shots in the face which could not be recognized as belonging to a human being. Others received from five to eight wounds in different parts of the body, but a large proportion of the wounds were in the face and head. Only ten or eleven wounded of the Federal forces, by feigning death escaped death, and crept in after dark, surprised and rejoiced to find us still alive and in possession. It was with good reason generally believed after the battle by Gen. Blunt's command, that our garrison had been captured in the morning, as Quantrill, when first seen by them, was coming from the direction of our camp. When first seen by them, as Quantrill's soldiers were all dressed in Union blue, they were supposed to be a detail from the garrison coming to pay their respects to Blunt's command and escort them into camp. Gen. Blunt had halted his command, and ordered his headquarters band in front. The members of the band had arranged themselves in position, and had their music and instruments in readiness to pay a welcome to their supposed friends. Gen. Blunt and members of his staff were in the ambulance, their horses being led by Orderlies; all were joyous in anticipation of an immediate march into our camp, a hearty dinner, and a good night's rest among friends, when Quantrill's order was given to his men to charge upon them. His command was instantly obeyed. His men advanced upon Blunt's body guard with terrific, terrible force, with a revolver in each hand, and yelling like demons which they were.

In a moment all was changed. Supposed friends became foes of the fiercest kind. Happiness and hope became terror and despair. Pleasure became pain, and life became death. Panic seized every one. Blunt's little command was in the worst position possible to fight. No concerted action could be had. Each must fight or flee for himself, so dire and complete was the surprise, and so overwhelming the charge. Gen. Blunt gave no command. A command would have been of no avail, for his men soon learned that Quantrill, the bloody-handed and dreaded Quantrill, who six weeks before, had sacked and burned Lawrence, the beautiful city on the Kaw, and murdered in cold blood two hundred of her people, and who was known to give no quarter, was their foe. The only thought in the mind of each was how to save his life. But for the most of them no means of escape was found. Only a few on the fleetest horses got away. The case of the band was especially sad. They had a splendid wagon built for their especial use, and they were equipped in elegant uniforms, with side arms, fancy swords and revolvers made not for fighting but for show. They were non-belligerents. Upon realizing the situation, the driver wheeled his horses westward, and undertook by rapid running to escape, but in less than a mile he was overtaken, and himself and every member of the band shot dead. Fire was set to the wagon, and many of their bodies charred beyond recognition. Most of them had been chosen from the Third Wisconsin Cavalry. Their leader, Pilage, was a noble, kind-hearted, educated and liberal German, from Madison, Wis. His remains could be distinguished from those of his dead companions in no way but by the gold cord on his pants. The remains of all had been stripped of everything of value.

Gen. Blunt escaped in the following manner: He and Maj. Curtis, his Adjutant General, were together, when they saw two openings in the enemy's ranks. Blunt told Curtis to run for the one and he would try to escape through the other. In a few moments he looked back and saw Maj. Curtis following him. At this time Gen. Blunt's horse leaped across a ravine, scarcely keeping his feet, and throwing his rider onto his neck, but recovering himself he sped on and carried the General safely to the woods. Next day Maj. Curtis' body was found in this ravine with a bullet through his temple, his revolver near him.

Gen. Blunt's command consisted of his staff—Major B. S. Henning, Capt. Farr and Major Curtis; his headquarters clerks, the band, twelve or fourteen six-mule teams; ambulance, one company (D) of the Third Wisconsin Cavalry, and one company (A) of the Fourteenth Kansas Cavalry. All the headquarters' books, uniforms and other property were captured, including over $1,000 in money.

The 7th of October was the saddest the writer and his companions ever saw. The fearful carnage of the day before was more fully realized every passing hour. All our available force was kept busily employed from early light until darkness covered the field of blood, searching for and bringing into camp the dead. Quantrill had thoroughly done his work. It was evidently his intention that none should be left alive. If mercy was shown, it was in the fact that all but one were shot through the temple, thus causing instant death. This one was Capt. Farr, who, shot through the hips and pelvis, died a lingering, agonizing death.

The whole number belonging to Gen. Blunt's command killed in the battle, if battle it can be called where all the fighting was done by one side, was ninety-three, and at the post eight, making one hundred and one in all. Quantrill lost two in killed at our camp

The foraging party under Orderly (afterward Lieutenant) Homer W. Pond, of about sixty of our best cavalrymen, detached their mules from their wagons, and as many as could mounted, and by the way of Carthage and Lamar, Mo., reached Fort Scott in a few days in safety.

My theory of the battle is that about three days before, prior to the attack upon our garrison, Quantrill had had one or more spies in our camp, probably in the night time, before Lieut. Pond re-enforced us with Company C, of the Third Wisconsin, and the howitzer. He had planned his attack upon us, anticipating an easy victory on account of our supposed weakness, and was entirely ignorant of Blunt's movements or presence in the vicinity. When the main body of his command filed out of the woods on the east on the gallop to charge us from the north, he discovered on his right Blunt's command, halted, and preparing to make a grand entry into our camp for dinner. He instantly realized that he was between two forces, our garrison on his left and Blunt's command on his right. Retiring for a moment to the woods for consultation, he re-appeared on the north, as we supposed to attack us, but really for the purpose of charging upon and disposing of Blunt's command, before effecting our capture. And when, after the massacre of Blunt's body guard, he again re-appeared on the hill and stood drawn up in line as if intending to attack us, he must have desisted from the attack on account of our evident thorough preparations to receive him.

It is true history, I believe, though stated otherwise by some, that the Federal forces on the prairie made no stand, and did not fire a gun, but ran at the first, as soon as they realized that the charging party was an enemy, and many of the men threw away their carbines to lighten their weight.

The usual precautions, taken when on a march, were not taken; there were no deploys nor advance guards. Gen. Blunt was severely censured by the press and individuals for dereliction of duty for not using the ordinary precautions against surprise or sudden attack by an enemy, by those who knew the facts. There had been created for him a department, with headquarters at Fort Gibson. When attacked, he was on the way to his new headquarters, to assume command of his department. He had taken great pains to secure a grand and imposing outfit, including a department band of skilled musicians, elegantly uniformed, and he had procured a full corps of department clerks, and new uniforms for himself and staff.

After suffering this sad misfortune, he never assumed command at Fort Gibson; but after remaining five or six days in our camp at Baxter Springs, he returned to Fort Scott.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION AND COUNTY SEAT TROUBLES.

The county was permanently organized in February, 1867. On the 5th of November following, an election for county officers was held, which resulted in electing the following officers by the vote attached to their respective names: Commissioners, W. C. Pender, 533; P. G. Noel, 330; Jonathan D. Busk, 335; Probate Judge, J. B. Hodgens, 337; District Clerk, L. Williams, 344; County Clerk, William Little, 331; Register of Deeds, C. A. Keithly, 333; Sheriff, W. G. Seright, 323; Treasurer, J. J. Goodner, 336; Surveyor, J. C. Lucas, 512; Assessor, Clinton McMickle, 443; Coroner, A. Lynch, 494; Superintendent of Instruction, William Givens, 329. On the proposition to strike the word "white" out of the Constitution, the vote stood 220 for, 290 against; on the proposition to strike out the word "male," the vote stood 232 for, and 269 against; and on the proposition to limit the exercise of the elective franchise to loyal persons, the vote was 404 for it, to 86 against.

At that time the county had been divided into the following townships: Pleasant View, Shawnee, Spring Valley, Lyon, Lola, Salamanca, Ross, Sheridan and Neosho.

The first meeting of the Commissioners was held at Pleasant View, at which time Sidney Smith was appointed to fill the vacancy in the board caused by the failure of Jonathan D. Busk to qualify, and the first account allowed was that of John D. Coulter as County Attorney, for $11.40. The second meeting was held February 6, 1868, at which John Mansfield was appointed County Treasurer to fill the vacancy caused by the failure to qualify of J. J. Goodner. The Treasurer's bond was fixed at $16,000. D. R. Martin was appointed Superintendent of Public Instruction. A grand jury was called to meet May 4, 1868, at Baxter Springs.

An election was held in November, 1869, which is important as showing the sentiment of the settlers on the question of contesting Mr. Joy's title to that portion of the Neutral Lands which he had purchased of the Secretary of the Interior, as Trustee for the Cherokee Indians. The "Anti-Joy" settlers had formed a "Union" in every township, and had declared themselves in opposition to land monopolies, corruption in office, and wrong and oppression in every form. They opposed the presence of troops on the Neutral Lands, and severely censured Sheriff Seright for his certificate to the Governor setting forth his inability to execute the laws and asking for troops, and denounced the certificate as false, scandalous and malicious.

The Settler's Union elected one Commissioner out of three by a majority of 22 out of a total vote of 1,166; the other two Commissioners being elected by the "Joy" settlers, by majorities of 18 and 2 respectively out of about the same total vote. For Representative in the Legislature according to the face of the returns, J. B. Hodgens, "Joy" candidate, had 589 votes, while Amos Sanford, "Anti-Joy," had 587; but upon a contest it was decided that a few illegal votes had been cast for Hodgens, and this gave the seat to Mr. Sanford. J. S. Vincent, "Anti-Joy" candidate for Sheriff, was elected by a majority of two over his opponent, F. C. Turner, the vote being 581 to 579. J. C. Dunlavy, "Anti-Joy" candidate for Clerk, had a majority of 70 over his opponent, I. W. Davis; M. W. Lewis, "Anti-Joy" candidate for Register of Deeds, was defeated by a majority of 2 by John Little; S. S. Smith, "Anti-Joy" candidate for Treasurer, was elected by a majority of 9, over J. J. Goodner; J. H. Walker, "Anti-Joy" candidate for Coroner, was defeated by a majority of 8, and J. Wallace, "Anti-Joy" candidate for Surveyor, was elected by a majority of 69. These results show that the electors were very nearly equally divided on the question of buying land under the "Joy contracts."

Originally, the county seat was temporarily located at Freepoint, but so far as can be ascertained no business was transacted at this point, and in 1867, the county seat was temporarily located at Pleasant View. An election was held November 5, 1867, for the permanent location of the county seat. The total number of votes cast was 139, of which Baxter Springs received 136, and Cherokee Center 3. The last meeting of the Commissioners at Pleasant View was held April 10, 1868, and the first at Baxter Springs April 14. Thomas Little was allowed $5 for moving the records from one place to the other.

A vote was then taken May 12, 1868, but as no place had received a majority of the votes, another election was held May 26, and as the result of this election Baxter Springs was declared to have received a majority of the votes, and so retained the county seat. The geographical center of the county had competed with Baxter Springs for the prize and had lost, as many believed, through fraud. The Commissioners, therefore, upon application, granted another election which was held February 17, 1869. It was firmly believed by those who favored the geographical center, that if a fair election could be held, the question would be decided in their favor. But they learned through espionage that certain parties at Baxter Springs were determined to win as they had done before—by stuffing the ballot box. It was therefore decided by those favoring the geographical center (Columbus), to cast if necessary more fraudulent votes than Baxter Springs, and thus to win in any event. One township was thereupon selected to cast the number of votes necessary to defeat Baxter Springs, no matter how many fraudulent votes the latter place might cast. This township was Lola. The vote was canvassed on the 20th of February, and it was found that Baxter Springs had in her favor a total vote of 1,118. Of this number the town of Baxter Springs had furnished 1,045, the balance of the county having cast 73 in her favor. The returns from the whole county were in except those from Lola Township, and it was found that Columbus had but 799 votes. The party intrusted with the transmission of the returns from Lola Township, upon arriving at the court where the vote was being canvassed, found that he had "lost" the returns. He thereupon immediately set out to find them. He soon returned, having found them "in the lining of his overcoat," and then it was found that little Lola had done her duty nobly, she having come up smiling with 352 votes for Columbus, thus bringing up the total vote for Columbus to 1,151—a majority of 33 over Baxter Springs.

As showing the fraudulent character of the vote cast at this election, the following comparisons are useful: The total vote on county seat was 2,276, while the total vote for President in November, 1868, was but 1,358, Lola Township having cast but 102, and Baxter Springs but 112. And in 1882, the total vote for Governor in Lola Township was only 203, while in Baxter Springs it was 182, and the total vote in Spring Valley Township in which Baxter Springs is located, including the vote of Baxter Springs, was but 376.

Columbus having become the county seat, a "temporary court house" was erected in the winter of 1870–71, at a cost of about $1,400, on the northeast corner of the public square. It is an incommodious two-story frame building, and still is occupied for the purposes for which it was erected.

The list of State Senators from Cherokee County, with date of election, is as follows: W. N. Matheny, 1873–74; E. C. Wells, 1875–76; J. R. Hallowell, 1877–79; B. F. Hogg, 1881.

The State Representatives elected from this county, with date of election, have been as follows: C. C. McDowell, 1869; Amos Sanford, 1870; George W. Wood, 1871; George W. Wood and S. T. Kennedy, 1872; A. F. Childs and C. W. Harvey, 1873; L. T. Stowell and L. Conklin, 1874; H. H. Angell and W. E. Cowan, 1875; J. H. Smith and J. R. Hallowell, 1876; A. F. Harreld, S. W. Smith and H. W. SCHOOL AND OTHER STATISTICS.

The public schools of the county have advanced with its growth. There are 100 districts, and 100 schoolhouses—1 log house, 1 brick, 3 stone and 95 frame. The total number of school rooms is 117. The enumeration of school children for 1882, was 8,154—4,217 males, 3,937 females; the total enrollment was 4,513—males, 2,374; females, 2,139; the average attendance was 1,992—males, 984, females, 1,008. The number of teachers employed was 159—males, 74, females, 85; the average monthly wages for males was $35.50, for females, $27.90. The total valuation of school property was returned at $106,340, this is known to be too low, and $125,000 is deemed a fair estimate. The average tax for school purposes was 8⅔ mills; the total receipts were $42,185.99, and the total expenditures, $42,185.99.

The personal property of the county is valued at $552,720; village lots at $341,093; farming lands at $1,913,451, and railroad property at $508,977.63; total taxable valuation, $3,316,241.63.

Crops.—The acreage of the principal crops in 1882 was as follows: Winter wheat, 28,804; rye, 463; corn, 71,360; oats, 14,700; buckwheat, 23; Irish potatoes, 700; sweet potatoes, 106; sorghum, 360; castor beans, 872; cotton, 68; flax, 8,270; millet and Hungarian, 3,536; pearl millet, 63; meadow—timothy, 854; clover, 136; other tame grasses, 240; prairie, 31,654; pasture—timothy, 278; clover, 29; other tame grasses, 1,663; prairie, 39,760.

Of vineyards there were 67 acres, and 16 gallons of wine were made during the year.

But little has been in the cultivation of forest trees. There were in 1882, of cottonwood 8 acres, walnut, 31, maple, 191, and of other varieties, 120 acres, making a total of 350 acres.

The number of rods of the different kinds of fence was as follows: board, 16,819; rail, 125,011; stone, 2,338; hedge, 502,565; wire, 115,979;—total, 762,712, or 2,383.5 miles.

The coal mining industry of Cherokee County is a very important one. The first mining was done in 1870, since which time the aggregate amount of coal raised has steadily increased, though at particular mines the amount has in some cases diminished. In 1872, there were raised upward of 16,000 tons; in 1881, there were 135,000 tons mined at Stilson, Scammonville and Weir City, the value of which to the county could not be less than $270,000. It is estimated that for 1882, not less than 300,000 tons were mined, the value of which to the county would be at least $600,000.

In 1860, the population of the county was 1,501; in 1870, 11,038; in 1875, 12,223; in 1878 17,770; in 1880, 21,967; in 1882, 23,232, divided among the townships and cities as follows: Pleasant View, 1,057; Cherokee, 1,332; Mineral, 1,224; Ross, 1,235; Sheridan, 1,644; Lola, 1,307; Salamanca, 739; Crawford, 1,031; Shawnee, 930; Lowell, including Galena, 3,721; Gardner, 1,128; Spring Valley, 1,373; Lyon, 942; Neosho, 1,237; Baxter Springs, 1,237, Empire City, 1,054 and Columbus, 2,021.

There are two main lines of railroad in this county—the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf, and the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad; the former extends from north to south, and the latter from east to west, intersecting at Columbus. The Short Creek & Joplin Railroad extends from Baxter Springs northwestwardly through Empire City, to Joplin, Mo. The total number of miles of railroad in Cherokee County is 60. No county railroad bonds have been issued.

COLUMBUS.

Columbus, the county seat, is beautifully located at the geographical center of the county and at the intersection of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad with the St. Louis & San Francisco. It was named Columbus by F. Fry, after the capital of Ohio, and is now a lively and flourishing city of about 2,300 inhabitants.

The first settler on what is now the town site was John Appleby, who, in February, 1868, built a box house on Lot 17, Block 16, of the original plat of the town. The next house was commenced by Judge Fry in May following. When completed, the Judge opened therein the first hotel in the town; but, in the meantime, Martin Jones completed a dwelling house in June.

In the spring of 1868 a town company was organized, consisting of fourteen members, which laid off for a town site the southwest quarter of Section 13. As far as can be ascertained, the following were members of this company: Dr. Bailey, William Little, Z. Williams, H. Scovell, John Hanson, E. Hall, S. Houston, John Appleby, F. Fry and M. Jones. Some time in the early summer, a new town company was organized, consisting of four members, each of whom owned a quarter of Section 13, and each of whom donated a portion of his quarter-section, so that in the aggregate the town site consisted of about 100 acres, and was in the center of the section. This new town company consisted originally of F. Fry, John Appleby, H. Scovell and H. A. Scovell. Early in 1869, Dr. J. N. Lee bought Appleby's interest, and S. S. Smith bought H. A. Scovell's interest.

The first store opened in Columbus was by Dr. J. N. Lee, on December 25, 1868, the building having been completed in November. The second business established was a grocery store by Scovell & Hanson, in the spring of 1869, and the third was a dry goods and grocery by Bliss & Middaugh in August following. Dr. J. H. Walker was the first practicing physician, John Appleby the first Justice of the Peace, and F. Fry the first lawyer, though Martin Jones conducted the first law suit, before Justice Appleby. The first blacksmith was George Thorp, who started his shop in the spring of 1869. The first birth was that of Mary Ann Fry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Fry, November 7, 1868. The first marriage was that of John Stone to Miss Mary Burger, in March, 1869, and the first death that of a daughter of Jeremiah Shuck, in the spring of 1869. The first school teacher was Miss Anna Wilson, now Mrs. Judge Miller, who taught a select school in the spring of 1870 in the Baptist Church. The first public school was taught in the spring of 1871 in a stone schoolhouse, erected the fall and winter previous.

From the time the county seat question was settled in favor of Columbus, the town made rapid progress. Additions were made to the town site, to the population and to the business enterprises, and when on March 24, 1870, the M. R., Ft. S. & G. R. R. Company's graders broke ground for the building of a depot, the permanency and prosperity of the town were assured. At that time, important events followed each other in rapid succession. On the 8th of April, the first freight train entered Columbus; on the 11th, the first passenger train arrived, and, on the 18th, the people of Columbus enjoyed a free excursion to Fort Scott.

On the 11th of April, Columbus was incorporated as a town, the Trustees appointed by the Probate Judge being as follows: Samuel Freligh, J. R. Hallowell, J. S. Hunt, J. N. Lee and C. E. Middaugh. On the next day the Trustees met, and organized by electing Samuel Freligh President and J. R. Hallowell Clerk. At this time the town had 400 inhabitants.

At the April election of 1871, the town was organized as a city of the third class, with a population of 700, and in the spring of 1882 as a city of the second class, with a population of 2,200. The Mayors, with the dates of their election, have been as follows: Leland J. Webb, 1871; John N. Ritter, 1872; T. P. Anderson, 1873; J. H. Ludlow, 1874 and 1875; C. A. Saunders, 1876; George Hoyt, 1877; W. C. Lykins, 1878; S. O. McDowell, 1879–80–81 and 1882.

In January, 1873, on account of the high price at which lots were held, a movement was inaugurated to remove the town to a new site, one-half mile east of its present location, onto the farm of George Theis. A joint stock company was organized and incorporated, a contract made by this company with Mr. Theis, and subscriptions to the stock of the company in shares of $100 each received. Each holder of a share was entitled to draw one business and two resident lots in the "Eastern Addition to Columbus." The plat of this addition was filed March 5, 1873. At the drawing excitement ran high, preparations were immediately thereafter made to remove several residences from the old to the new site, and for a time every indication betokened a general moving of the town; but, just in time to prevent it, the owners of lots in the old town site reduced the price of their lots, and the movement was thus prevented.

In the summer of 1873, the Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad Company made an addition to the city of a row of blocks on the south and west of the original site; on the 11th of March, 1875, Lee's First Addition was made on the north; on the 14th of December, 1876, Lee's Second Addition was made, north of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway; on the 16th of April, 1878, the Gulf Railroad Company made their second addition, on the south; on the 8th of April, 1880, the same company made a third addition, between Main street and the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway; on the 10th of May, 1881, they made a fourth addition, east of their own depot; on the 17th of the same month, Slem Lisle made an addition east of the Gulf Railway, and between Main street and the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway, which is named Park Addition, and in January, 1883, he made another addition, east of Park Addition. The several additions have increased the town site to the aggregate of about one section of land.

The first considerable fire in Columbus occurred early on the morning of January 3, 1883. Ten frame buildings on the south side of the public square were consumed. The total loss was $19,950, upon which there was an insurance of $5,825.

The following is the proportion of solids in the Columbus mineral waters, in grains: Chloride of sodium, 31.20; chloride of potassium, 1.94; sulphate of potassium, 2.01 ; nitrate of sodium, 6.05 ; carbonate of iron, 4.11 ; carbonate of calcium, 20.95; arsenicum, 0.50 ; silica, 7.00 ; organic matter, 0.40 ; total number of grains, 74.16.

The mean temperature of the water at the bottom of the well is 56° Fahrenheit. The combinations of the salts of iron with the alkaline carbonates causes the precipitation of fernic hydrate, while in contact with the acids of the stomach, and carbonic acid gas is produced.*

SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES.

The present two-story stone school building was erected in the winter of 1870–71, and the first public school in Columbus was taught therein in the spring of 1871, by O. W. McNulty. Since this time, the schools have grown with the growth of the town, and steadily improved with the general progress made in the art of teaching. To W. H. Timberlake is due great credit for the enviable position maintained by the public schools of Columbus before the people of the county. Under his superintendency, which lasted from 1874 to 1879, a public school library was established, a monthly school journal was published, and a lecture course instituted. An impetus was thus given to the cause of education, which was widely felt, and has been of lasting benefit.

Six teachers are now employed, and there is a school population of 642. Prof. L. M. Cutler is at the present time in charge of the schools, as Superintendent, and is assisted by six teachers—Sallie Hutsel, Annie Snevely, Ida Vincent, Marilla Odell, Nellie Patty and Mr. Robbins.

The First Baptist Church was organized, with twelve members, at a meeting held March 20, 1870, over which Elder C. A. Bateman presided. The first regular pastor was Rev. Mr. Maver, the second Rev. J. M. Lappin, who remained until March, 1872. Then followed, in succession, Revs. Messrs. Post, Lewis, Pierce and C. T. Floyd, who served about a year, commencing in April, 1875. The church was then without a regular pastor until July, 1882, when Rev. F. M. Bowman, of Missouri, was called, and who now preaches twice a month. The present membership is twenty-two.

The Columbus Union Sunday School was organized in the Baptist Chapel May 8, 1870. Dr. A. F. Childs was elected Superintendent, and J. S. Vincent, Secretary. This Sunday school continued five years. The Baptist Sunday school was organized August 22, 1882, with thirty-two scholars, L. D. Dana being elected Superintendent.

The Methodist Church was organized, with fifteen members, May 22, 1870. Before this time, there had been preaching by Rev. J. Kirchner, in 1869, and by Rev. Boyd Lowe, in March, 1870, the latter of whom was the first regular minister of the church, holding services once in four weeks. He has been succeeded by the following ministers: Rev. S. W. Bliss, who came in October, 1870; F. H. Burrows, February, 1871; Clement Combe, May, 1871; H. H. Scaggs, May, 1872; A. Thornbrue, 1873; William Sibley, March, 1874, assisted by Mr. Marey; John Kirby, 1875; David Griffith, March, 1877; L. W. Thrall, 1878; Hugh McBirney, 1879, and A. G. Robb, the present pastor, in 1881.

Religious services were at first held in the court house, and afterward in the opera house. The building of the present church was commenced in 1873; it was inclosed in 1874, and completed in 1875, at a total cost of $4,000. The present membership is 210.

The Sunday school was organized in December, 1871, S. O. McDowell being first Superintendent; L. L. Doubleday was elected Superintendent in 1874, and John N. Ritter, the present Superintendent, in 1877. There is an average attendance of 120 scholars.

The Christian Church was organized in October, 1870, with forty members, by J. A. Murray, who served the church in the capacity of preacher for two years. He was succeeded by W. R. Cowley, who was for some years the regular minister. From this time until 1880, when Rev. Kirk Baxter was called, the church was without regular services, and depended upon Messrs. Murray and Cowley for occasional sermons. Kirk Baxter remained until December 1, 1882, when he was succeeded by Elder C.C. Deweese. The present church building was erected in July, 1880, at a cost of $3,000. A Sunday school was immediately afterward organized, and Mrs. S. A. Mentzer elected Superintendent. At first, there were 80 scholars; now there are 125. The school meets regularly every Sunday; is well attended, and is a source of great promise and pride to the church.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in 1871. The pastors of this church have been Rev. Messrs. Hawkins, Warren Mayo, W. Coleman and H. D. Moore, the present pastor, who was called to the charge in the early part of 1881. The present church building, a substantial stone structure, was erected in 1878, at a cost of $4,500. The present membership of the church is sixty-five.

A Sunday school was organized in 1874, and is now in a very flourishing condition, having 100 scholars enrolled.

After acceptance they became Company D, of the Third Wisconsin Volunteers, with which company he remained until his discharge July 1, 1864, participating with them in many of the more important engagements of the rebellion. LOT P. PATTY, M. D., was born in Dayton, Montgomery County, Ohio, January 28, 1821. His parents dying when he was only ten years of age, he was left on his own resources, and we find him at the age of eighteen and unaided but by his own exertions, taking up the study of his profession under the preceptorship of Dr. Lindsey, of Ohio, and later attending lectures at the Ohio Medical College of Cincinnati, from which he graduated in 1842. He then began the practice of his profession in Miami County, Ohio, and after a few years of active practice, he traveled through the western country and finally located in Huntington County, Ind., where he remained until 1848. He then made an extensive trip through the western States and eventually located at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, where he followed his profession for a few years, after which he located in St. Louis, and continued the practice of his profession until 1854. He then came to Kansas and located at Leavenworth, where he practiced about three years. During this time the State was agitated politically, and Dr. Patty took an active part with the Anti-Slavery Democrats, but being unable to organize that party he allied himself with the Free-State party, which he subsequently represented in the Kansas Legislature, known as the Topeka Constitution, and here began the troubles that tested the true nobility of his manhood. For this he was persecuted, his house was fired into, his life threatened, and he was for the time being compelled to leave his adopted State. He immediately repaired to his native State and interested many in behalf of the principles he had espoused, and formed a body of men prepared for the consequences, returning here. He was, however, unmolested upon his return, and in the winter of 1856-57 he located in Topeka and continued the practice of his profession until 1867. In 1868 he located here and has been very reputably and successfully connected with the practice of his profession since, and an avowed supporter of the party that has made his adopted State what it is to-day. At four years of age, he moved with his parents to Chautauqua County, N. Y., where he lived till 1866. In the spring of 1866, he went to Illinois, where he engaged in business for about six years, principally soliciting and collecting for an insurance company, after which time he came to Kansas and was employed by the Missouri River, Fort Scott & Galveston Railway Company as agent at Columbus and other points on the road for about six years. In 1876, he was elected Mayor of the city of Columbus. During his administration, the city indebtedness was reduced from $1,800 to about $800 without making a levy on the taxable property for city purposes for a single cent. It being the first and only administration that had made no levy for city purposes in the history of the city either before or after his administration. In 1877, he was elected County Clerk of Cherokee County, and re-elected in 1879, holding the office four years. In 1879, was the only candidate elected on the Democratic ticket in the county. At the expiration of the second term of office as County Clerk, he engaged in the real estate and loan business. Has been engaged in his present business about one year. The first settlers of Cherokee County believed the Government would extend to them the usual terms of purchase or homestead to their lands; but, instead, the government sold what was known as the Cherokee Neutral Lands, which embraced the lands of Cherokee and other counties, to James F. Joy and the Missouri River, Fort Scott & Galveston Railway Company for $1 per acre. The railroad company placed such a high price on their lands that the settlers refused to purchase and organized a land league to oppose the railroad company. The leaguers would not purchase the land themselves, and, in self-defence, refused to let others purchase at prices and on terms of the railroad company. The government sent troops into the county to guard the railroad. The land question overshadowed all others, and, for a few years, was about all the politics in Cherokee County. This state of affairs was keeping out emigration and retarding the growth of the county. Several committees had been sent to Boston and other places to confer with the railroad officials and try and compromise the trouble, but all had failed to accomplish any good. In January, 1880, Mr. Saunders, with the assistance of two or three citizens of the county, succeeded in effecting a compromise with the railroad company, by which the railroad company agreed to make a large reduction on price of their lands if the settlers would purchase at least 50,000 acres for cash by July 1, 1880. The proposition was accepted by the people, and Mr. Saunders started at once for New York and the East to negotiate a loan for the people to purchase their homes with. The arrangements were so well managed that by July 1, 1880, Mr. Saunders had sold and paid the company for 118,000 acres, he being appointed to manage the business by both the people and railroad company. After many years of trouble and failure to compromise, Mr. Saunders succeeded in arranging a satisfactory settlement of the "vexed land question" so quietly that none outside of the league knew of it until the matter was all settled, and to him, more than any other person, is due the credit for obtaining for the farmers of Cherokee County their homes and settling a trouble since which has put the county on the highway to prosperity. He is interested in lead and zinc mines in Cherokee County, and owns two good farms in the same county. Also owns an orange grove in Florida of 500 trees. BAXTER SPRINGS.

This beautiful little city is situated in the southern part of Cherokee County, near Spring River, and about twelve miles south of Columbus and one mile north of the Indian Territory. The ground upon which the city stands borders on either side of a small ravine which not only adds to the picturesqueness of the site, but as well affords most excellent drainage.

The first settlement was made in the vicinity by A. Baxter, in 1858, whose claim adjoined the site on the northeast. Hitherto the land belonged to the Government, and was known as the Government strip. In 1865, a man by the name of Jeff Davis and one Armstrong, each took claims, Davis locating his claim on the west side of Baxter's, and Armstrong's claim bounded Davis' claim on the south. The claim shanties of these three men were the only buildings to be seen in the vicinity where the town is now located. The restrictions upon the Texas cattle drive caused them to halt near this place, which was the main cause for starting a town.

In 1866, Capt. M. Mann and J. J. Barnes laid out a town site of eighty acres, and named it Baxter Springs, in honor of A. Baxter, the first settler, and also for the springs that are found here, which are said to possess medical properties. The site was mostly upon the Davis claim, and a part on the Armstrong claim, both of which came into the possession of Mann and Barnes.

Several additions have since been made to the site, and it now comprises an area of about one entire section. These additions are Brewster's first and second, Dunbar's first and second, Barnes', Giswolds', Riggins', Mann's, Soloman's, Kingman's and Vanepp's Additions, the latter being a part of the Baxter farm.

The first house built upon the site was the log dwelling belonging to Armstrong and Davis. This, however, was erected prior to the establishment of the site, as such. The first building erected upon the site, after it was laid out, was a small shanty built by Ben Gump. The next was a small store, built by A. F. Powell, in which he put a stock of general goods. Bobstein & Dudley erected a room, and A. Mathews put in it a stock of hardware. B. F. Townsend next opened a shoe store. These, together with a hotel built by W. Hyland, were the only business buildings erected in 1866. Stimulated by the business created by the immense Texas cattle trade, the town grew with great rapidity, and everybody was in a fever heat of excitement. Money was plenty and the merchants did a flourishing business. Society was in a state of chaos. Here was a rendezvous for the notorious Texas cow boy, the gambler, prostitute, saloon keeper, and the multitude of villains and ruffians which infest these cattle towns. Saloons and bawdy and dance houses of the most virulent character were numerous, and the town, especially during the season when the cattle were being driven in, was in one continuous state of uproar, night and day. So great, indeed, was the excitement and the consequent rapid growth, that, as early as 1872, the town had a population of nearly 4,000. This condition of things inspired the people of the town with the utmost confidence in the greatness of their future. As a result of this, a most lavish system of expenditure of the public money was made toward public enterprise and improvement. In 1869, the town voted bonds to the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad to the amount of $150,000. In 1871, $25,000 in bonds were voted, and a school building was erected costing the full amount. During the same year, $10,000 in bonds were voted, and the proceeds applied to the erection of a court house and jail, which the town intended to donate to the county, in the hope of Baxter Springs being made the county seat, as a consideration. In 1873, an issue of $4,000 in bonds was made for the improvement of the streets. Thus, regardless of what developments of an unfortunate nature might take place in the future, the town had already heaped upon herself a bonded indebtedness far in excess of the entire assessed valuation of all the property. Subsequent legislation upon the subject caused the Texas cattle trail to be moved further to the west. Thus it was taken from Baxter Springs, and as has been done repeatedly, gave impetus to the starting and building up of similar towns in the State along the border of the Indian Territory.

By reason of this change, Baxter Springs lost most of that which hitherto stimulated her growth, and the mere country trade that was left was insufficient to support so large a town. In consequence, the population was soon materially diminished, many of the inhabitants seeking other fields, and the excitement caused by the discovery of the rich lead mines about eight miles east of the town, drew away scores of people. As a result of these depressing circumstances, the rate of taxation became enormous, and many property owners abandoned their possessions, and left the place to avoid the payment of taxes. A portion of the property was sold for taxes, and lots and blocks sold for mere nominal sums, some lots having been purchased as low as 17 cents. The bondholders, seeing the unfavorable situation of affairs, were willing to accept almost any sort of a compromise on their securities, and, happily for the town, a compromise was effected upon all the bonds, the rate varying from 18 to 50 cents on the dollar. In this way, the entire bonded indebtedness was discharged, with the exception of about $20,000. This was discharged by an issue of funding bonds to that amount, which was made on January, 1880. These bonds fall due in thirty years' time, and draw 6 per cent interest.

Baxter Springs was made the county seat for Cherokee County in November, 1867. This also served as a stimulant to its growth, but it was of short duration, since, in February of 1869, it was removed to Columbus. The site of the town is rendered historic as being the scene of the massacre of Gen. Blunt's body guard in 1863, which took place immediately upon what is now a part of the city. A more detailed account of this incident appears in the general history of Cherokee County.

During the war, the Third Wisconsin Regiment was posted at a point a little northeast of the town, where they made light fortifications of earthworks, traces of which still remain. A little way south of the town a body of colored troops also had their fortifications.

Although the town had already been laid out, and considerable growth had been attained and much improvement made, yet the property was without perfect title. Neither had the title been made perfect until after its organization as a city of the second class. When this was done, the land was then entered by the Mayor, L. G. Denton, who, after having obtained legal title, deeded to each property-holder his respective share.

A national cemetery is located about one mile west of the city, in which a considerable number of interments have been made. Noticeable among those who here find a last resting place are the veterans who composed Gen. Blunt's body guard, and who were slaughtered at Baxter Springs by Quantrill's guerrillas in 1863.

The city is situated on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad, by means of which it has immediate connection with Kansas City and Joplin, Mo.

Baxter Springs was incorporated as a city of the second class as early as 1869. L. G. Denton was elected the first Mayor. Following this in regular order, the following persons were elected to the office of Mayor: H. R. Crowell, elected for two terms; Boyd, Phillip Pfening, J. M. Cooper, two terms, and J. C. Naylor.

In 1866, the Government Post Office Department located an office at this place. William Rebstein was the first Postmaster. Since then the office has been held respectively by W. M. Coulter and William Varick, who was succeeded on the 1st of January, 1883, by William March.

SCHOOLS, CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

The first public school was taught by Miss Wilcox in the summer of 1866. The school was kept in a small log house, which had been rented for the accommodation of the school. In 1868, a two-story frame house, containing two rooms, was built for school purposes, and was afterward sold to the Methodists for a house of worship. A very elegant and costly school building was erected in 1872. It is a large, two-story brick structure, containing twelve apartments. The building is of very imposing design, and is made of brick and trimmed with cut stone, costing about $25,000. At the present time, the school population is composed of 530 male and 545 female children, or a total number of 1,075.

The city contains five church organizations, each of which is supplied with a comfortable house of worship.

The Presbyterian Church was organized in 1868, by Rev. J. W. Hawkins. At that time, there was a membership of twenty-five, which has since been increased to the present number of thirty-five. The church building was erected in 1871. It is a neat, one-story brick building, and cost $4,000.

The Methodist Congregation was organized in 1867. Meetings were held in the school building until in 1870, when the frame school building was purchased and fitted up for church purposes.

The Baptists effected an organization, and, in 1872, erected a large brick church. The body subsequently went down, and the building is now occupied by the colored Baptists.

The Episcopal and Catholic denominations have small congregations, both of which are supplied with a church house. The Catholic Church was built in 1871, and is a small, brick building. The Episcopal Church, a small frame, was built in 1880.

Baxter Lodge, No. 71, A., F. & A. M., was instituted under a dispensation, with ten members. W. H. Draper was made Worshipful Master; W. H. Urie, Senior Warden; G. M. Bush, Junior Warden; A. Sanford, Secretary; and W. Hyland, Treasurer. The order was chartered October 21, 1878. The following officers were elected: B. F. Townsend, Worshipful Master; M. Rebstein, Senior Warden; W. M. Matheny, Junior Warden; D. W. Cooley, Secretary; and W. Schmidt, Treasurer.

The lodge was chartered with a membership of fifty-one, five Fellow Crafts and eight Entered Apprentices.

A hall was built in connection with the Odd Fellows, which was afterward sold to J. B. Carruth. In 1881, a two-story brick building was purchased from Arthur & Degler, and the upper story fitted up for a lodge-room. The lodge at present has a membership of twenty-two, in full standing. The present officers are: D. Prickett, Worshipful Master; J. H. Smith, Senior Warden; L. G. Kennedy, Junior Warden; A. S. Peacock, Secretary; and G. Stoskoff, Treasurer.

Spring Valley Lodge, No. 51, I. O. O. F., was instituted in 1869. The present officers are: W. B. Spencer, Noble Grand, and W. J. Boone, Secretary.

The Society of the Grand Army of the Republic was organized August 23, 1882. The initiatory rites were performed by Col. C. D. Nichols, assisted by a number from the Columbus Post.

Baxter Lodge, No. 15, A. O. U. W., was instituted in July, 1880, with a membership of twelve. W. B. Spencer was chosen Master Workman; S. Day, Recorder; and E. Hodgkins, Treasurer. There is now a membership of forty members. The present officers are: D. C. Coleman, Past Master Workman and Secretary; H. A. Burgess, Master Workman; A. Willard, Foreman; and ——— Jenners, Treasurer.

THE PRESS AND OTHER BUSINESS INTERESTS.

The first paper established in Baxter Springs was the Baxter Springs Herald. This paper was started by B. R. & N. J. Evans in October, 1867, and was suspended in the following summer.

The Cherokee Sentinel was the next paper started in the town. This sheet was brought into existence by M. W. Coulter and D. C. Holbrook in October, 1868. In April of the next year, W. E. C. Lyons took an interest in the paper, and, in the following December, Holbrook sold out to the other members of the firm. Lyons became editor and Coulter business manager of the concern. The paper subsequently ceased at this place.

The Examiner was established by Mr. Simmons in 1871, but the publication has since ceased.

The Republican was started in 1872, by A. T. Lea. It was sold to A. J. R. Smith May 1, 1876, and subsequently suspended.

The Baxter Springs News was established February 23, 1882, by the Baxter News Company, composed of a number of the business men of the town. W. H. Horner was President of the company, and J. B. Rowley, editor of the paper. On October 14, 1882, it was leased to M. H. Gardner. The paper was started as a seven-column folio, and, on November 16, 1882, it was enlarged to an eight-column folio. The sheet is independent in politics and enjoys a liberal patronage, having a circulation of 500 copies.

The First National Bank was started at Baxter Springs in 1872 by G. Van Winkle, I. H. Wright, H. S. Clark, W. A. Bodkin, J. H. Slater and others. In 1875, it was taken by H. R. Crowell, E. Zelliken, W. W. Mayo, P. J. Pfening and J. M. Cooper. After one year's operation, the institution became the sole possession of H. R. Crowell as a private bank. The capital stock is $10,000, and the deposits average $50,000.

A bank was started in 1871 by Graves & Niles, which, after about two years' operation, collapsed.

Baxter Springs contains but one manufactory. This is the Baxter Flouring Mill, which was built in 1870 by A. Willard. The mill building is a three-story frame, 25x50 feet. It is operated by water-power derived from Spring River, the power consisting of two turbine water wheels. It contains two run of stone, and has a grinding capacity of fifty barrels of flour per day. According to the Assessor's returns in the spring of 1882, the city contained a population of 1,237. This, however, is undoubtedly somewhat less than the actual number, and with the increase since that time the population may be safely estimated at about 1,500. The buildings are considerably scattered, on account of the city at one time being much larger than at present, and covering a large territory, and a number of the buildings being moved away left those remaining in some instances at considerable distances from each other.

The city presents a very fine appearance, since most of the poorer class of houses were taken away and the better and more costly ones were left. For this reason there are considerably more tasty residence buildings than is found in most Kansas towns of a like size. A course of improvement is in steady progress, and the city has fair promise of growth and importance.

GALENA.

The city of Galena is situated in the southeastern part of Cherokee County on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad. It is distant from the Missouri line about one and a half miles, and about four miles from the Indian Territory.

The discovery and development of the lead mines in this section was the cause for the starting of the town. The land upon which it was located was owned by E. Moll, a German farmer, who managed by hard labor and strict economy to obtain from his land a scanty living. The tract consisting of 120 acres was purchased in the spring of 1877, by the Galena Mining & Smelting Company, for which they paid $10,000. The town was immediately laid out, and the excitement caused by the lead discovery was so great, that no sooner was a lot staked off than a purchaser was ready with the money in hand to buy it. The influx of people was extremely rapid, so that in the space of about two months the place numbered a population of between two and three thousand. Business houses were hastily established, and miners' shanties were built by the score, regardless of taste or appearance, and the town site was everywhere being dug up with mining excavations.

A tract of eighty acres of railroad land adjoining the site was purchased by a joint stock company called the South Side Town & Mining Company, afterward changed to the South Side Mining & Manufacturing Company. This tract also became a part of the town site.

The early history of the place is fraught with many incidents of ruffianism, gambling, drunkenness, etc., as is characteristic of most mining towns in new countries. These, however, have largely been driven out, and the city is now made up of a comparatively civil and law-abiding populace.

The city has the rough and cheap appearance of a regular mining camp, being made up mostly of cheap and rough board shanties. The ground upon which it stands, naturally uneven, is rendered more unsightly by the heaps of excavated material that has been thrown from mining and prospecting shafts in every part of it. The mercantile business of the city is mainly that of supplying the camp. In the immediate vicinity of the place, extending outward a distance of from three to four miles, the country is poorly adapted to agriculture, the soil being rocky and sterile.

The city is located on Short Creek, a name sometimes given to the diggings, and also that given to the station on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad.

This road was completed to the town in 1871.

A branch of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad was built from Joplin, Mo., terminating at Galena, thus affording it the advantages of competing lines of transportation.

Galena was incorporated as a city of the third class in May, 1877, in less than two months from the time it was laid out. The first Mayor was G. W. Webb, who was re-elected, and was succeeded by A. N. McPherson.

Following this the office was filled by G. W. Dausenberg, C. O. Stockslager and B. S. Moore. After a short time, Moore gave up the office, and John Schmeirer was elected to fill the vacancy.

The Galena Post Office was established in 1877, with L. C. Weldy as Postmaster. He has continued to hold the office since that time.

The first school was taught in the winter of 1877-78, in a building that had been built for a store room. The school comprised three departments, and was under charge of E. J. Prichett, Mrs. Miller and the present Mrs. Hutchins.

A school building was erected in 1879. It is a large two-story frame structure containing four rooms. The district purchased four lots for a schoolhouse site; the land was leased for mining purposes. It was found to contain rich lead mineral, from which the district realized handsomely. A second school building was erected in 1880; it is a two-story frame containing two rooms.

There are three church organizations in the city—the Presbyterian, Episcopalian and Methodist. The Union Tabernacle was built in the fall of 1877. The building was under the auspices of the temperance people, in which the different churches united. The building consisted of a rough board house, 40 by 60 feet, and without a floor. The structure was erected in short order. An evening meeting was held, at which the plan of the building was decided upon and some funds raised. Work began upon the erection on the following day, with a large force of workmen, who continued their labors upon it for two days and the intervening night; the building was completed at the end of the second day and a meeting was conducted in it on the evening of the second day. This served as a Union Church house until denominational houses were built.

The Presbyterian Church was built in the summer of 1879. It is a one-story frame building.

The Episcopal Church was erected in 1880, and is also a one-story structure.

The fraternal feeling of the people of the city finds cultivation in four well-regulated secret organizations. These are the Galena Lodge, No. 194, of the Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons; Galena Lodge, of the Ancient Order of United Workmen; Mineral Lodge, No. 3, of the Order of Knights of Pythias; Galena Lodge, No. 120, of the Independent Order of Good Templars.

The Galena Miner was started May 16, 1877, by McDowell & Lea. In the spring of 1878 it was taken by H. P. Stebbins, who, after running it but two weeks, sold out to J. F. & A. W. McDowell. In the fall, J. F. McDowell sold his interest to J. P. Nichols, and in about a year's time Nichols became sole proprietor. The paper was continued until 1881, at which time it was suspended.

In the fall of 1878, H. Webb established a paper called the Short Creek Banner. In the following winter, a daily issue was added, and in a short time the paper was sold to Bent Melholland. The name was changed to that of the Messenger. After running for a few weeks, it was removed to Columbus.

The Polemic, a religious paper, was started in the spring of 1879, by J. C. Melholland. After about one year's operation at Galena, it was taken away, and the publication continued elsewhere.

The Short Creek Republican was established on September 16, 1880, by Weldy & McDowell. In about four weeks it was suspended as a weekly paper and converted into a daily, by Weldy & Chatham, the latter having taken McDowell's interest. Chatham retired from the firm in April, 1881, and Weldy became sole proprietor. On December 5, 1881, the weekly edition was revived, and the publication of both the daily and weekly was continued until February, 1882, at which time the weekly was again suspended.

The paper is a five-column quarto patent inside, is Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 500 copies. It is the only newspaper publication in present operation.

The principal manufacturing that is carried on in the city is that in connection with the production of lead. This consists of eight steam crushers owned and operated by different parties, and one smelter. The first pig lead was made in September, 1877; at that time an air furnace was used. The Galena Lead & Zinc Company, formerly known as the Galena Mining & Smelting Company, which had constructed the air furnace and manufactured the first pig lead in the place, soon enlarged their works by putting in a blast, and in five or six months added two more. The South Side Town & Mining Company, afterward known as the South Side Mining & Manufacturing Company, became associated in this smelter, with the Galena Mining & Smelting Company. The establishment was greatly enlarged. It now contains six blasts, having a united capacity for the manufacture of 72,000 pounds of ore per day. The blasts are run by a twenty-horse power engine, and the works employ an average force of fifty men. The building is a large frame, eighty feet long by thirty feet wide.

The Cherokee Machine Works were started in 1880, by Lackie & Collins. It is operated as a general repair shop, and contains a lathe, screw-cutter, drill and plane. The building is a one-story frame, 40x40, and the power is a six-horse power engine.

EMPIRE CITY.

This city is situated on Short Creek, in the southeastern part of Cherokee County, on the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Gulf Railroad. The land upon which the city proper is situated, formerly was owned, as a farm, by J. Nichols. The corporate limits include over 600 acres, and adjoin Galena on the north and west. The entire tract was purchased by the West Joplin Lead & Zinc Company, of which S. L. Cheeney and P. Murphy were the principal members. The purchase was made by the company for mining purposes. The Nichols farm comprised 120 acres, for which he received the sum of $7,000. A portion of this tract was laid off as a site, in the spring of 1877, and the building of a town immediately began, as a rival of Galena. The two places stand within about three-quarters of a mile from each other, on either side of Short Creek. As in the case of Galena, the excitement engendered by the lead discovery, produced an immense inpouring of people, wishing to secure their fortunes in these new fields of mineral wealth. As a natural result, the advancement of the town, both in its population and business, was extremely rapid. Long rows of houses, and blocks of business, went up simultaneously. For a time, a most heated spirit of rivalry was carried on between the two places, each keeping pace with the other, and seeking to excel in the race. The natural advantage was with Galena, since nearly the whole, and by far the richest, of the lead field lay beneath, and in the vicinity of that town. No sooner was this fact discovered, than Galena began to take the lead of Empire City. This change soon began to seriously discomfit the Empire camp, who strove arduously to turn the tide, and save themselves from being entirely absorbed. Every effort to restrain desertion, and to add recruits, was made. For the purpose of preventing business and trade from going to Galena, and to secure the same to themselves, they built a stockade on the north and west sides of Galena, along the line between the two corporations. This stockade, about three-fourths of a mile in length, was made of logs ten or twelve feet long, placed upright by sinking one end in the ground to a depth of about three feet. By means of this, entrance into the town of Galena, from the Empire City side, was effected at great inconvenience, since it would have to be made by going around either end of the stockade. All efforts, however formidable, apparently proved ineffectual. The supremacy of Galena was inevitable, as has since followed.

The population of Empire City, according to the census given in the Assessor's returns in 1882, was 1,054.

Empire City was incorporated as a city of the third class in the spring of 1877, and S. L. Cheeney was elected Mayor. In a few weeks after this, it was made a city of the second class. S. L. Cheeney held the office of Mayor for three years. Following this, the office was filled by G. W. Davis, N. W. Barren, and C. L. McClung.

A post office was established in Empire City in the spring of 1877, soon after the town site was located. J. H. Hadley was commissioned the first Postmaster. The position of Postmaster has since been held by J. Shannon, C. L. McClung and H. McKay.

The first school was taught in Empire City in the winter of 1877-78, by G. W. Harper, Principal, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Harvey. The schoolhouse was erected in 1879. It is a one-story frame building, containing three rooms.

The present school population is 319, 146 males and 173 females.

Empire City contains two church organizations, the Presbyterian and Catholic. The Presbyterian Church was organized in 1877, and the church house was erected in 1879. It is a small frame building.

The Catholic congregation was organized in 1878. The church building, a small frame, was erected in 1881.

Empire City has but one secret organization. This is the Short Creek Lodge, No. 148, of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. The Lodge was instituted in 1878, and is in a flourishing condition.

Only one attempt toward the publication of a newspaper has been made at this place. In 1877, Hadley & Murphey established a paper called the Mining Echo. In the fall of the same year, it was purchased by Chatham & Bruffy, who ran it as a daily. Its publication was suspended in a short time, after which Hadley & Murphey took it in charge. It subsequently was taken by Murphey, as sole proprietor, who ran it till 1880, at which time it was permanently suspended.

The business of the city at the present time is rather light, and there seems to be little in prospect for the place in the future.

And he also still owned, in Iowa, a section of land, and 600 acres in Missouri up to the time of his death. Mr. Williams died April 14, 1871. He was a member of the Christian Church, a useful and respected member of the community, and an earnest worker in the church and Sunday school. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Hall, May 2, 1844. They have had eight children—Oscar N., Olive J., Zebina S., Mercy A., Edward C., Mary E., Ida F. (deceased), and Robert A. Williams.

MINERAL TOWNSHIP.

JAMES CASE, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 33, P. O. Columbus, was born near Pittsburgh, Penn., in 1839. When he was ten years of age, his people removed to Jackson County, Ohio, where he was reared to the farming industry. He was identified in that State with farming and stock-raising till 1871, when he came here, and has successfully carried on that business since. His farms consist of 160 acres in Section 4, Crawford Township, and 160 acres in Section 33, Mineral Township, all under a thorough state of cultivation, and well furnished with buildings; a beautiful orchard of 500 apple trees, 150 peach trees, apricots, and all kinds of fruit grown here, and all in full bearing—an evidence of his thrift and enterprise since locating here. He was married in Jackson County, Ohio, to Miss Nancy McKinnis, of Jackson County, who departed this life March 9, 1881, and is buried in Lone Elm Cemetery, Cherokee Township, leaving a family of three sons and four daughters living—Charles W., Frances S., Oscar, Reuben, Sophia, Ellen and Elethea, and George, who is buried beside the mother in the family cemetery.

WILLIAM CALVERLEY, farmer, Section 34, P. O. Columbus, was born in England, July 4, 1821. He came to United States in 1848, landing at New Orleans, from whence he went to Illinois and remained until the spring of 1866, at which time he came to Kansas, in the mean time having traded in cattle ten years. On arrival in Kansas he bought 160 acres of land, which he improved, and is now raising stock and grain and farming generally; also trading in cattle. He owns other farming land in the county. He was married to Miss Jane Proctor, of England, in 1844, and has had two children—John R., William H. (deceased).

HENRY CALVERLEY, farmer, Section 35, P. O. Columbus, was born in England in 1830, and came to the United States in 1848. He was engaged in trading and farming in Illinois and Iowa ten or twelve years, and in 1870 came to Kansas and located his present home, and opened and improved a farm. He improved two quarter-sections and now raises stock and grain, with a good supply of all kinds of fruits. He was married to Miss Angeline Morgan, of Iowa, in 1857. They have four children—Lizzie, Willie, Guy and Clara. They lost one son, Robert.

SCAMMONVILLE.

ARTHUR C. PERRY, superintendent of mercantile department of Keith & Perry Shafts, was born in England, 1861, coming to United States in 1879. He received a mercantile education. He was at Oscoda in coal business one year, was for next eighteen months engaged in bookkeeping for coal firm at Fort Scott, and in 1882 came to Scammonville. He here took charge of his business. He owns Shafts 102 and 103. Owns mines at Oscoda and Mulberry Grove and at Rich Hill. They mine about 200,000 bushels each month, employing from 250 to 300 men. He owns one and a half sections of fine coal land, which is inexhaustible. The company store sells about $4,500 worth per month. The company owns about fifty tenement houses.

ELK COUNTY.

ELK County comprises the north half of what was formerly Howard County. Howard County was made up of lands acquired from the Great and Little Osage Indians by the United States Government by a treaty made with the Indians in the fall of 1867, while in grand council on the Verdegris River, in what is now Montgomery County, and the county was so named in honor of O. O. Howard, of the United States Army.

The county of Elk is situated in the southeastern part of the State of Kansas, and is bounded by Chautauqua County on the south, Montgomery and Wilson Counties on the east, Greenwood County on the north, and Butler and Cowley Counties on the west. The county is thirty-one miles long by twenty-one wide, and contains 661 square miles.

The surface of the county is chiefly high, broken prairie, particularly back from the streams, and in the western part of the county they are of increased elevation, rising into what are known as the "Flint Ridges," while toward the northern and interior parts the surface becomes more level and even.

The county is abundantly watered by numerous streams of pure, clear water. Chief among these are the Elk River, flowing from northwest to southeast, and its tributaries, Rock, Paw Paw, Hitchin, Painterhood and Wild Cat Creeks, Big Caney Creek in the southwest, and Fall River and its main tributary, Indian Creek, in the northeast part of the county.

Along the streams are found beautiful valleys, varying in width from a quarter to two miles. The soil upon these botto[illegible] is exceedingly fertile and [illegible]ble of enormous production, while on the uplands the s[illegible] is much lighter, and in vast portions of the county is unproductive of agricultural products. These portions, although rocky and light of soil, produce abundant grasses, and are well adapted for grazing and stock-growing, being supplied with abundance of clear running water.

The timber is scarce in the county, and is confined to narrow belts fringing the streams. Along the larger streams, considerable black walnut timber is found, while other varieties, such as oak, hickory, cottonwood, box elder, maple, mulberry, hackberry, etc., are found in limited quantities.

EARLY HISTORY.

The first settler to enter upon the land included within the confines of what is now Elk County, was Richard Graves, who came in 1856, and was twice driven out by the Indians.

The country at this time was new and almost a wilderness, overrun by wild animals and roving bands of Indians, and, in consequence, settlements were few and unconnected.

The land at this time belonged to the Osage Indians, upon which legal settlement could not be made. There was, however, a strip of land extending along the northern part of the county, six miles wide, known as the "ceded strip," upon which legal settlement could be made. It was consequently along the streams included within this belt where the earliest settlements were made. But it was not long to be confined to this narrow limit. Bold, adventurous men there were, who became attracted by the beautiful and fertile valleys of the Elk River and its tributary streams, and at the risk of their lives among the Indians, upon whose rights they were intruding, and with expectations of being driven off by United States troops, they determined to make an effort to settle upon these desirable lands. Only a few at first made the attempt, and, in consequence, their presence was not distasteful to the authorities or alarming to the Indians. Others now began to come in, until in 1870 the number of "squatters" had become quite considerable. Among those who were leaders of the vanguard, and who came to stay, were J. C. Pinney, James Shipley, R. M. Humphrey, Elison Neat, H. G. Miller, J. B. Roberts and others.

Much difficulty took place among claimants at this time, on account of the land not being surveyed. Parties who came in and staked off their claims according to a survey made by private parties, often found themselves entirely cut off when the Government survey was made, and the land upon which they squatted liable to be taken by other parties.

This, as will readily be seen, was occasioned by locating claims according to imperfect lines, and a man thinking himself possessor of a fine body of land, sometimes came out with only a narrow strip, or none at all, just as it happened, and there were others watching for this unfortunate occurrence, ready to make filing upon the unoccupied territory. This gave rise to severe "claim fights," which in some instances ended in the loss of the life of either one of the parties in the contest. Many of these difficulties, however, among the settlers, were compromised and amicably settled.

The first child born in the county was Sarah F. Shipley, December 8, 1866. The first marriage was D. M. Spurgeon to Sarah Knox; the first church organization was that made by the Missionary Baptists in Liberty Township in 1866. The first newspaper printed in Howard County belonged to Adrian Reynolds, who began the publication of the Howard County Ledger in the spring of 1871. The building of the first church house in the county was begun in the spring of 1871 at the town of Longton.

A rather amusing anecdote is told of a physician of rather extended linear proportions, who practiced in the county at an early day, and who ranged mostly along the Painterhood Creek, and lived in a shanty devoid of "roof, window or floor." The Doctor had provided a supply of hounds, and was given to the chase, of which he was excessively fond, and, when making a professional call, always went accompanied by his dogs. In case a "jack rabbit" was scared up on the way, the hounds would give chase, and the Doctor all of a sudden forgetting the agonies of the suffering patient and following in the pursuit, would pull up at his destined point after the patient had recovered or passed in his checks. It is supposed that the Doctor was instrumental in saving many a life by assisting the dogs in running down jack rabbits.

An accident of a serious nature took place at Elk Falls, in this county, on the 18th of April, 1873, resulting in the loss of four lives. A party of six, composed of Misses M. J. Benson, Ida Hutchinson, Luella Oswald, Maggie Evans and Messrs. Henry Oswald and Richard Durr, had gone on a boat ride, and in the attempt of some of the party to change seats the boat careened, and the ladies becoming frightened rose to their feet, causing the boat to capsize, and all were drowned except Henry Oswald and Maggie Evans.

Many of the citizens of the county will remember the suicide of John Batayree, a citizen of Wild Cat Township, a farmer and a man about fifty-five years of age, which occurred in November, 1876. On the morning of the fatal day, he gave a letter to one of his little boys, telling him to carry it up to Thomas Wood, as he was going to shoot himself. The little fellow took the letter and hurried off, and, on his way up heard twice the report of a gun, with which his father had shot himself. The little boy reaching Wood's house, reported what his father had said, and Wood hurried to the residence of the unfortunate victim, whom he found dead, the ball having passed through the forehead, just between the eyes and came out on the top of his head. The cause for this dreadful act on the part of Batayree was the treachery of his wife, who left him about a week prior to the suicide, she having been estranged partly from her own depravity and the attentions of a young man in the neighborhoo[illegible]h whom she had been criminally intimate.

COUNTY SEAT TROUBLES AND DIVISION OF THE COUNTY.

At the time of the organization of Howard County, the county seat was located at Elk Falls by appointment of the Governor. The question of its relocation was agitated by parties at other points whose anxiety was not so much for the good that might result, but the chances of their being the ones favored with its relocation.

In the fall of 1870, a petition was presented to the County Commissioners asking for an election to be called for the relocation of the county seat, and which was granted. The election was held, resulting in the removal of the county seat from Elk Falls to Peru. Much dissatisfaction existed over this change, partly because it was somewhat out of the way for some parts of the county, and mostly because it was not established at those places from which the grumblings were heard. So great became the disaffection, that it was deemed advisable to hold another election for a second relocation. Accordingly an election was held in September, 1872; the places voted for were Longton, Peru, Elk Falls, Boston, Howard City and the geographical center of the county. On the 14th of September, the County Commissioners met at Peru to canvass the vote, and upon opening the returns from Boston, Elk Falls and Peru, they met such unmistakable evidences of fraud that they refused to canvass the vote at all, and declared no election. But the matter was by no means destined to rest here. It was again agitated and re-agitated by perhaps what might be termed "would-be politicians," who at this time found no other "political provender" to feed upon. An election was held on the 11th of November, 1873, for the purpose of determining whether Elk Falls or Boston should be the county seat, resulting in favor of Elk Falls by a majority of two hundred and thirty-two votes. Although it was legally determined that a majority of the votes had been cast for Elk Falls as the county seat, yet the friends of Boston thought it ought not so to be, and were by no means to be thus robbed of what they deemed their just and legally acquired spoil. The attempt of the Bostonians to redress their injuries in the matter gave rise to what is known as the "Boston war." The county officers had taken up their quarters at Elk Falls, where they were fixed by injunction. But the brave men of Boston fearing neither law, legal process nor man, became bold in the assertion of their rights and the maintenance of justice between man and man, a resort to physical force was deemed necessary for this, and on the 19th of January, 1874, a posse comprising twenty-four wagons and 150 armed Boston men entered the town of Elk Falls and amid the consternation, threats and tears of the inhabitants of the town, began loading the records and county property upon their wagons, and after gathering all together started for Boston. Attempts to rescue the stolen property were hastily made. Appeals for aid in this behalf were addressed to the Governor of the State, the Legislature and the Adjutant General. Three companies of militia were organized in the county to recover possession of the records, and apprehend the possessors, but all to no purpose. The county seat was gone, and for some time enjoyed a migratory existence having been trailed on the wagons through the flint hills, and part of the time in Cowley County. The time for the convening of the District Court had now arrived. Hon. W. P. Campbell, then Judge of the district, was on hand; but the books and records were gone and the action of justice was defeated. The Judge, however, at once set about to recover possession of them and began by placing under arrest several of the parties who had been engaged in the removal for contempt of court. This began to put a more serious aspect upon things, and the plotters began to weaken.

The release of those under arrest was promised provided an unconditional surrender of the records and other county property was made, and which was speedily done. Thus practically terminated the warfare over county seat removals without bloodshed, it being allowed to remain at Elk Falls until the division of the county in 1875.

The question of the division of the county began to be agitated with considerable force by persons in various parts of the county. Sundry reasons were assigned for this; one reason and the chief one was, that the county as it now stood was too large, being forty-two miles long and thirty-one wide; but another reason that might be given, and with pertinence, too, was, that there were towns which thought they ought to be county seats, and political aspirants for all of whom there were not enough places, and consequently a division of the county would enhance their chances in a double ratio.

This matter, however, was brought before the people of the county as early as 1871, when R. H. Nichols was elected Representative by the anti-division element, and again, in 1872, E. S. Cummings was elected to the same office on the same platform. During all this time, those favoring a division were actively at work, and the idea began to grow more popular, until in 1873, when James N. Young, standing upon the division issue, was elected as State Representative. Young's efforts in the Legislature to secure a division were unsuccessful, and it remained for Edward Jaquins, who was elected his successor in the following year, to accomplish the work.

Jaquins introduced House Bill No. 54, for the division of Howard County, and the erection of the counties of Elk and Chautauqua. The bill passed in March, 1875, and took effect on June 1 of that year. An equal division was made by running a line east and west through the county, the part lying north of the line being called Elk County and the part south of the line Chautauqua County.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION, ETC.

In the spring of 1870, a petition was presented to the Governor of the State, asking for the organization of the county, which was granted. A special Commission, composed of P. C. Topping and Morris Humphrey, was appointed to divide the county into townships and precincts, and to call an election for the choosing of the proper officers. The Commission sat at the town of Elk Falls, on the 7th of April, 1870, C. S. King being chosen as Clerk of the Board. Notice was duly given for the holding of an election, on the 10th day of May, for the election of county officers.

The election was held, at which the total vote cast was 333, and Isaac Howe, Lewis Clayton and Frederick Kantz were elected Commissioners; M. Smith, Probate Judge; C. P. Douglas, Treasurer; J. C. Pinney, Sheriff; J. T. Corum, Register of Deeds; R. S. Catlin, County Superintendent; H. McClure, Surveyor; J. W. Kerr, Coroner; L. Garrett, District Clerk, and N. B. Gardner, County Attorney.

Soon after the erection of Elk County, in June, 1875, its organization was perfected by the calling of an election, at which the citizens of the county elected Thomas Wright, John Hughes and G. W. McKey, Commissioners; Thomas Hawkings, County Clerk; W. W. Jones, Treasurer; J. W. Riley, Sheriff; Frank Osborne, Register of Deeds; A. P. Searcy, Probate Judge; S. B. Oberlander, County Attorney, and J. N. Young, County Superintendent.

It is told of Searcy, Probate Judge, that during his term of office he was accustomed to carrying the papers in his hat, and that he was prepared at all times, day or night, and at whatever place he might be found, either in shanty or dusty highway, to "splice" parties in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The county has twice suffered financially from the villainies of defaulting Treasurers, and once from a defaulting Sheriff. About March, 1874, E. D. Custer, then County Treasurer, assisted by his brother, M. G. Miller, and James Pringle, were charged with having stolen the tax rolls of the previous year, for the purpose of assisting them in the purloining of the public moneys. A warrant was issued for their arrest, which was made, the parties securing release upon giving sufficient bail. Many of the people in the county were unwilling to believe Custer guilty of the charge, having reposed the highest confidence in his honesty, and not until his failure to appear for trial, having made good his escape from the clutches of the law, were they willing to be convinced of his perfidy.

Hitherto the county was not supplied with buildings in which the offices were kept, these being promiscuously distributed in such places as vacant rooms could be found. This state of affairs was kept up until the year 1878, when the citizens of Howard City erected a building for a court house, which they gratuitously donated to the county in an unfinished state, having previously pledged themselves to do this as one of the conditions upon which the town was selected as the seat of government for the county. This building, a two-story stone, is occupied by the various county offices and District Court room, in which that tribunal sits twice a year in regular term, in the months of June and December.

No jail house has yet been provided, the county making use of those in adjoining counties for the incarceration of her prisoners.

Agricultural Society.—The organization of the Howard County Agricultural Society took place at the village of Longton, July 6, 1872.

A temporary organization was effected by electing Charles King, Chairman, and A. Reynolds, Secretary. The regular organization was perfected by electing J. W. Riley President; D. W. Counsil, Vice President; F. A. Dodd, Treasurer; and C. S. King, Secretary.

Fairs have since been held at various times and places in the county.

The division of the county also ruptured all county organizations that were in existence at that time. The new counties, partly from the want of the necessary material and means, were slow to institute any organization of this sort. Not until the year 1878 did Elk County possess an agricultural association, and even then it existed merely, yet lacking the requisites to make it profitable as a county organization. The association has held two fairs in the county, and is under the official management of P. H. Baughman, President; William Merrill, Vice President; Joseph Doleyns, Secretary; H. K. Barackman, Treasurer; S. C. Hanna, Superintendent; J. M. White, Marshal.

A large fair ground is provided by the county adjoining the city of Howard, and which is being suitably furnished with apartments and buildings as the exigency of cases require, and the expenditure of means will permit.

Peculiar Elections.—Eli Titus was elected Sheriff of Howard County in 1872, three days before the election, over Pat Nulty's saloon in Boston.

E. S. Cummings was elected Representative in 1872, the night before the election was held at Canola, and H. H. Wells was elected County Superintendent a week before the regular election was held. Hon. James N. Young was elected Representative in 1874 between 12 o'clock P. M. and 2 A. M., the morning of the election, in the Messenger Building, by the light of a tallow candle.

Howard Township cast her vote in favor of Boston for the county seat about three months prior to the election, and Boston cast her vote for Howard City in the last county seat contest more than a year previous to the time the vote was taken upon the question.

SCHOOLS AND THE PRESS.

The matter of the education of the youth received early and liberal attention by the settlers of Old Howard County. No sooner were there a sufficient number of children within easy distance of each other than there were means provided for their instruction. Districts thus became organized as the necessities required, so that as early as October, 1872, there were 118 organized districts in the county, 113 schools, and 1,069 pupils enrolled.

The division of the county in 1875 severed also the schools, and in 1879 Elk County alone numbered seventy-four organized school districts with an enrollment of 2,181, requiring the employment of eighty-eight teachers.

For the year 1882, the report of the County Superintendent shows the following:

The number of children in the county of school age, 4,150. Of these 2,025 are males, and 2,125 are females. There are seventy-five schoolhouses in the county, and four districts that have no schoolhouse. Three graded schools in the county, these being at Longton, Grenola and Howard City. There were eighty-two certificates issued during the last school year.

The endeavor of the citizens of the county to add to the efficiency of the schools is zealous and unremitting. Greater care is now being taken, year after year, to have none but competent teachers employed, and incompetent men are now excluded from the office of County Superintendent; the aim being to elect only such as are properly qualified for the discharge of this, the most important of official positions. The standard for the qualification of teachers is being gradually promoted, County Institutes being held annually for the drill and preparation of teachers in the latest and most improved methods of school work.

In the spring of 1871, Adrian Reynolds brought the first printing press into Howard County and began the publication of the Howard County Ledger. In the summer of the same year, C. L. Goodrich established the Elk Falls Examiner, and continued its publication about one year. In the spring of 1872, the Messenger made its entry in Howard City, under the management of Turner & Kelley. It lived about a year and a half, when it was sold to A. B. Hicks and taken to Boston, where it became the Howard County Messenger and Weekly News, edited by C. H. Lewis, of Cedar Vale. R. S. Turner edited and published the Divisionist during the campaign of 1871. Joseph Mount began the issue of the Record at Peru in the spring of 1872, at which place he continued until the summer of 1874, and then moved to Sedan, publishing the Wide Awake, illustrated; and it is said the "illustrations were like to have killed the editor." In the summer of 1873, Ward & Pyle commenced the publication of the Elk Falls Journal, whose days were short of number, for in about six months he sold out to Turner & Kelley, who ran it until July, 1875, and then went to Sedan and merged it in the Chautauqua Journal.

In the fall of 1874, A. B. Steinbarger brought his paper, called the Courant, from Elk City to Longton, remaining in that place about a year. He again migrated, taking up quarters at Howard City, and put forth the Beacon, still retaining his paper at Longton, but soon afterward bringing that also to Howard. In 1877, the Courant became united with the Elk County Ledger, edited by A. Reynolds, and took the name of Courant-Ledger, and later in 1879, the name was changed to that of Courant alone, and in October 1881, was sold to the Courant Company, composed of Asa Thompson & Sons.

There are now five live newspapers published in the county, a more detailed account of which appears in the history of the towns in which they are published.

STATISTICS, ETC.

The rapidity with which the settlement of the county was made may be seen by a comparison of its population at varied intervals. In 1870, the population of Howard County was 2,794, and at the time the division was made it had increased to 13,632. In 1876, after Elk County was created, it had a population of 7,082, while in 1882 it numbers over 12,000.

The total acreage of Elk County is 416,640. Of this, there was in cultivation in 1876, 46,318 acres, and in 1882 there were 68,942.

The total value of all the property in the county in 1876 was $1,051,054, while in 1882 it was $1,368,978.

The number of acres cultivated to wheat in 1875 was 6,182; rye, 138; corn, 21,295; barley, 75; oats, 1,065; buckwheat, 12; potatoes, 425; cotton, 10; flax, 181; tobacco, 10; broom corn, 29; timothy and clover, 163; millet, 758.

The number of acres cultivated to these productions in 1882 were as follows: Wheat, 3,349; rye, 21; corn, 44,212; oats, 1,007; potatoes, 681; cotton, 2; flax, 1,304; tobacco, 6; broom corn, 140; millet, 9,700; timothy and clover, 127.

A statistical comparison of the number of live stock for each of these periods shows also the ratio of increase.

In 1876, there were in the county 2,832 horses, 354 mules, 9,885 cattle, 4,382 sheep, 2,092 hogs.

In 1882, the number of them was as follows:

Horses, 4,034; mules, 563; cattle, 21,352; sheep, 26,264; hogs, 11,929. From these figures it will at once be seen that the ratio of increase in live stock has been extremely large, while that of agricultural products has been comparatively limited, showing that this is naturally a stock-growing section rather than agricultural.

The following shows the number of fruit trees cultivated and bearing in 1882: apple trees, 30,544; pear, 529; peach, 176,393; plum, 3,567; cherry, 7,811.

The number of fruit trees not bearing is: apple, 58,943; peach, 73,258; plum, 4,880 cherry, 10,988.

But little manufacturing is now carried on in the county, and this is confined to mills for the manufacture of flour. Of these, there are seven in the county, located as follows: Longton, Oak Valley, Grenola, Union Center, Western Park, Elk Falls and Moline.

Elk County, as may be expected in a place in which development began so recently, has but few railroads. The Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas Railroad was projected and built through the county in the fall of 1879, and passes through the county east and west near the south line. A branch of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Road was constructed southward from the main branch of that road, with which it makes a junction at Emporia, passing through Greenwood County, and terminating at Howard City. These roads, however, afford sufficient conveniences for transportation to and from the county. There are, however, other prospective lines to be run through the county, and which will give it all advantages for transportation.

HOWARD CITY.

The county seat of Elk County is located near the geographical center of the county, and stands upon a beautiful eminence overlooking the fertile valleys of Elk River and Paw Paw and Rock creeks. The town site was established in the spring of 1870, by a town company, of which Samuel McFarland was President and T. A. Dodd, Secretary. This organization did not long survive to accomplish much in the interest of the town, but died shortly after its birth, leaving the management of town affairs in the hands of private individuals. Chief among the real founders of the town were John McBee, S. B. Oberlander, C. T. Adams, P. C. Tapping, Alexander Bruce, Perry and Milton Vinson and T. A. Dodd.

The land upon which the town is located was originally entered by John McBee, A. Garner, T. A. Dodd and S. McFarland. The first business house in the place was erected by Oscar McFarland, in which he opened a general store, and the next was a livery stable belonging to Mr. McClure, followed by a store room belonging to Spicer, and again by another business house established by C. T. Adams. In the early part of 1871, John Parrett and John Barnes built a hotel called the Howard House, which, after changing hands several times, is now the Welbourn House. The next building was a saloon owned by Frank Osborne and the next a printing office by Kelly & Turner. This was a two-story building, the first floor of which was used as business rooms, and the upper was afterward occupied as a printing office, in which the Messenger was published in the spring of 1872.

SCHOOL HOUSE, HOWARD CITY.

Howard City, being the county seat, attracted many settlers, all of whom naturally anticipated rapid progress and success in the new town and "prospective" city, the result being that the place grew with great rapidity and for a short time business houses and residences sprang up on every hand, until at the present it contains several substantial business houses and a population numbering 1,000.

The point for the distribution of mail matter for this vicinity at the time of the founding of Howard City, was located at a point on Paw Paw Creek, about two and a half miles to the north and east of the town and was known as Howard Post Office. In the fall of 1871, its location was changed, being brought to what is now Howard City. Previous to and after its removal, the office was in the hands of T. J. Barnes as Postmaster, who, after its removal, had the office in a small building which he erected and used as a drug store. Not long after the relocation of the office, Barnes was succeeded in the position by C. T. Adams, who was commissioned Postmaster for this point, and who continued to hold it until 1880, during which year he was succeeded by A. B. Steinbarger. Mr. Steinbarger held the place a short time, when A. Reynolds received the appointment and is the present incumbent.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

The first school was taught in the town of Howard in the early part of the year 1873, by W. S. Kent. The school was kept in a frame house erected for school purposes, and had an attendance of nineteen pupils. This building, although cramped in its capacity and insufficient for the accommodation of the schools, was used until 1882, when the actual necessities of the case prompted the citizens of the town to prepare more enlarged quarters for school wants. Accordingly, immediate steps were put forth resulting in the erection of a fine large two-story stone building at a cost of $8,000, for the payment of which bonds were issued by the district to the amount of $6,000. The building contains four school rooms, three of which are in the lower story and one above, the remaining part of the second floor being reserved for a town hall. The schools are in a flourishing condition with an enrollment of 347 pupils.

Howard City is the seat of Government for the county, also the chief town, being surrounded by a good farming country as it seems destined to maintain its superiority over the other towns. The business men of the town are active, energetic and progressive, and are ready at all times to assist in any measure to advance the good of the town. Already fine large business blocks of brick and stone are seen, and handsome dwellings adorn the streets. With all her advantageous surroundings it is safe to predict a bright future for this progressive little city.

INCORPORATION.

On the 27th of October, 1877, a petition signed by J. R. Hall and a number of the citizens of the town was presented to the District Court, asking that the town of Howard be incorporated as a city of the third class. The court gave attention and passed upon the matter granting the prayer of the petitioners. In accordance with the legal forms, an election was held for the choosing of officers for the city government, resulting in the election of the following corps of officers:

A. B. Steinbarger, Mayor; A. M. Bowen, Police Judge; H. A. Lanman, City Clerk; William Crooks, City Treasurer; J. A. Oliphant, City Attorney; William M. Vinson, Street Commissioner and City Marshal; N. Momma, William Driscoll, J. Q. Burchfield, S. Lucas, James Howell, Councilmen.

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

The citizens of Howard City were early and prompt in their attention to "spiritual necessities," and did not long remain outside of the sound of Gospel preaching. Services under the auspices of different denominations, had been held at various times and places in the neighborhood, but no regular organization was made in the town until 1872, at which time the northern branch of the Methodist Church was established.

The Methodist Episcopal Church North, was established in the spring of 1872, under the especial direction of Rev. L. F. Laverty, with a membership of ten. The early services were held in a log cabin, the residence of O. M. Tabor, until the schoolhouse was built, to which place they were afterward removed. A church edifice was begun in the summer of 1880, completed in the following year, and dedicated to sacred and religious uses on July 5, 1881, by Rev. Bernard Kelley, of Wichita. The increase in the membership has been moderately rapid, the church having now a total of seventy-five members in full and regular standing.

The Southern branch of the Methodist Church was established during the summer of 1874, by N. G. Faubin, and had at that time fifteen members. The denomination have not as yet provided themselves with any regular church building of their own, but continue to hold meetings in the church belonging to the Methodist Episcopal Church North.

The congregation at this time is under the spiritual instruction and guidance of the Rev. W. H. Comer.

The United Presbyterian Church was organized in the summer of 1877 with fourteen members, under the direction of the Rev. E. Meyn. Meetings were held in the schoolhouse until the erection of a church edifice by the congregation. The church building was erected during the summer of 1879, and is a one-story wooden structure. Rev. Mr. Tarr is present pastor in charge of the congregation.

The city of Howard among her institutions has three flourishing secret societies. These are the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Royal Arch Masons and the A., F. & A. M. societies.

The Independent Order of Odd Fellows was instituted at this place on the 14th of April, 1876, under the direction of Special District Deputy E. H. Nichols, P. G., of Elk Falls Lodge. The officers elected and installed were:

M. Barrickman, Noble Grand; W. M. Vincent, Vice Grand; L. W. Kirby, Recording Secretary; A. W. Kirby, Permanent Secretary; J. B. Dobyns, Treasurer.

The organization of the lodge took place with eighteen as membership, which now numbers forty-five in good standing. The lodge is officered as follows:

A. W. Kirby, Noble Grand; D. H. Hayner, Vice Grand; R. F. Glenn, Secretary; J. B. Dobyns, Treasurer.

The Howard Chapter, No. 49, Royal Arch Masons, was established in June, 1881, and R. H. Nichols was elected High Priest; J. W. Riley, King; William Driscoll, Scribe; N. Momma, Secretary; J. B. Lewis, Treasurer.

The lodge began with a membership of sixteen, but this number has since increased to twenty-five. The present officers of the lodge are as follows:

R. H. Nichols, High Priest; J. M. McKnight, King; J. B. Dobyns, Scribe; N. Momma, Secretary; J. B. Lewis, Treasurer.

Hope Lodge, No. 155, A., F. & A. M., organized October 22, 1874, at Howard City, by electing Daniel W. French, Worshipful Master; P. M. Vinson, Senior Warden; Edward Lee, Junior Warden; A. B. Hicks, Secretary; J. Shook, Treasurer. At the date of institution, the lodge numbered nineteen members. There are at present forty-two of a membership under the official guidance of J. M. McKnight, Worshipful Master; H. R. Farrer, Senior Warden; A. Gable, Junior Warden; J. B. Dobyns, Secretary; J. B. Lewis, Treasurer.

THE PRESS.

The history of the Howard City press is considerably varied, being a record of a successive establishment of papers, followed closely by a removal or suspension of the same. And of the many that have started, only two remain. The first paper established in the town was the Howard County Messenger, which had its birth in the winter of 1872, under the direction and ownership of Turner & Kelley, and after a year of life at this place, was sold to A. B. Hicks, and taken to Boston.

The publication of the Beacon was begun at Howard City, in the spring of 1875, by A. B. Steinbarger. This sheet flourished for a while, and expired in December of the same year.

The material belonging to the Boston Messenger was bought in the spring of 1875, by W. E. Doud, who immediately removed the same to Howard, and began the issue of the Observer, which continued only about six months, and was then taken to Eureka, Greenwood County, Kan.

J. A. Somerby commenced the publication of the Kansas Rural in the summer of 1877, but meeting with insufficient success, the paper languished, and after the brief existence of four months, "passed in its type."

The Weekly Examiner began at Elk Falls, January 22, 1878, under the proprietorship of C. A. Gitchell, and was removed to Howard City March 11, 1878, and on the 12th day of July, of that year, suspended publication.

The Industrial Journal was established July 24, 1878, by Van Hyatt & Somerby. It was Independent in politics, and enjoyed but a brief period of existence, when it was forced to yield to the pressure of hard times.

The Courant, at present in successful operation, is the outgrowth or continuation of a paper of the same name, which A. B. Steinbarger brought from Elk City to Longton, in November, 1874. After remaining about one year at Longton, it again changed location, and pulled up at Howard. In 1877, the paper was consolidated with the Elk County Ledger, a paper which had been started by A. Reynolds, at Longton, in 1870, as the Howard County Ledger, and was the first in the county. Reynolds removed his paper to Elk Falls in the spring of 1874, and again in the fall of 1876 "pulled up stakes" and "struck tent" at Howard, where, after the division of Howard County the name of the sheet was changed to that of the Elk County Ledger, which he continued to publish up to the time of the consolidation with the Courant, assuming the title of the Courant-Ledger. In 1879, the name was again changed, being called the Courant. The paper changed hands in October, 1881, being sold to the Courant Company, composed of Asa Thompson & Sons, who have since continued in its publication. It is an eight column folio, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 1,200 copies.

The Howard Journal began first as the Elk County Examiner, at Elk Falls, in 1876, under the ownership of Charles Gitchell. After two months at that place, it was brought to Howard, and in 1878, was sold to J. G. Albright, and leased to P. Van Hyatt and J. H. Somerby, who changed the name, giving it the title of the Industrial Journal. Albright kept possession of the paper until the fall of 1880, when it was purchased by J. R. Hall, and combined with the Howard Clipper, a small campaign sheet which Hall had established a short time previously. The paper is Democratic in politics, live and energetic in advocating all matters of local interest, and exerts a wide influence in the community.

ELK FALLS.

Elk Falls is situated in the Southern part of Elk County, on the line of the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas Railroad, and about thirty miles west of the city of Independence. The town is favorably located near the fork of Wild Cat Creek with Elk River, and in consequence enjoys the advantages of a large amount of surrounding valley land. The greater portion of the country surrounding, however, is rough and broken, much of it being useless for agriculture.

The town derived its name from the presence of a waterfall in Elk River close by, and which is formed by the falling of the water over a projecting ledge of rock ten feet high and about one hundred feet wide.

EARLY SETTLERS.

The first settler to locate upon the town site was R. H. Nichols, who took the claim in February, 1870. Soon after the settlement of the land was made, the enterprise of establishing a town site upon it was conceived, and a town site company composed of R. H. Nichols, G. F. Graham, E. A. Hall, James Edwinson, C. Goodrich, M. V. French and H. H. Hess, was formed for this purpose. Accordingly, in the early part of the year 1870, the site was fixed upon Nichols' land, and L. J. Johnston was employed to lay it off into town lots.

The first house marking the place was the claim-house built by Nichols—a small box house, ten by twelve feet.

Following this was the erection of a small house built by R. H. Nichols, which he occupied as a loan and real estate office. The next improvement was the erection of a frame storeroom by A. F. Gitchell and son, Charles Gitchell, in which they opened a store consisting of general merchandise. The building was soon afterward, in 1878, converted into a livery barn by Gitchell, for which purpose it is now used.

Following this was the establishment of a general store in a log house which stood in the place where the post office is now located, by Hall & Edmiston. About the same time Dr. I. A. Walter opened a drug store; S. M. Jones started a blacksmith shop, which he continued to operate about two years, at which time he disposed of the same to A. Leisure. Attracted by the prospects of a new and rising town, numerous improvements were soon made, until at present the town contains about five hundred inhabitants and several business houses of substantial proportions.

The post office was first established at Elk Falls in 1870, and J. Edmiston was Postmaster. Although a post office was established at the place, there was as yet no provision made for the transportation of the mails, and which accordingly was done by private individuals. The office was kept in the storeroom of Hall & Edmiston, where it remained about two years, until the expiration of Edmiston's term of office. R. N. Hall was appointed as Edmiston's successor in the post office, and it was then kept in Hall's drug store. At the end of two years from his appointment, Hall was succeeded as Postmaster by John Heckerman, and the office, after changing hands, was taken to Heckerman's grocery store. After Heckerman came the appointment of C. Truby, and the office located at the corner of Seventh and Osage streets, at which place it has remained. Following the lapse of a three years' term of office by C. Truby, was the commission of Mrs. Susan Truby, who has ever since continued to hold the appointment.

The first school was taught in the village of Elk Falls in the summer of 1870, by Miss Dora Simmons, the school being kept in her father's residence, and numbered an attendance of twenty-five pupils.

During the year following, a school building was erected for the accommodation of the school—a small one-story frame house, comprising but a single apartment.

The school at present enumerates about two hundred and twenty pupils and is conducted by J. N. Richardson.

CHURCHES, SOCIETIES, PRESS, ETC.

Elk Falls contains only two church organizations—the Methodist Episcopal and Baptist.

The earliest religious services were held in the town in the early part of the year 1871, and were conducted in the school building, by the Rev. L. F. Laverty, a Methodist preacher, at which time the organization of a Methodist Congregation was effected.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized in the early part of 1871, and Rev. J. S. Harriman was the regular pastor on the circuit, assisted at this point by Rev. James Edmiston as supply, Mr. Edmiston being then engaged in business in the town. The first services were conducted in the second story of the building belonging to Hall & Edmiston, but in the schoolhouse after the erection of that building. The present church house was built during the fall of 1880, under the pastoral administration of Rev. C. Combs, and was dedicated in the following winter by Rev. C. C. McCabe.

The church is at present in a very prosperous condition under the charge of the Rev. W. H. Goodwin.

The Baptist Church was first organized in the fall of 1870, but this attempt proved a failure. A second and more successful effort to establish a church was made in June of the next year, and Rev. N. H. Ward was retained as the regular pastor. The organization was made with only six constituent members, but whichhas since been increased to twenty-five. A church was erected during the summer of 1879, and in the fall of that year was formally dedicated to divine worship.

There are at present four regularly organized societies in existence at this place. These are the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Masonic, Grand Army of the Republic and the Knights of Honor.

The Independent Order of Odd Fellows was started September 15, 1871, with only twelve members.

The officers elected were: Thomas Stout, Noble Grand; R. H. Nichols, Vice Grand; H. M. Nichols, Secretary; E. H. Nichols, Permanent Secretary; A. Eardman, Treasurer; and James Beard, Warden.

The lodge, numbering seventeen members, is in a flourishing condition under the official management of William Pierson, Noble Grand; Dr. F. S. Olney, Vice Grand; L. J. Johnson, Secretary; H. T. Woodward, Treasurer.

The lodge was first represented in the Grand Lodge by Thomas Stout, but has been represented in that body since 1877 by Dr. F. S. Olney.

The Masonic Fraternity was instituted here in October, 1871, and P. Cummings was elected Worshipful Master, and Thomas Stout, Senior Warden. The lodge, with its first establishment, contained only ten members, but now numbers fifty. Those most chiefly engaged in setting the movement of the organization of the society on foot were P. Cummings, Thomas Stout and R. H. Nichols.

The present officers of the lodge are: C. W. Rambo, Worshipful Master; S. D. Lewis, Senior Warden; J. N. Bird, Junior Warden; Dr. F. S. Olney, Treasurer; and C. S. King, Secretary.

The Knights of Honor Society began its existence May 9, 1877, and chartered October 1877. H. Baker was chosen Dictator; F. S. Olney, Secretary; A. Eardman, Treasurer. With its inception the society numbered thirteen members, but has since increased to twenty-two. The work of organizing was chiefly under the direction of a man named Howell, of Winfield. The present officers are C. W. Rambo, Dictator; R. N. Hall, Secretary; and G. W. Blackburn, Treasurer.

The Grand Army of the Republic became established in February, 1882, and H. Welty was elected Commander, F. A. Stoddard, Adjutant. The society contains fifty members, and hold meetings in Barber's Hall on the first Thursday of each month.

More than one attempt has been made to establish a news journal in the town, but mostly without success. The first attempt was made by C. L. Goodrich, who began the publication of a paper called the Elk Falls Examiner, in the spring of 1872. The demand for an enterprise of this sort was yet limited, and the paper falling of success fell through, and was sold to the Winfield Telegram in 1874. The next undertaking of this kind was made in 1873, by N. H. Ward and J. T. Pyle, in the issuance of the Howard County Record, in which they continued about one year and sold out to H. B. Kelly. Kelly issued the paper at Elk Falls about a year and then removed to Sedan. The third and last enterprise in journalism began in 1880 by Thomas Copeland and Thomas Thompson, who ran a paper under the name of the Elk Falls Signal. This sheet led a sort of migratory existence, having remained only one year at Elk Falls, when it was taken to Moline and soon afterward to Cherry Vale, where it became the Cherry Vale Globe, now published at that place.

The first house for public entertainment was a two-story frame built and run by F. Bloodgood in 1871. After running the house about seven years, it was sold to Josiah Carr, who kept it only two years, and it was again sold to H. C. Hitchen, and is now known as the Cape Cod House, under the management of J. M. Lufkin.

The Gitchell House was built in 1870, and was run as a public house about two years, but is now used by A. F. Gitchell as a residence.

The Sherman House was started in 1879, and stands near the railroad depot. The enterprise was in the hands of a company of which C. Truby was the chief party in interest. The house was under the management of Truby, who afterward became sole proprietor.

George Sherman took possession of the house after Truby, and ran it about one year, when it was taken by E. Cole, who has since continued in its management. It is now the popular railroad eating house, at which trains stop for meals.

The only manufacturing at this place is a grist and flouring mill. This establishment was constructed in 1875 by E. A. Hall and L. J. Johnson, and is located on Elk River near the Falls, and from which the propelling power is derived, a turbine water wheel being used. The mill is a three-story frame with basement underneath, contains four run of buhrs, and was built at a cost of $1,000. In 1880, it changed hands, becoming the property of John Longfellow, the present owner and proprietor. This mill besides being the first and only one in the town of Elk Falls, was also the first built in Elk County.

As to what the future of the town may be, little can be said more than mere conjecture. It is certain, however, even under ordinary favorable circumstances, that the place cannot attain to any considerable size, owing to the absence of those requisites and conditions as are necessary to its support, such as manufacturing and mining interests, and the surroundings of a good agricultural country, etc.

The present tendency of the place is backward rather than progressive, and to predict for her a more prosperous situation than she now occupies, would be extremely hazardous and unwise.

MOLINE.

In the spring of 1879, James Beard, N. Hankerson and H. H. Lamb located claims in the south part of Elk County. During the spring of 1879, a portion of land was purchased from each of these parties by the Town Site Company upon which they proceeded to lay off a town, the survey being made by Maj. J. H. Chapman.

The town is located on the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas Railroad, about forty miles west of Independence.

The first building erected on the site was a blacksmith shop belonging to H. Gallatin, which he brought from the town of Boston and located at this place.

M. Carter and S. B. Hemmenway next opened a general storehouse in a building erected for that purpose. A dwelling house belonging to Carter was then brought from Boston, and was the third structure, and Jones & Hackerman built a storeroom in which they put a stock of hardware.

D. C. Pierce next erected a hotel, which he continued to run up to 1882, when it was sold, coming under the proprietorship of S. F. Brown. During the year 1880, D. C. Pierce started a livery barn, which he afterward sold to R. Keith, and the latter soon sold out to F. C. Vance. S. A. Brown started a lumber yard at the same time.

The railroad was completed in December of 1879, and the town witnessed a slow but regular growth. It now contains three general stores, one furniture store, two hardware stores, one grocery, two drug stores, two millinery and one harness shop, two hotels—the last hotel being built during the summer of 1882, by Joseph McGee—and the population of the town numbers about 200.

POST OFFICE.

In May, 1879, the post office was brought from Boston, a little village on the line between the counties of Elk and Chautauqua, and located at Moline. The removal was made in a covered wagon in which the office was kept for three days, the mail being delivered from the wagon. At the time of the removal of the office, M. Carter held the position of Postmaster and which he has since retained.

The town derives its educational facilities from the regular country school district within which it is situated, thus, properly speaking, having no regular school of her own. The building erected in the district for school purposes was removed to the town and is now used as a schoolhouse. The school has a membership of 100 pupils, and is divided into intermediate and primary departments.

For some time the ground in the region of the town had been trod by men shod with the Gospel of Peace, who zealously proclaimed the Gospel to fallen man. Services were usual in schoolhouses and residences in different parts of the neighborhood. In connection with the adjacent country this was made the central point for the holding of services by the churches of which there are now two in number, viz.: the Methodist Episcopal and Baptist.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was established in the spring of 1881 with forty members, under charge of Rev. Mr. Bristow, and at the present time the congregation numbers sixty of a membership with Rev. William Goodwin pastor. Services are conducted in the schoolhouse and town hall. During the summer of 1882, a parsonage was erected at a cost of $600.

The Baptist Church was organized in the fall of 1881 with eight members and T. A. Walker pastor. At present the congregation numbers fifteen members. With the first organization, services were held in the schoolhouse, but soon afterward were held in the town hall, in which they are now held.

The first attempt at journalism was made by W. C. Parker and I. N. Boicourt in March, 1881, and after an existence of six months it was sold to Thomas Copeland who continued to issue it under the name of the Elk County Signal for about one year and was taken to Cherry Vale.

On April 22, 1882, Jasper Carter issued the first number of the Moline Mercury. It was first issued as a five column folio but since increased to a seven column folio; is independent in politics and has a circulation of 415.

This of all the attempts has proven successful, the paper being now in a flourishing state. Jasper Carter, editor and proprietor of the Moline Mercury, was born in Scott County, Ill.; when ten years of age he came with his father to Nemaha County, Kan., with whom he followed farming, and subsequently went to Missouri and followed farming for four years in that State. In 1872, he came to and engaged in farming, selling out his farm property he embarked in the mercantile business, which he gave up in March, 1882, and began editing the Moline Mercury.

GRENOLA.

In the spring ot 1870, John James and Hugh Hart located a town site in the southwest part of Elk County, to which they gave the name of Canola, the site being upon land owned by John Reid and H. L. Corum, the original claimants.

The first establishments were a general store belonging to the Hart brothers, and the post office which was located at this point in March, 1870, with John Reid as Postmaster. The town progressed slowly up to 1879, when its location was changed, at which time it contained several business houses and a population of one hundred, among whom there was but one woman, Mrs. Melvin by name.

To the north of Canola a distance of about three miles stood the rival town of Greenfield. This place had been established since 1869, the post office being located there at that time, and Rev. Mr. Vickers held the commission of Postmaster. The site stood upon a claim belonging to A. A. Toby, but only a small space was laid off into town lots. The first business started in the place was a general store belonging to A. A. Toby. But little progress was made in the building of the town, which never attained to much importance.

The two towns thus stood rivals for some years, with Canola far in the advance. Upon the completion of the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Kansas Railroad through the south part of Elk County, the two places became united, the railroad having passed between them at an almost equal distance from each.

Both towns were thus left apart from the advantages of the railroad, which they were anxious to secure. The consequence of this state of affairs was their consolidation, which took place on the 7th day of July, 1879.

The survey of the new site was made by a man by the name of Ross, on land purchased from W. H. Guy, by the Town Site Company, composed of citizens of the town. Originally the claim had been taken by Silas Gibson, who afterward sold out to C. Maris, who disposed of the same to Guy. At its formation the company numbered twenty shares of $20 each, and Thomas Hawkins was President; D. M. Reid, Secretary, and W. H. Guy, Treasurer. The number of shares have since been increased to one hundred, and as an index of the prosperity and prospects of the town, the shares have sold at a premium of twenty-five per cent since the establishment of the town site.

EARLY SETTLERS.

The town being formed as before detailed, from the union of the towns of Canola and Greenfield, owing to the simultaneous removal of business houses from each of these, its upbuilding was extremely sudden. The earliest business house, however, that was started in the town was a general store belonging to Browder Brothers, in the room now occupied by J. N. Aubushon's drug store. The next was a grocery, owned by George Lee. There was, however, but a short time between the establishment of these, and others followed in rapid and almost unbroken succession. The town, with a population of about seven hundred, contains three general stores, two groceries, one furniture, two drug, two millinery and two hardware stores, two hotels, three billiard halls, two restaurants, two blacksmith and two wagon shops, one saddlery shop, two livery barns and one lumber and coal yard.

During the building of the railroad in the fall of 1879, the town was pervaded with an atmosphere of ruffianism that bordered closely upon outlawry. At that time the place contained several saloons, and the intoxicating beverage found ready sale to the construction hands, and drunkenness ran riot through the streets; so much so, indeed, that in walking on the streets in the night time one was sure to stumble over the prostrate forms of half a score or more men in a beastly state of intoxication. Quarrels and fighting were common, but only one death occurred amidst all this disorder and confusion, and that accidental, resulting from intoxication, and is the first to head the death record of the town. It was that of H. R. Jackson, a construction hand, and occurred in the spring of 1880. Jackson, it appears, had been drinking freely, and on going home in the darkness fell through a trestle on the railroad, receiving injuries from which he soon afterward died.

The first child born in the town was Grenola Lee, daughter of George and Mrs. R. A. Lee. Being the first child born in the town and having the same name, the town company honored her by deeding to her in fee simple one of the best lots in the place.

Grenola became incorporated as a city of the third class in the fall of 1880, the incorporation being hastened from differences arising between the temperance and anti-temperance elements.

The first officers elected for the government of the new city were J. C. W. Crider, Mayor; J. L. Barnes, Treasurer; M. W. Williams, Clerk; C. A. Kelso, Police Judge; W. Hatchett, Marshal; William Dory, J. N. Aubushon, J. A. Weston, L. H. Smith and A. S. Browden, Councilmen.

The city at present is under the official management of Neil Shaffer, as Mayor; T. W. Hilton, Clerk; M. Hoyt, Police Judge; D. M. Reid, Treasurer; John Burden, Marshal; William Dory, John Pugh, George Stanwood and John Hank, Councilmen.

The Grenola Post Office was established August 1, 1879. Both Canola and Greenfield had been points for the distribution of mail matter, but when the towns consolidated both these were abandoned and Grenola was made its location, with D. M. Reid as Postmaster, who has since that time been retained in that capacity.

The school district of which the town of Grenola forms a part, is formed from parts of Districts 21, 22 and 23.

The first school was taught by John D. Simpson and B. F. Weeks, and was kept in the building erected for school purposes. The house is a one-story stone, consisting of two apartments. The first school numbered an enrollment of 110 and has increased to 200. The school is graded, forming the intermediate and primary divisions.

CHURCHES, SOCIETIES, ETC.

The people in the vicinity of Grenola were first ministered to in "holy things" by Rev. Mr. Vickers, a local divine of the Methodist denomination, meetings being held in schoolhouses and private residences. Whe the town of Grenola sprang into existence it was made the station for the location of churches, of which there are two, the Baptist and Methodist Episcopal.

The Baptist Church was established in the spring of 1881 with a membership of ten, and Rev. F. Stanton preached to the people as a supply, no regular pastor having been employed. The services were held in the Methodist Church. In January, 1882, Rev. F. L. Walker began the pastorate of the church, and has continued pastor up to this time. The congregation, numbering twenty members, are putting forth efforts for the erection of a church building, which it is their design to complete during the next year.

The Methodist denomination formed themselves into a church at the starting of the town. Canola and Greenfield had been preaching points prior to this. The earliest ministrations to this congregation had been made by the Rev. Mr. Vicker, but upon the locating of a church at Grenola, Rev. D. F. Owens became pastor.

A church building was erected during the latter part of 1881, and was dedicated by Rev. C. A. King in February of the year following. The building is a one-story stone structure, comparatively well furnished, and cost when completed about $2,500. The congregation, comprising a membership of sixty persons, is under the pastorate of the Rev. J. W. Fox.

The town numbers among its residents many whose religious faith is allied to other denominations, but who have not as yet organized themselves into a regular church body.

The Methodist Church of Grenola is but one of six points, at each of which an organization exists, comprising what is known as the Grenola Circuit, the entire circuit numbering 160 members.

Grenola, notwithstanding her size and mercantile importance, boasts of only one regularly organized fraternity.

The Ancient Order of United Workmen was organized February 7, 1882, with a membership of sixteen. The organization was effected chiefly by W. R. Sheen, then Deputy Grand Master, and who since then has been made Grand Master. The object and purpose of the institution is a mutual insurance between its members.

The first officers were R. W. M. Roe, Master Workman; B. F. Weeks, Recorder, and Neil Shaffer, Financier.

The present officers are J. A. R. Elliott, Master Workman; B. F. Weeks, Recorder, and M. B. Yancy, Financier.

The first house of public entertainment in Canola was the Canola House, kept by A. J. McClure, who subsequently moved the building to Grenola, where it was run as the Grenola House. About one year after his removal, McClure sold out to M. Watson, and the house being improved extensively is now known as the Watson House.

The next hotel was the Farmers' House, built in 1879 by F. G. Hutchinson, who has continued to run it as a public house up to this time.

In the fall of 1880, Henry Brown opened the Commercial House, which he operated up to June, 1882, at which time the building was sold and converted into a hardware store.

The first newspaper started in Grenola was the Grenola Argus, edited and published by John E. Stinson, who struck off the first issue on December 20, 1879. On June 19, 1880, the entire establishment was sold to E. F. Wisner, who, after possessing it for only two or three weeks, again disposed of a half interest in the concern to A. V. Wilkinson, and in the October following Wilkinson became sole proprietor.

Wilkinson continued alone in the publication of the paper up to March of 1882, when another change was made, A. M. Crosley becoming associate editor and proprietor by the purchase of a half interest. The name of the sheet was also changed to that of the Cana Valley Herald. The paper was formerly a six-column folio, but is now a seven-column folio. It is independent in politics, and has a circulation of 400 copies.

A. V. Wilkinson, of the firm of Wilkinson & Crosley, editors and proprietors of the Cana Valley Herald, at Grenola, Kan., was born in Buffalo, Mo., September 23, 1856. He resided with his parents, attending school, until nineteen years of age, when he began to learn the printer's trade, in which he was engaged about eight months. Following this he came to Winfield, Kan., in 1876, and was employed as typo on the Winfield Telegram, where he remained about four years, at which time he gave up his employment and came to Grenola, taking a half interest in the Grenola Argus, and is now associated with A. M. Crosley in the publication of the same paper, under the name of the Cana Valley Herald.

A. M. Crosley, associate editor of the Cana Valley Herald, was born in Cassville, Penn., October 6, 1854. The early part of his life was spent under the parental roof, attending school, etc. After his arrival at majority, he attended Cassville Seminary for two years, and also followed teaching, in which he was engaged for about eight years. Came to Kansas April 1, 1879, and, settling at Elk Falls, began teaching, which avocation he prosecuted till the spring of 1882, when it was given up to enter the field of journalism in company with A. V. Wilkinson, editing and publishing the Cana Valley Herald, he having purchased a half interest in that paper.

The town is favorably located on high table land near the confluence of Hitching Creek with Elk River. In the winter of 1870, Dr. J. W. Kerr, J. Hoffman and Mr. Messick came down from Ottawa, Kan., into the southern part of the State for the purpose of taking a look at the country. The journey began on the 6th day of February, and, on the 14th of that month, the party reached the mouth of Painterhood Creek, where they pitched tent and began looking up claims, and making inquiry as to where a favorable town site might be found. The present site of Longton being recommended, and, upon examination, the party being favorably impressed with the site, they concluded to establish a town. Accordingly, three eighty-acre tracts were entered, and a fourth eighty on the west was contracted for, making out the even 320 acres. Shortly after this, Dr. Kerr procured the services of a Surveyor and surveyed and platted Main street, and began the erection of a building, using timber split out for the purpose, there being no saw-mills in the country at that time.

About the 1st of June, J. W. Kerr, J. C. Pinney, J. Hoffman, J. B. Roberts, James Reynolds and Mr. Gardner organized a town company called the "Elk Rapids Town Company." It was soon afterward thought advisable to change the name, and Longton was fixed upon as the name. Some time in June, Wright & Kirby, of Ottawa, set up a steam saw mill, from which the now much needed building material was supplied, and the work of construction was rapidly pushed ahead. Kirby built a storehouse, Hitching a hardware store, and C. P. Alvey, in connection with the town company, erected a large two-story house, the lower story being owned and occupied by Alvey himself, and the upper story belonging to the town company.

In October, George Hansbrough came down from Garnett and erected a two-story hotel, which he opened for the accommodation of the public, and which is now the Gordon House, under the management of R. A. Gordon. About the same time, W. A. Watkins put up a store room, in which he put a stock of drugs. Various other buildings, residences, etc., had been made, so that at the end of twelve months the town contained twenty-seven houses completed, besides a large number in process of construction.

The town at present contains a population of about 600, and is a live and thriving village, noted for the social and hospitable character of her citizens.

The post office was established in the fall of 1870, and Dr. J. W. Kerr held the commission of Postmaster. The office was kept in the building which the Doctor erected that fall for a drug store, and was a diminutive concern constructed of hewed timbers and weather-boarded with clapboards. At that time the Doctor observed rather curious modes in the performance of his official duties, especially in the distribution of the mails, his custom being to open the mail bag, pour the contents into a small depression in the earthen floor of his store room, and then tell those present to proceed to "find their own mail," and each individual would set about searching for his own matter. Another anecdote illustrates his peculiar style. At one time a letter came to the office, for which there was no call made, and after allowing it to remain in the office for some time, the Doctor one day, when a number were present in the office, declared his intention of sending "that letter" to the dead letter office, whereupon he took it, and, opening the stove door, committed the message to the flames. Longton at this early day received the mails by an overland mail route leading from Independence to Winfield. The office at present is under the official management of J. W. Riley.

The first school was taught in Longton by Miss Eleanor Smith, beginning in March, 1870. The school was kept in the residence of Mr. Key, and numbered only a few pupils. On the 15th of March, 1872, the report of the teacher, Henry C. Parker, shows the total enrollment to be sixty-two, with an average daily attendance of thirty-eight. The schools at present number about 225 pupils, and are graded into two departments.

The first building used for school purposes was a private residence. The regular school building was erected in the fall of 1871, and was a crude wooden structure made of hewn logs, and weather-boarded with split clapboards. This building, after its completion, was used as a schoolhouse, church and a general camping place for new-comers. It was made with nothing but an earthern floor, the sills being made use of for seats. The schoolhouse now in use was built in the spring of 1873, and is a two-story frame surmounted with a cupola.

THE PRESS AND OTHER LOCAL MATTERS.

Longton, like most of the towns in the county, comes in with her well filled list of journalistic attempts. The first newspaper that was published in the county was published at this place. In the spring of 1871, Adrian Reynolds began the issue of the Howard County Ledger, which he moved to Elk Falls in the spring of 1874, and again in the fall of 1876 went to Howard. The Courant, edited by A. B. Steinberger, was brought to this place from Elk City in the fall of 1874, and after remaining one year was taken to Howard City.

The Longton Times, now in successful operation, was established March 25, 1881, by F. C. and G. M. Flory. The paper is a six-column folio, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 500 copies.

F. C. Flory, editor-in-chief of the Longton Times, was born in Ottawa, Ill., December 22, 1858. At five years of age his parents moved to Keokuk, Iowa, where young Flory was engaged in attending school, working on farm, etc., until eleven years of age. In the spring of 1871, the family came to Kansas, settling at Longton, where he began learning the printer's trade, working with A. Reynolds on the Howard County Ledger.

Leaving Longton, he worked two years and a half in Independence on newspaper work, and in the spring of 1876 returned to Iowa. In December, 1879, he, in company with Vander Meulen, began the publication of a paper called the Marion County Express, in which he continued about a year, when he sold out his interest in the paper and returned to Kansas, and on the 25th of March, 1881, started the Longton Times.

Longton at one time enjoyed a supremacy over the other towns in the county, and for awhile it was universally believed that she was destined to become the future metropolis of Elk County, but alas! "the best laid plans of mice and men gang aft aglee." Longton had her day in which she flourished—had even attained to that point when she thought herself capable of taking on city garments, and even had elected a corp of city officials under incorporation. But there was a want of harmony among her people, and the wrangling of contesting factions began to mar her prospects. Besides this, other towns began to flourish, and Longton began to wane. Progress became checked, and in a short time the tendency was backward. Perhaps the greatest check thrown upon the improvement of Longton was the establishing of the county seat at Howard City, and the consequent stimulus to the rapid development of that place, and when it became noised abroad that this was to be the chief town of the county all interest in other places was dropped and centered upon Howard City. Thus, Longton was left to a slower growth amid bedimmed prospects, and although she may never attain to any magnitude, will yet continue a creditable town and trading point.

OAK VALLEY.

This town was laid out in September, 1879, by John Johnson; the land upon which it is built was entered as a claim by Daniel Moser, and in 1871 became the property of Johnson by purchase. The completion of the Kansas City, Lawrence & Southern Railroad was made in August of 1879, and was the cause of the locating of the town. The first structure erected on the site was a residence built by Johnson, which was followed by the erection of a store room by M. Donovan, in which he opened a stock of general merchandise, and is the room now occupied by H. B. Marshall and D. G. Kalar. The next business house was built by H. Shoemaker, which he afterward sold to John Johnson, and was used for a drug store by George E. Ott. After about a year, it again changed hands, being purchased by R. M. Smith and used by B. F. Clark for general store. In March, 1881, N. B. Bryant and M. Davis put up a store house and engaged in the sale of general merchandise, and in September of the same year G. D. Berger established a similar business in a building erected for that purpose.

A blacksmith shop was started in May, 1880, by H. Shoemaker, who in the month of October of the next year sold out to J. P. Molton.

The depot building was erected in September, 1879. The post office was established at Oak Valley in 1876, and John Johnson was commissioned Postmaster, and who kept the office at his residence until April, 1880, when it was brought to its present location in the drug store. The organization of a district school for the town and vicinity was effected in April, 1882, and a school building was erected during the spring of that year at a cost of $800, for the payment of which bonds were issued by the district to that amount.

The first religious services were held in the place July 23, 1882, by Rev. Mr. Callison, the Presiding Elder, the meeting taking place in the school building, where services are still conducted.

A flouring mill was built in August, 1876, by John Johnson, and is 28x40 feet in dimensions, two stories high, and contains two run of buhrs, having a grinding capacity of twenty-five barrels of flour per day. The power is derived from Elk River, a turbine water wheel being made use of.

The town, 125 inhabitants, is beautifully situated at the confluence of Hickory Creek and Elk River, in a forest composed mostly of oak trees, from which it derives its name. The trade by which the place is supported is that supplied mainly by settlers from the Upper Duck, Salt and East Painterhood Creeks.

The first death occurring in the town was that of an infant child belonging to C. H. Jones. The first birth was that of Wilson Shoemaker, son of H. Shoemaker.

No circumstance presents itself from which to augur favorably for the future of the town. Indeed the character of its surroundings is rather against this. The total unfitness of much of the land surrounding the place for agricultural purposes, and the consequent limited area of tillable land, being the chief obstacle. And yet while it may not attain to any considerable proportions as a town, it will continue to be a fine trading point and depot for the purchase of domestic and farm supplies.

WOODSON COUNTY.

LOCATION AND TOPOGRAPHY.

WOODSON County takes its name from Gov. Silas Woodson, of Missouri. When, however, this honor was conferred on the unknown and unsettled tract in the third tier of counties west of the State line, the space designated by the Legislature contained little if any of the territory which now bears this name. To understand this matter, it is necessary to go back to 1855 and the proceedings of the famous "bogus Legislature." Among the acts of that body was the laying-out of a whole block of rectangular counties. This act was passed before surveys were made and boundary lines of counties were given in miles from the points named. The initial point for counties south of the Kansas River was the mouth of that river.

The southeast corner of Johnson County was twenty-six miles south of that point, the southeast corner of Lykins (Miami) was twenty-four miles farther south; Linn stretched south twenty-four miles more; Bourbon thirty miles, and McGee ran to the southeast corner of the Territory. Four tiers of counties were blocked out in exact conformity to these, and in the third tier lay Woodson, the second from the south line and occupying almost the identical land now known as Wilson.

In 1857 the counties of the third tier were crowded northward, and Wilson, taking in what was Woodson, pushed the latter to nearly its present boundaries.

In 1861, through a blunder on the part of the Representative from this county, a new survey and location of boundaries took from the south line a strip three miles in width and gave it to Wilson County, which has ever since held it.

By the act of 1857 the boundaries of Woodson County were defined as follows:

> The county of Woodson shall be bounded as follows: Beginning at the southwest corner of Anderson County; thence south along the west boundary of Allen County to the northwest corner of Dorn County; thence west with the section lines to the corner to Sections 14, 15, 22 and 23 of Township 26 south, of Range 13 east; thence north with the section lines dividing the second and third tier of sections, to the southwest corner of Coffey County; thence east along the south boundary of said Coffey County to the place of beginning.

By the general statutes of 1868, Woodson County is bounded as follows:

> Commencing at the southwest corner of Anderson County; thence south with section lines and the west line of Allen County to the south line of Township 26 south; thence west with said township line and the north line of Wilson County, to the east line of Greenwood County; thence north with said east line of Greenwood County to the corner to Sections 14, 15, 22 and 23 of Township 23 south of Range 13 east; thence east on section lines and the south line of Coffey County to the place of beginning.

The county is largely upland, having but ten per cent of bottom land. Forest covers six per cent, the remaining ninety-four being prairie. The Neosho, which enters near the northeast corner of the county and runs southeasterly to the county line, is the principal stream. The Verdigris cuts across the southwest corner of the county, and Owl Creek rising near the center of the county runs to the eastern line. Aside from these supplies of water are numerous small creeks and springs. Wells are sunk to a depth of from twenty to forty feet. Along the streams are belts of timber varying in width, but averaging a half mile. In these belts are found oak, hickory, black walnut, hackberry, locust, sycamore, elm and cottonwood. A large number of box-elders and cottonwoods have been artificially produced by settlers. Coal is found in veins of considerable thickness, and prior to the construction of the St. Louis, Fort Scott & Wichita Railway was the principal resource of the population for heating purposes. A fine quality of sandstone is found at various points, and near Yates Center a number of quarries are in operation. When first taken out this stone contains considerable water and is very readily worked, but it hardens to a fine consistency after brief exposure.

EARLY SETTLERS.

Although many settlers were located in this county prior to the war of the rebellion all were, up to 1860, trespassers. The wide strip which took in all of Woodson County and a small slice of Coffey was the reserve of the New York Indians. This strip began at the State line and ran westward beyond the survey lines, while on the south it joined the Osage reserve. The part of the strip now embraced in Woodson County was never occupied by any of the New York tribes, their only settlement being a temporary one near Fort Scott. Finding that the Indians would not settle on the reserve, the Government in 1860 had all of these lands offered for sale and opened to pre-emption at the land office at Fort Scott. News of this movement having been circulated throughout the county, the squatter settlers hastened to the land office and made the appropriate entries. Thus peacefully the well-nigh mythical Indian inhabitants forsook their lands, leaving them to the further improvement of the pale faces.

It is extremely difficult to determine who were actually the first settlers in the county. Many who came at an early day have passed on, following the setting sun, and many have passed from the sight of the great luminary. Jack Caven, John Woolman, John Chapman and others reached Neosho Falls on March 2, 1857. About the same time Thomas Sears took a claim in Liberty Township and William Stockebrand, August Toddmann and August Lauber in Center Township. These, although the best known of the pioneers, were not the first, Reuben Daniels settling in Belmont in 1856; David Cooper in Toronto, and John Coleman in Owl Creek Township in 1856.

Many notable propositions have come up in the brief history of the county for the decision of its voting population. In 1861, the banking law was approved by a vote of 62 to 7, and the same election gave Lawrence 71 votes and Topeka 5 for State capital. In 1867, the fall election was made trebly interesting by the submission of the question of elective franchise (lost 56 to 187), of striking the word white from the Constitution (lost 88 to 149), and of women suffrage, striking out the word "male" (lost 94 to 141).

In 1875, the year following that of the loss of crops, an effort was made to secure bonds in the sum of $5,000, for the benefit of the destitute of the State; but the people probably thinking that charity begins at home, the effort failed. The matter was voted upon February 27, the vote standing 199 to 396.

On November 2, 1880, the measure which has exerted the greatest influence in the State and county, the prohibitory amendment to the Constitution, was passed by a vote of 746 to 580.

On August 16, 1858, the Board of County Supervisors met at Neosho Falls and proceeded to lay off the county into the townships of Neosho Falls, Liberty, Owl Creek, Belmont and Verdigris Townships.

On May 22, 1858, the Board of Supervisors of Woodson County, consisting of I. W. Dow, G. J. Caven and William Phillips with Charles Cameron, Clerk of the board, met at Neosho Falls and passed an order for the conduct of all county business at Neosho Falls. At a meeting the same month, N. G. Goss & Co. donated a jail building to the county for as long a time as Neosho Falls should remain the county seat. On February 24, 1865, the county officers "being thrown out of their office," a contract was made with I. W. Dow for the erection of a suitable building, but as he was unable to complete his work, Dow's Hall was rented at $36 per year. Neither jail nor court house could long secure the county seat, and on November 5, 1867, an election was held to permanently locate the seat of justice. This resulted in giving Neosho Falls 129, Center 2, Coloma 2, and the southwest quarter of Section 11, Town 25, Range 15, 118. This is the site of the present county seat, Yates Center. The ball thus set rolling, elections followed each other rapidly. On September 21, 1868, Neosho Falls received 313, and Chellis 199. The next recorded election took place November 3, 1873, and gave Defiance 506, Kalida, 530, and Waldrip 1. Kalida, which thus became the county seat, was two miles southeast of Yates Center, and Defiance was six miles east. Both towns were at a later date transferred bodily to Yates Center. On February 23, 1874, the vexed question came up again, and Defiance was victorious over Kalida by a score of 643 to 491. A year later a new factor came up in the fight and a fresh election was called. This gave Defiance 235, Neosho Falls 301, and Yates Center 335. A second election to decide between the Center and the Falls took place September 12, 1876, and was hotly contested, resulting, Neosho Falls 426, Yates Center 488. This settled the question, which has never since been revived.

The first money that came into the official possession of a County Treasurer was contributed by the famous "Bully Smith." Smith had been on a prolonged spree, and descending upon the town went about, like the Irishman, looking for "some boy to tread on the tail of me coat." Being known as a desperate character, he found no one to accommodate him, and began a promenade in front of Col. N. S. Goss's office, pouring out a torrent of abuse of the sort generally expressed in print by dashes. No attention being paid to this, he hurled a stone through the window, hitting the Colonel, who was sitting within. Goss came out instantly, and before Smith fairly knew what had happened, a writ had been sworn out before Judge D. H. Miller, and the iron hand of the Sheriff had gathered in the man that boasted that no man could take him alive. A fine of $10 was imposed, a gold coin transferred to the Judge, and Smith left, vowing never to return. This coin was transferred to County Treasurer Haughawout, and reposed in his pocket, the only county safe, for some months. Smith finally returned to the town, and apologizing to Col. Goss for his action, suggested a compromise which was effected, the fine remitted, and a quantity of whisky procured on which a large party became exceedingly happy. This was prior to the prohibitory law.

This same "Bully Smith" had a little difficulty about a land entry with a neighbor named Ray, late in 1860. Ray, knowing that an entry at the land office at Fort Scott would settle the question, started for that point and reached a ford on the Marmaton, where he was overtaken and shot by Smith, who returned to the town and openly avowed what he had done. Many other crimes of this nature were laid at Smith's door, and never denied by him. These facts made a residence in this county extremely undesirable, and Smith emigrated to California, where it is reported he "died with his boots on." Crimes of this nature were not uncommon in the days of border ruffianism, and those of bushwhacking which soon followed. Many a man was shot in cold blood for little more than a whim of his murderer. In 1858, a settler named Coleman, living on Owl Creek, was called to his door and shot dead by unknown men. No reason was ever given for the act except that he was known to be a Free-State man. Many other incidents, which would throw a baleful light on the worst side of pioneer life might be cited, but these will suffice.

On April 5, 1859, the County Commissioners met and proceeded to canvass the vote on the question of adopting a constitution. But three of the townships made returns. Of these, Belmont voted for a constitution solidly, no votes being polled against, and 13 in favor. Neosho Falls gave 51 for, and 1 against, and Verdigris 13 for and 3 against the adoption of a constitution. Thus the total vote stood 77 to 4.

Education.—The first school taught in the county was that in District No. 3, Toronto Township, which was started in 1858. Neosho Falls, in District No. 8, also had a school this year. District No. 1 was organized in Liberty Township in 1859; No. 13 in Center Township in 1862, and No. 5 in Owl Creek Township the same year. The county had in 1878 when the first report was made, fifty-seven school districts; in 1879, fifty-nine; in 1881, sixty-two, and in 1882, sixty-four. The population between the ages of five and twenty-one was in 1878, 2,236; in 1879, 2,502; in 1881, 2,567, and in 1882, 2,638. The number of pupils enrolled was in 1878 —— in 1879, 2,086; in 1881, 2,150; and in 1882, 2,128. The average attendance in 1877 was not given; in 1879, it was 1,265; in 1881, 1,350 and in 1882, 1,550. The total expenditures in 1877 were not given; they were in 1879, $14,662.03; in 1881, $14,588.72, and in 1882, $16,744.04. The amount of school bonds is not reported prior to 1881, when they amounted to $3,340. To this sum was added during 1882, for sadly needed school buildings, $10,500.

War History.—In November, 1861, a company of soldiers for service in the Union army was organized at Neosho Falls with B. F. Goss Captain and I. W. Dow First Lieutenant. This was part of what was known as the Iola battalion. These troops were consolidated with others and formed part of the Ninth Kansas Cavalry. They participated in the engagements of Wilson Creek, Prairie Grove, Pea Ridge and many others, and after two years' service on the border went south into Arkansas, where they remained until the close of the war. Many returned to Neosho Falls and other points in the county, while others formed new ties and drifted to fresh harbors, and still others parted their moorings forever and drifted out from the noise and carnage of battle to the endless calm of the unknown sea.

Railroads.—The first railway to make proposals to the county was the Union Pacific, which contemplated running a southern branch through the county; $70,000 of bonds were asked and the proposition submitted to the people on August 16, 1867. Returns were received from Neosho Falls, Liberty, Owl Creek and Belmont Townships, aggregating 166 for the measure and 115 against it. On November 5 of the same year a second effort was made to secure this road $71,000 in bonds, but it proved ineffectual, the vote standing 125 to 131. In 1870, the Humboldt & Arkansas River Railway was organized and proposed to build west from Humboldt across Woodson County. Owl Creek Township was asked for $50,000 in bonds; Belmont Township, $30,000, and Toronto Township $20,000. All bonds were to run thirty years and only to be issued upon the completion of the road. The proposition was accepted by a small majority in Belmont and Toronto, but lost in Owl Creek Township by a vote of 22 to 144. The road was never built. At the same time the Fort Scott, Iola & Neosho Valley Railway asked $50,000 in bonds from Neosho Falls Township on condition of completing the road and putting it in operation by January 1, 1872. The same year it was proposed to issue $175,000 in bonds to the Paola & Fall River Railway and an election was held, but the point was taken and sustained that there had not been a sufficient publication of the notice of election and the votes were never canvassed. About this time the Fort Scott, Humboldt & Western Railway made a bond proposition, but it was very effectually killed by a vote of 175 to 701. The next candidate was the St. Louis, Fort Scott & Arizona Railway, which received a vote of 745 to 504, the returns from Owl Creek Township which were heavily against the proposition being thrown out. The road was, however, never built. On March 15, 1881, the proposition to vote bonds to the Kansas, Arizona Railway was submitted in Liberty Township and lost, 99 to 129. In June, 1881, the only cross-country railway that ever became a reality in the county made a proposition for the subscription of bonds to its stock. This road, the St. Louis, Fort Scott & Wichita, asked $28,000 of Center and $22,000 of Toronto Township. The measure met with comparatively little opposition in either place and passed by 124 to 71 in Center and 64 to 14 in Toronto. Work was at once begun on the road, and it was completed through the county the same fall. The latest candidate for assistance in railway is the Nebraska, Topeka, Iola & Memphis Railway, to which Neosho Township voted $20,000 in bonds on September 20, 1881, the ballot being 178 for the road and 39 against it.

Crop Acreage.—The following table shows the acreage devoted to the principal products of the county. A perusal of its columns will readily show the reader what crops have been found best adapted to the soil of the county:

A Prehistoric Cave.—This cave is situated about twelve miles north of Toronto, on Section 13, Township 24, Range 14. Its mouth is about fifty feet wide and ten feet high, and the cave extends back about twenty feet. In the mouth of the cave lies a rock about nine feet long by six feet wide, the surface of which is nearly horizontal, the rock having evidently fallen from the roof of the cavern. On the surface of this rock are cut numerous figures of various sizes and shapes, some of which are indescribable. No system or regularity was observed by the inscribers, but the different figures and groups of incisions are scattered promiscuously, often overlapping and interlacing each other, as if done more for pastime than for the purpose of leaving any record of events then occurring, to be read by future generations. Some of the figures represent the human body, others parts of the body, as the head, with a small hat on, and marks down the chin, which may have been meant to represent the beard. One may have been designed to represent a little idol, another a bird's foot, another looks like a capital A, etc.

Great interest is manifested in them by the people of Woodson County, which is doubtless altogether owing to the fact of their mysteriousness. The same interest will probably always attach to them. There is but little reason to hope that they will be so deciphered as to throw any light on the history of the past.

These tracings, or figures, or hieroglyphics, as some call them, were discovered about May 15, 1858, by Esquire Robert Daly, while out on a private hunting expedition. At the time of discovery, they were covered over with dirt and debris, and partially overgrown with moss. Mr. Daly, who was one of the first settlers in this part of the county, has resided in the vicinity ever since, and now lives about one and a half miles south of this prehistoric cave.

Hoffman, 66; Allen Crocker, 60; Hyram Hover, 4. Hoffman was declared elected, and was one of those who helped to frame the Wyandotte Constitution. This constitution framed, it became necessary to submit it to the approbation of the people, and an election was called for October 4, 1859, for this purpose. This resulted in favor of the Constitution by a vote of 91 to 53. At the same time the Homestead Law was submitted and carried by a vote of 68 to 44. Events moved rapidly this year. Hardly was this election disposed of, when another was ordered for November 8. At this the vote stood as follows: For Territorial Delegate—Marcus J. Parrott, 87; S. W. Johnston, 77. Member of the Council from the Twelfth District—N. S. Goss, 100; Watson Stewart, 65. Representative—P. G. D. Morton, 85; E. J. Brown, 84. YATES CENTER.

Yates Center, the county seat of Woodson County, is located on Sections 10, 11, 14 and 15, and includes with its various additions about 500 acres in Town 25, Range 15, the geographical center of the county. It is to this fact that it owes its existence, its owner, Abner Yates, being a resident of Jacksonville, Ill., and having never contemplated starting a town at this point. The locating of a county seat had kept the county in a state of uncertainty for several years and the inhabitants of Kalida and Defiance, each of which had been for a time the county seat, made overtures to Mr. Yates for the laying-out of a town which should by its position in the county be the most convenient seat of justice. A plan of operations was formed and to be in readiness for the outcome of the election, more particularly described already. Mr. Yates purchased a two-story building of F. G. Lange, and had it moved to the town site, where it was placed on the southwest corner of the square where the store of T. W. Wilson now stands. This was the first building on the town site, and was for a long time used not only for county business, but for religious services and all public gatherings. When Yates Center became the county seat, Kalida and Defiance, two small places in which for a time "the county seat on wheels" had rested in turn, put themselves on wheels and came to Yates Center. It was about this time, or a little earlier, that the name of the place was fixed contrary to the desire of the owner, who had chosen for it the name of Butler, but found the place already localized as Yates Center (of the county). Many of the buildings moved from the old towns were stores, and were continued by their owners. The first general store, that of George Wille, was one of these. T. W. Wilson opened the second store, and J. M. Wolfer, with a stock of drugs, came third. Dr. E. V. Wharton, the first physician, was soon followed by Dr. J. W. Turner. Jesse Pickett, the present County Attorney, was the first of his profession, but came only a short time before Judge W. H. Thurber and Alexander Stewart. The first hotel was moved from Kalida and run by C. W. Wilson. It was soon purchased by F. G. Lange, who has from time to time enlarged it and now operates it. C. W. Wilson was the first liveryman, and J. B. Fay the first blacksmith. In 1878, the court house buildings, which had stood at Defiance and were the property of the county, were removed to Yates Center, where they occupy the northeast corner of the square. The town has never been incorporated, and is all, except what has been sold to various parties, or donated for church, school or other purposes, the property of Mr. Abner Yates. Mr. Yates has made three additions to the original plat of the town, and J. B. Fry one, on the northeast of Section 11.

The town now has a population of 800. Two good hotels supply the wants of the traveling public and a large number of first-class stores the needs of the outlying population. The St. Louis, Fort Scott & Wichita Railway entered the town in the fall of 1879, and at once afforded direct communication with the great cities of the East. Within the year 1882 over sixty buildings have been erected, many of them large and substantial, and several stone stores, which would be a credit to much larger places.

LOCAL MATTERS.

Postal Affairs.—The post office at Yates Center was opened in 1877, and L. J. Wells appointed Postmaster, remaining in this position until the spring of 1882, when I. N. Holloway, the present official, was appointed. The post office occupies a neat building on the northeast corner of the public square.

Education.—School District No. 51, which embraces Yates Center, was formed in 1875 and school taught that year by Miss Kate Rhea. In 1876, two teachers were employed for six and three months respectively—George E. Faler, now editor of the News, and G. E. Carpenter. In 1877, a stone schoolhouse was built in Yates Center on land donated by Abner Yates. This building, which cost $800, soon proved too small, and a wooden one was joined to it at a cost of $600. The rapid growth of population soon made this compound building inadequate, and on July 24, 1882, it was decided by ballot to issue $5,000 of the bonds of the district and with the proceeds build anew. This will be done in 1882–83. The new building is of stone and has four rooms. It is located in the north part of town. The first teacher in the present building was George E. Faler. He was followed by J. W. Richardson, 1878–79–80; M. C. Smith, 1881, and W. S. Shippey, 1882. Mr. Shippey has as assistants his wife and Miss B. Harris. The school now has an enrollment of one hundred and seventy.

Methodism.—The Methodist Church of Yates Center was organized at Kalida prior to 1870, and moved thence when the town was removed in 1876. Its first pastor in Yates Center was Rev. J. McNulty, who supplied the charge three years. He was followed by Rev. T. A. Walker, who remained two years, and Rev. W. H. Carwardine, who entered upon his pastorate in March, 1881, and still remains. The church has now a membership of forty-three. A wooden church building was erected in 1880 at a cost of $1,000. The Sabbath school of the church was organized on January 1, 1881, and is in charge of N. F. Follett. It has an attendance of seventy.

Christian Church.—The Christian Church of Yates Center embraces a large number of farmers who live at a distance from the town, and thus while apparently weak, is really one of the strongest churches. It was organized in October, 1876, by Rev. J. W. Shively and had a membership of fourteen, but up to the arrival of Rev. C. J. Wright in March, 1877, had no pastor. Mr. Wright retired in March, 1878, and was followed in the fall of that year by Rev. C. W. Pool. He also left after a year's service and the pulpit was not filled until March, 1881, when Rev. J. J. Williams was called. Since his resignation a year later the church has had no regular pastor, although services are held every second Sunday. The church membership is now seventy-five. A neat stone church, 30x47 feet, was built in 1877 at a cost of $1,800. The church has no separate Sabbath school.

Presbyterian Church.—The Presbyterian Church at this point was organized in May, 1880, by Rev. John Creath, who was not the pastor of the church, although he held services for a considerable time. The church had at the time of organization thirteen members. Its first regular pastor was Rev. H. R. Lewis, who preached from June 1, 1880, until September of the same year. He was followed, October 1, 1881, by Rev. B. F. Haviland, who is still in charge. The society holds services every second Sunday in the Methodist Episcopal Church. When in charge of a pastor the same rule is in force, half time being given to the church at Neosho Falls. The membership of the church is now seventeen. Their Sabbath school is amalgamated with the Union school.

Baptist Church.—The Baptist society was organized in August, 1882. It has, as yet, no pastor. Occasional services are held in the schoolhouse. The society numbers fifteen, but will be greatly increased upon the appointment of a pastor, as there are many of this belief living near this place.

The News.—The Weekly News was brought into existence in February, 1877, at Yates Center. Its publishers were Steinbarger & Baker. The former soon retired and E. W. Baker continued publication until May, 1878, when he sold out to S. P. Bacon and J. B. Fry. The name of the paper was then changed to the Yates Center News. In 1880, the office passed into the hands of W. H. Slavens & G. W. Fry, who ran the paper until February 27, 1882, when it was purchased by its present editor, George E. Faler. Under his management the paper has been a stalwart Republican sheet. It now has a circulation of 800 copies weekly.

The Argus.—The Yates Center Argus, a five-column Republican folio, came into being in the field of journalism on Saturday, March 18, 1882. Its owners were T. W. Wilson and W. H. Jones, the latter being editor and manager. On July 1, Jones retired and his interest was taken by Robert R. Wells. At the same time Wilson was replaced by his son H. E. Wilson, and the paper became Independent in politics. It has now a circulation of 500 copies weekly. It is published Saturdays.

Masonic.—Gilead Lodge, No. 144, A., F. & A. M., was organized at Kalida on October 16, 1873, and removed to Yates Center when the old town was abandoned. The first officers of the lodge were: J. L. Jones, W. M.; A. F. Palmer, S. W.; W. T. Wardrip, J. W.; H. M. Hubbard, Secretary; John Pringle, Treasurer. The lodge how has a membership of fifty. Meetings are held on each Friday on or before full moon, and each two weeks thereafter, in the hall jointly occupied by this lodge and the Odd Fellows. The present officers of the lodge are, George E. Faler, W. M.; W. H. Slavens, S. W.; J. C. Powell, J. W.; T. W. Wilson, Treasurer; I. M. Jewitt, Secretary.

Odd Fellows.—Woodson Lodge, No. 173, I. O. O. F., was organized in May, 1880, with a membership of fifteen, eight of whom were initiated at the first meeting. The roll of charter officers is as follows: R. A. Hurt, N. G.; J. C. Jameson, V. G.; A. F. Palmer, Secretary; T. W. Wilson, Treasurer. The present officers of the lodge are, G. W. Davis, N. G.; I. N. Holloway, V. G.; C. S. Jones, Secretary; I. M. Jewitt, Treasurer. The lodge now has a membership of thirty. Meetings are held in the hall used jointly by this society and the Masonic fraternity, on each Tuesday evening.

A. O. U. W.—Yates Center Lodge, No. 99, Ancient Order United Workingmen, was organized on April 8, 1882, with fourteen members and the following officers: H. W. West, P. M. W.; J. W. Richardson, M. W.; T. W. Wilson, G. F.; J. C. Powell, O.; A. Van Slyke, Recorder; N. F. Follett, Financier; H. Lyman, Receiver. The lodge now has a membership of twenty-eight. Meetings are held on Thursday evening of each week in Masonic Hall. The officers of the lodge are now: H. W. West, P. M. W.; T. W. Wilson, M. W.; H. Lyman, G. F.; M. E. Whitehead, O.; W. W. Chance, Recorder; H. W. West, Financier; C. W. Wilson, Receiver.

Knights of Pythias.—Oak Hall Lodge (U. D.) K. of P., was organized on November 20, 1882, with a membership of thirty-two and the following officers: I. N. Thompson, P. C.; H. J. Johnson, V. C.; W. H. Slavens, C. C. The society meets on Monday of each week in Masonic Hall.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

W. A. BAILEY, Register of Deeds, came to Kansas in August, 1876; located on a farm near Yates Center; taught school for three years, and engaged for a short time in the grocery business, and was for nine months proprietor of the Central Hotel, Yates Center. In the spring of 1881, he was elected Trustee of Center Township, and in the fall was elected Register of Deeds, which position he holds at the present time. He was born in Randolph County, Ind., August 14, 1854; is the son of William H. and Margaret Ann Bailey. Lived twenty-one years in his native county, and served eighteen months as a telegraph operator for the Bee Line R. R., at Farmland, Randolph Co., Ind., and in August, 1875, moved to Iowa, where he attended school about one year, and came to Kansas. He was married in Woodson County, Kan., September 3, 1876, to Sarah E. Bell, daughter of George W. and Elizabeth Bell. He has two children—Frances W. C. and Annie E. Bailey. Mr. Bailey is one of the promising young men of the State, and is destined to be prominently identified with its future history. He belongs to the I. O. O. DR. O. J. SKINNER, physician and surgeon, was born near Montpelier, Washington Co., Vt., September 3, 1817. Is the son of Orson and Dorothea Skinner. His parents were natives of Massachusetts, and descendants of colonists who emigrated from England in the early days of the colonies. The Skinner family in America are the descendants of three brothers from London, Eng. (merchants), who settled some time in 1600—one in the Colony of Virginia, one in Massachusetts, and one in Connecticut. They engaged in connection in a coasting and importing trade. The grandfather was a Lieutenant in the war of the Revolution. The father was for some time Associate Justice in the Circuit Court for his county. The subject of this sketch was educated at Randolph Seminary, in Randolph Center, Vt. In 1838, he removed to Chicago, Ill., and remained there and in that vicinity over two years. A part of the time was employed as a Superintendent of Work in the construction of the Illinois & Michigan Ship Canal. Surveyed a State road from Chicago to Rockford, the first from the city leading to that portion of the State. He then removed to Summit County, Ohio, residing most of the time in Akron and vicinity for about six years, most of which was spent in the study of his profession and in teaching. His health failing (by advice), removed South, stopping at Jamestown, county seat of Russell County, Ky., where he was not permitted to rest, but was induced to teach once more. During the year so engaged, was appointed, and (until the adoption of the new Constitution) acted as Probate Commissioner for the county. In the meantime, was appointed Postmaster, which office was held for about two years, most of the official duties being discharged by a very obliging and intelligent medical student. Confinement still resulting in ill health, under advice, he sought an out-door, active life. The office of County Surveyor becoming vacant, was elected, and discharged (with the aid of a deputy) the duties of that office for four years, with more or less practice in his profession. In 1853, removed to Whitley County, Ky., engaged in the practice of medicine, and, with others, erected and operated an extensive mill on Cumberland River until the breaking-out of the war, which caused a suspension of nearly all business upon that river. During the war, on account of returning sick soldiers, and the absence of physicians, had a laborious practice, extending over a large area, even into Tennessee. To defend the border against the depredations of marauding bands of guerrillas, the militia of the State was organized, and Dr. Skinner, at the solicitation of the Governor, accepted a commission as Colonel of the One Hundred and Eleventh Regiment State Militia. He proceeded to organize the same, and discharged the duties assigned by His Excellency and the Provost Department, until near the close of the war. During his absence from the county, was elected Justice of the Peace, which office he held for four years. He served for fifteen years as Circuit Court Examiner for his county. In 1871 and part of 1872, was United States Division Assessor, embracing his own and other counties. He still owns and leases or lets his farm, while he lives in retirement at Yates Center. Since 1879, he and his wife have devoted almost an entire year in visiting friends in the East. They have also visited the Springs in Arkansas, and are among the very few farmers in the West who, having obtained a competence, know just how to realize the most solid comfort and enjoyment in the judicious use of their acquisitions. Mr. Whitney helped to organize the first school district in Woodson County. He has served several terms as Township Trustee. He was born in Wallingsford, Vt., May 4, 1821. He is a son of John and Augusta Whitney. At an early age he went with his parents to Chautauqua County, N. Y., where he was educated in the public schools, and where he grew to manhood on a farm; and when about twenty-two years of age removed to Boone County, Ill., remaining there four years, and then moved to Marquette County, Wis., remained there five years, and in the spring of 1851, went with an ox-team to California, and worked in timber, cutting and marketing wood in San Francisco Bay until 1858, and on the 20th day of January took a steamer for New York, came near being wrecked in a storm on the way, but after a rough voyage, he reached New York City in safety. He returned to Wisconsin and made preparations to emigrate to Kansas, and the same year went to Chautauqua County, N. Y., and on October 3, 1858, he was married to Lydia A. Morian, daughter of Jacob and Lydia Morian. Soon after their marriage they started for Kansas, and came as far west as Boone County, Ill., by rail, then made the rest of the journey with an ox-team and wagon, stopping to winter at Brunswick, Mo., and arriving in Woodson County, Kan., in the spring of 1859. They have three living children—Omar, Sarah Jane and William Morian Whitney. Mr. and Mrs. Whitney are both zealous members of the Missionary Baptist Church. Mrs. Whitney taught one of the first district schools in Woodson County. Mr. Whitney helped to organize the first Baptist Church in the county. He is a worthy Mason, an able advocate of temperance reform, and is one of Woodson County's best and most influential citizens.

THOMAS W. WILSON, merchant and dealer in general merchandise, southwest corner of public square, came to Kansas in 1870; located at Kalida, then the county seat, and engaged in merchandising for five years in that place, and has prosecuted the same line of business in Yates Center ever since. He is one of the few men whom nature built for success in this business. Commencing at Kalida with a capital not exceeding $500, he has gradually extended his business until he now owns one of the most substantial business houses in the county, and carries a stock of $25,000 worth of general merchandise. He served seven months as a private soldier in the war of the rebellion, and was mustered out of Company A, Thirteenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, in March, 1862, on account of disability. He was born in Richland County, Ohio, August 6, 1840. He is a son of John A. and Mary A. Wilson. He lived five years in his native county, eight years in Noble County, and sixteen years in Linn County, Ind. Then moved to Woodson County, Kan. He was married in Linn County, Iowa, April 12, 1860, to Mary E. Gephart, a native of Ohio, and daughter of Joseph Gephart. By this union they have four children, viz.: Henry Edwin, Emily Idella, John Elmer and Netta May. Mr. Wilson is a consistent member of the Christian Church, and has been Treasurer of the Masonic Lodge for nine years; is also a member of the Knights Templar, I. O. O. F., Knights of Pythias, and A. O. U. W. He has shrewd native talent, knows little about text-books, but being a close observer, has gained by experience an education thoroughly practical in its kind. His commercial as well as his social standing, is first-class.

NEOSHO FALLS.

Neosho Falls, the oldest town in the county and for a long time the seat of justice, is located on the Neosho River in the northeast corner of the county. Its name is taken from the river which here brawled in a broad sheet of foamy ripples over the ledges of its bed. One of the first works of the early settlers was to build a dam across the rapids, and thus the town became genuinely "the Falls." The town site occupies a broad level table on the southwest bank, and is sheltered from all north and east winds by the heavy timber belt which lines the river. Westward lie level fields at present cultivated but always available for residence purposes, as the growth of the city may demand increased space.

On April 6, 1857, Col. N. S. Goss and I. W. Dow arrived at Neosho Falls, having come in a one-horse rig from Iowa. Before reaching the Falls, they had skirted the Coffey County line, and finally just west of where the city now stands found the cabin of Judge John Woolman. At that time John Chapman was living on Spring Creek, just north of the Falls, and these two were almost the only settlers in the county, which was as yet the reserve of the New York Indians, and not open to pre-emption. On August 16, 1857, E. Fender came to the Falls, as the rapids in the Neosho River were then called, and built a cabin on the north bank. Other settlers came in the fall of 1857, and the spring of 1858, and early in the latter year Ruggles and Stevens built a cabin on the south bank and began to sell goods. A little later, the same firm built the frame store building which still stands opposite the Falls House, and is occupied by Clark & Co. In 1858, this firm also erected the Falls House. These two latter buildings, although among the first, were antedated on the south bank by a number of log cabins used for dwellings. The second store building was erected by J. Fisher, who put in a stock of drugs. A physician, Dr. A. McCartney, now of Neodesha, Wilson County, was already on the ground, having come in 1857. The first birth in the town was that of Lucy, daughter of S. J. Williams—now married and living in Topeka. The first wedding under the marriage license act was that of Dr. S. J. Williams and Miss Eva Fender. This was also the first marriage under the act in the county.

On September 5, 1870, Neosho Falls was incorporated as a town, and D. W. Finney, V. L. Spawr and I. W. Dow made trustees. Early in 1871, upon the passage of the act relating to the organization of cities, the town became a city, and O. P. Haughawout was made Mayor, and W. E. Grove, City Clerk. The list of Mayors since that time is as follows: J. S. Waterbury, 1872; J. Bishop, 1873; O. S. Woodward, 1874; J. P. Sharp, 1875; Benjamin Hunt, 1876; R. P. Hanna, 1877-78; C. H. Goodrich, 1879-80; S. Michener, 1881; J. C. Jones, 1882. C. B. Graves was City Clerk in 1872; W. P. Talbott in 1873, and H. D. Dickson from 1874 to the present time.

A post office was established at Neosho Falls in 1857, for the accommodation of the settlers, and N. S. Goss appointed Postmaster.

The business of the office was not very vast at that time, the only settlers being in the two cabins on the north side of the river, and a few scattered to the west and north near the Coffey County line. Col. Goss held the office until 1859, when Peter Stevens took it and held it until the day of his death. This occurred in 1861, and George Wait was appointed. He was followed by S. J. Williams in 1867, and he, nine years later, by W. W. Sain, who held office until January 26, 1880, when R. P. Hamm, the present Postmaster, was appointed. The first post office was in one of the log cabins until taken by Wait to his house, a small frame, near where the Falls House now stands. Sain had a corner of a hardware store for a post office, and it was not until Hamm's administration that Uncle Sam's mail bags had a home of their own.

The first school taught in Neosho Falls was the private property of E. H. Curtis, who afterward figured in the war as the Colonel of a colored regiment. It was kept in an old building which is still standing, but has been moved back from the street. This was in 1858. A public schoolhouse was built in 1869, and the first classes taught in 1870. The first teacher was I. S. Jones, now and for a number of years Probate Judge of the county. Following Judge Jones came F. W. Bartlett, 1872; M. C. Carrenger, 1873; A. F. Palmer, 1874; J. N. Shannon, 1875; N. Powell and J. P. Sharp, 1876; George M. Inge, 1877; J. J. McBride, 1878; L. Townley, 1879; J. M. Spangler, 1880; T. J. Bradley, 1881-82. Mr. Bradley has as assistants, Miss Kate Rhea, Miss Nellie Parks and Mrs. Lettie C. Jones. The schoolhouse erected in 1869 proved inadequate in 1871, and a large addition was made to it at a cost of $500. The following year a building was purchased at a cost of $1,000. This, with the original building, valued also at $1,000, makes a total school building valuation of $2,500. Although numbered eight, this district is the oldest in the county, a remaking and numbering which took place several years ago, changing it from one to eight.

CHURCHES, THE PRESS, SOCIETIES, ETC.

Methodist Church.—On March 2, 1870, E. A. Graham was appointed to the Neosho Falls Circuit, which was an indefinite space west of the town. The total membership at that time was ten. The same year the church building still in use was erected. This was not done without very arduous work, the pastor putting in his own labor to the value of $250, and his wife supporting the family meanwhile by keeping boarders. In the fall of 1871, when Rev. Mr. Graham closed his labors, the church membership was fifty. W. W. Welch served in 1872, D. A. Perrin in 1873, H. W. Chaffee in 1874-75, J. McNulty in 1876-77-78, T. S. Walker in 1879-80, J. L. Longdon in 1881-82.

The society now numbers fifty-three members. Services are held every second Sunday in the church building, now valued at $2,500. A Sunday school, organized at the same time as the church, has now an average attendance of sixty, and is in charge of J. Newell.

Presbyterian Church.—The Presbyterian society of this city was organized in 1870, under Rev. John Creath, who remained its pastor during the year. Upon his resignation, Rev. J. S. Sherrill became pastor, and held the office three years. The succeeding three years the church was in charge of Rev. S. M. Irwin. Rev. John Creath then returned and remained one year. A vacancy then occurred in the pulpit. H. R. Lewis was then called, and was succeeded by Rev. B. F. Haviland, who still supplies the church. A wooden church building was erected in 1870-71, at a cost of $2,500. A live Sabbath school, connected with the church, has now an average attendance of seventy, and is in charge of Mrs. C. H. Goodrich.

Congregational Church.—The Congregational Church of Neosho Falls was organized on April 20, 1871, by Rev. John Scotford, who became its pastor. The Trustees at this time were J. S. Waterbury, James Crane, D. W. Finney, John Scotford and W. W. P. McConnell. After four years' service, Mr. Scotford retired from the pastorate. He was followed by L. Harlow, J. Phillips, J. V. Willis, Q. C. Todd, and the present pastor, Rev. F. T. Norris. The membership of the society has risen from thirteen in 1870 to thirty-five in 1882. A fine brick church, standing in the heart of the city, was erected in 1882, at a cost of $2,500. A Sunday school, established at the same time as the church, has now an attendance of seventy-five. J. Hemming is Superintendent.

The first newspaper in the county was the Frontier Democrat, which was started in October, 1869, by I. B. Boyle. This paper was printed at Neosho Falls until January, 1870, when it was sold to William H. Slavens, who changed it to the Neosho Falls Advertiser. Early in 1871, the paper was sold to a Mr. Collins, who, three months later, sold out to a company. Jones & Clark then leased the paper. In the winter of 1872, Jones retired, and the paper was leased to Slavens & Pettit. In December of that year, the material of the paper was sold to Sain & Dow, who, on January 1, 1873, issued the Woodson County Post. September 8, 1873, Dow retired, and July 13, 1877, the paper was leased to J. Mickle & Son, who published it until December 13 of that year, when it reverted to W. W. Sain. A month later, Mr. Sain sold the office to Nathan Powell, who formed a partnership with H. D. Dickson and made the Post a Republican paper. In July, 1878, Dickson retired, and Powell after a short time sold the paper to H. Lyman. A short term sufficed to satisfy Mr. Lyman, and J. E. Pickett took up the editorial quill, which he also soon surrendered. H. D. Dickson then assumed the management, and continued to hold it until September 15, 1881, when the present proprietor, W. L. Chellis, came in. The paper is now an independent seven-column folio, 24x34, and has a circulation of 640. It is issued on Fridays.

The Woodson County Advocate, although started at Neosho Falls, was a Kalida paper. Its first issue was on February 14, 1872, at the Falls, but the second emanated from Kalida, where the paper continued to be published until the fall of 1873, when it was discontinued and the material sold to R. F. Eagle, who removed it to Coffey County.

Grove Lodge, No. 49, I. O. O. F., was organized August 28, 1869, with five charter members and nine initiates. Its charter officers were Thomas Hunter, N. G.; Isaac W. Dow, V. G.; W. C. Grove, R. S.; Isaac Mix, P. S.; Henry Williams, Treasurer. The lodge now has twenty-six members and the following officers: H. D. Dickson, N. G.; S. H. Hogueland, V. G.; C. C. Brengle, Secretary; P. Wagner, Treasurer. Meetings are held on Friday evening of each week in the hall jointly owned by this and the Masonic fraternity. The walls of this hall were purchased by these two lodges, and the finishing done by them at a considerable expense. Besides this, this lodge has something over $100 in the treasury.

Tuscan Lodge, No. 82, A., F. & A. M., was organized October 20, 1870, with the following officers: R. Slavens, W. M.; H. Williams, S. W.; W. W. Sain, J. W. The charter shows a membership of nine. Twelve years have produced many changes in the lodge, but it has grown steadily, and now has a membership of forty-seven and the following officers: H. D. Dickson, W. M.; J. H. Sticher, S. W.; S. H. Hogueland, J. W.; Samuel Michener (deceased) Secretary; J. G. Jackson, Treasurer. Meetings are held each Tuesday on or before full moon, and every two weeks thereafter, in the hall already described, owned by this lodge and the Odd Fellows.

Benefit Lodge, No. 1885, K. of H., was organized on November 19, 1879, with twenty-one members and the following officers: S. Michener, P. D.; I. W. Dow, D.; R. P. Hamm, Rep.; W. L. Parsons, Treasurer. The lodge now has sixteen members. Meetings are held on the second and fourth Monday of each month in Odd Fellows' Hall. The present officers of the society are W. L. Parsons, D.; R. C. Kells, Rep.; H. D. Dickson, Treasurer.

Neosho Falls Post, No. 73, G. A. R., was organized on the last Monday of July, 1882, with thirty members. Its officers elected at that time still hold their positions. They are W. L. Parsons, C.; W. J. Haughawout, J. V. C.; (D. H. Henry was elected S. V. C., but failed to qualify, and J. S. Philo to the position); J. Bishop, Adj.; H. F. Beal, Qr. (resigned in October, 1882, and D. W. Finney installed); I. W. Dow, O. D. Meetings are held on the first Monday of each month in Clark's Hall.

Manufacturing.—The earliest manufacturing industry was the saw mill built in 1857 by N. S. Goss, T. L. Clark, B. F. Goss and William Brown. When this mill was built the entire settlement was on the north side of the river, and consisted of two cabins, in one of which Mrs. B. F. Goss cooked for the camp. Soon after the completion of the mill, N. S. Goss and Clark became its owners, and, in 1859, built a grist mill addition. After a few years the combined mill passed into the hands of Cobert & Cozine, who sold it in the spring of 1873 to W. L. Parsons, its present owner. In 1881, the grist mill was rebuilt, a substantial 30x36 two-story building taking the place of the old one. This mill now has four run of buhr stones and a capacity of 100 barrels of flour per day. Power is obtained from the Neosho River by a forty-inch special Leffel turbine water-wheel.

Hotels.—The Falls House, already mentioned as built in 1858, was enlarged and practically rebuilt in 1870, and is now the only hotel in town. The American, built when the railway was a novelty and the tide set that way, stood too far from the business center, and, after doing a poor business, was, in 1876, moved to the track and converted into a freight warehouse. The Pierce House, which stood on the present site of the Congregational Church, was burned in 1876.

The Woolen Mill.—A woolen mill was built on the south side of the river in 1873 by Hillings Bros., and operated by them until sold to Sharp Bros., who in October, 1882, sold it to Snyder Bros. The woolen mill machinery has been removed, and the present owners propose to put in flouring machinery and run a custom mill.

Banking.—For a town of its importance, Neosho Falls has had little banking facilities. In 1870, I. W. Dow started a bank, and was swimming on a fairly prosperous tide until the black days of 1873, when he went under. The private bank of Haughwout & Goodrich was started in August, 1882, and still does business.

Railroads.—Neosho Falls is on the line of the Kansas branch of the present Missouri Pacific. When this line was projected as the Southern Branch Union Pacific, the township, as more fully stated elsewhere, voted $175,000 bonds in aid of the road, but the bond election was thrown out on the plea of insufficient publication, and the road finally went through in 1870 unsubsidized. Shortly afterward it became the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway, and as such is now generally known, although it has passed into the hands of the Missouri Pacific. The company has a depot with ample side tracks and a large store-house in the southern part of the town.

PIQUA.

Piqua is a village in Neosho Falls Township at the crossing of the St. Louis, Fort Scott & Wichita and the Missouri Pacific Railways. It is in a sort the successor of Bramlette, a station about a mile below, which was abandoned by the railway after the building of the new east and west road. The main street of the village is upon a half section line, the land upon the north being owned by George A. Bowlus, of Iola, and that on the south by P. C. T. Buck, who used it for farming purposes. The town started in the spring of 1882, the store of J. W. Kesterson being the first building. Next came the blacksmith shop of John Kipp, and third the residence of Dr. J. Beckman. Street & McClure soon afterward erected a store building, which was burned November 8, 1882. A schoolhouse was erected in 1882 at a cost of $1,000, and has an attendance of sixteen. It is taught by Miss Nannie Stewart. The Methodists have recently organized a society, with twenty members, at this point, and completed a church edifice in December, 1882. Services are held by the pastor of the church at Neosho Falls. A post office was established in the spring of 1882, and M. Street appointed Postmaster. The town now has one store, one school, one church, one lumber yard and a dozen residences. A hotel building is in process of erection.

During this year, which was the great famine year in Kansas, he visited Wisconsin and procured $10 000 worth of supplies and in addition to this by canvassing the matter thoroughly he secured an appropriation from the Wisconsin Legislature of $5,000 for the purchase of seed wheat for Kansas farmers. Mr. Crane was born in Richmond, Chittenden County, Vt., April 13, 1813, son of James and Clarinda Crane. He was the first County Treasurer of Woodson County, elected in 1858, and, during his two years' term of service, managed the finances of the county with great prudence and skill, only $5 coming into the treasury while he held the office. He was again elected Treasurer of Woodson County in 1872, and was re-elected in 1874; found the duties of the office more complicated by this time, but served with credit to himself and with fidelity to the people. He lived in Burlington until January, 1860, when he came to Neosho Falls and engaged in overhauling and repairing the mill owned by Col. Goss. He was overhauling a mill at Lawrence, in 1863, when Quantrell made his attack on the city. All three of the men who were working on the mill for him were killed, and the mill fired. Mr. Mowry left his hotel and went to the mill in time to put out the fire, and save the owner $6,000. While doing this, three men at the hotel were shot, and two of them killed. Mr. Mowry was providentially saved. He returned to Neosho Falls, and put in a steam mill owned by Col. Goss. He has since been in the lumber trade, and has erected the finest business house in Woodson County; he owns a half interest in this house, from the rental of which he enjoys a comfortable living. He is now serving as Chairman of the City Council. He was born in East Hampton, Suffolk County, N. Y., April 30, 1833; son of William and Anna C. Parsons. He lived in his native county until twenty-four years of age; was educated at Clinton Academy. He operated a mill in Suffolk County until 1858, then moved to Racine, Wis., but in the spring of 1859 went to Denver, and for about two years was engaged in mining. He returned in the fall of 1860 to Racine, and the following spring enlisted in Company F, Second Wisconsin Infantry, and was mustered in as Second Lieutenant April 21, 1861. Served three years and eight months, and was in all the engagements of his command. C., in January, 1865. Soon after his return from the war, he went to Savanna, Ill., and operated an elevator two years; was then appointed United States Revenue Inspector, with headquarters at Milwaukee, Wis.; remained here one year; then started a vessel supply store in Chicago, and was burned out in the great fire of October, 1871, and, after a short visit to New York, came to Kansas in December, 1871. He was married at Neosho Falls, January 11, 1877, to Jennie E. Holloway, an accomplished daughter of Ira and Esther Holloway; she was educated at Ottumwa Seminary, but is a native of Pennsylvania; they have two children—Anna E. and William Sherrill Parsons. Is recognized as one of the representative men of this county.

TORONTO.

Toronto was laid out in 1869 by the Toronto Town Company, of which Enoch Reeves was President and Matthew Miller Secretary. As first laid out, it occupied a quarter section, one-half mile from the western line of the county, and four and one-half miles from the southern boundary. The first building on the town site (the district school) was some years older than the town, having been located at an early day. The first structure built after the laying-out of the town was a frame house of small size owned by William P. Dennis, and used both for store and residence purposes. This building stood on Washington street until the spring of 1882, when it was moved back and part of it added to the meat market of G. W. Johnston. The next building erected, also a store, was the property of S. R. Kellogg, and yet forms a part of his store building. A hotel was built in 1870 by S. P. Miller, and operated by various parties until 1882. The first professional man to reside in Toronto was Dr. A. H. Mann, who came in 1871, and is still in practice. A doctor without a drug store at his back would be an anomaly, and soon after Dr. Mann's settlement W. L. Lockard added a line of drugs to the general stock of his store. The first store carrying drugs only was built in 1879 by C. H. Starrett, who still occupies it. The second hotel in the town was opened by A. W. Fletcher, in the residence built by W. L. Lockard in 1871. The house soon passed into the hands of N. B. Rouse, who now runs it.

The growth of Toronto, lying as it did in the extreme southwest of the county, with no railway as a feeder and no hopes of becoming the county seat, was very slow. In November, 1881, nearly twelve years after the founding of the town, it had but two stores and eight or ten dwellings. With the advent of the railway came a fresh tide of life, and before the close of 1882 more than eighty new buildings had been erected.

Toronto Post Office was established on July 1, 1870, with S. R. Kellogg as Postmaster. This was upon the inauguration of the Humboldt stage mail route and the discontinuance of that from LeRoy. Upon the old route had been, a short distance north of Toronto, the post office of Pleasant Grove, established in 1858. Here Albert H. Reeves, J. W. Brown and Edwin Kellogg had successively held the not onerous duties of Postmaster. The Toronto office was held by S. R. Kellogg until 1876, when it passed to F. W. Carroll, and later to C. F. Webb, who held it until February, 1882, when it again was conferred upon S. R. Kellogg, the present official. The post office in Toronto has always been on the corner occupied by the store of S. R. Kellogg.

As has already been said, the educational history of Toronto reaches back of its existence as a town. Soon after the organization of the town company, the old schoolhouse which stood on the west line of the town site near the present railway depot was moved to the public square and enlarged. In 1882, the new schoolhouse was built at a cost of $3,000. This is a capacious two-story building of four rooms, and can seat over 200 scholars. At the present time the school has an attendance of 150, and employs two teachers—Mr. A. J. Jones and Miss Josie Byington. This educational force will soon be increased. Looking at her facilities of a few years ago, the town may well feel proud of her advancement.

The industries now represented in the town briefly capitulated, will serve to show something of its value. They are: General stores, six; groceries, one; drug stores, one; hardware, one; hotels, two; physicians, two; real estate, two; meat markets, one; furniture, one; harness shops, two; millinery, two; restaurant, one; livery stables, two; lumber yards, two. Besides these are the mill and other industries more particularly described. No one looking over this statement and recalling the vegetarian state of the town a year ago, can fail to see that the place has a substantial future before it.

LOCAL MATTERS.

Methodist Church.—The Methodists have long had religious services in the neighborhood of Toronto, but it was not until 1875–76 that a separate church edifice was erected. This structure was completed at a cost of $600, principally raised by private subscription, and is supplied by Rev. William H. Carwardine of Yates Center. A Sabbath school organized at the same time as the church has an average attendance of ninety, and is in charge of J. M. Dickinson.

Baptist Church.—The Baptist Church of Toronto was gathered together in 1877, and has increased in strength with considerable rapidity since the town has become a railway point. Services are held every second Sabbath by Rev. A. E. Lewis, of Fall River. As yet the society has no church building, but preparations are being made for erecting one at an early day.

Woodson Lodge, No. 121, A., F. & A. M., was organized on October 17, 1872, with the following officers: J. W. Kerns, W. M.; S. P. Miller, S. W.; Smith Wilhite, J. W.; W. M. Peck, Secretary; I. Darland, Treasurer. The lodge now numbers thirty-five and has the following officers: S. R. Kellogg, W. M.; E. A. Hubbard, S. W.; J. M. Montgomery, J. W.; Frank Hall, Secretary; G. R. Johnson, Treasurer. Meetings are held on each Saturday on or before full moon, and each two weeks thereafter, in the hall over S. R. Kellogg's store. The property of the lodge consists of fixtures and regalia to the value of $200.

Toronto Lodge, No. 189, I. O. G. T., was organized at an early day (probably 1872), but after a severe struggle for life fell to pieces in 1876, and has never been revived.

Railroads.—The St. Louis, Fort Scott & Wichita Railway, which received $22,000 of the bonds of Toronto Township, was completed to Toronto in the fall of 1879, and at once began running regular trains. The road was soon extended to Eureka, Greenwood County, thus furnishing an outlet both east and west for the products handled at this point. The value of the road to the town can hardly be over-estimated; it has breathed into it the breath of life and made of the flaccid frame a living energetic body. Off the line of railway, unknown and having no pre-eminent qualifications to command attention, Toronto had a cloudy future; on the line of what will soon be a great thoroughfare, its future is limited only by the energy and public spirit of its citizens.

Hotel.—A large and finely designed hotel building was erected in 1881–82 by parties interested in the St. Louis, Fort Scott & Wichita Railway. As yet it is unoccupied, but negotiations are being made for its opening, which will be an event of great importance, as there is now no adequate provision for the wants of the traveling public.

Toronto Mills.—These mills consist of a combined saw and grist mill, both built in 1873 by Alexander Davis; in 1877, they were sold to W. S. Lockard and completely refitted, bringing their value up to $7,000. The saw mill has a capacity of 4,000 feet per day; and the grist mill, with two run of buhr-stones, of sixty barrels of flour per twenty-four hours. Power is furnished by an engine of twenty-five horse power. This is, with the exception of the mills at Neosho Falls, the only mill in the county.

GREENWOOD COUNTY.

GREENWOOD County was named in honor of Greenwood, United States Land Commissioner, under Pierce and Buchanan. It was first laid off by the bogus Legislature of 1855–56, but was for a number of years thereafter unorganized territory. As at first laid out, the county was a very nearly square tract of uniform size with its neighbors, but when in 1867 Madison County was abolished, and its north part given to Breckinridge (now Lyon) County, the lower portion, to a point three miles above Madison, was added to Greenwood. In giving the boundaries at this time, the southern boundary was by accident moved too far to the south, thus cutting off a strip of Howard (now Elk) County, three miles wide. This error was rectified in 1868. As finally laid off its boundaries are as follows: On the north by Lyon and Chase; east by Wilson, Woodson and Coffey; south by Elk, and west by Butler County.

TOPOGRAPHY.

The county has, according to the Government survey, 20 per cent of bottom and 80 per cent of upland. It is also divided in 5 per cent of forest and 95 per cent of prairie. It is watered by Verdigris and Fall Rivers, which flow southwesterly, and by numerous creeks, of which Willow, Slate, Homer and Bachelor flow into the Verdigris, and Otter, Spring, Salt and Honey into Fall River. The average width of the river bottoms is one mile. The principal timber belts fringe these streams, and are about seventy-five feet in average width. The varieties found are oak, walnut, hickory, hackberry, elm, cottonwood, sycamore, mulberry and ash. Cultivated timber, i. e., timber claim plantings, is principally cottonwood, box elder and soft maple. Coal is found in thin veins at a distance of from four to eight feet below the surface, and is used for domestic consumption and to a small extent for blacksmithing and other purposes. Both limestone and sandstone are found in great abundance, and are of excellent quality for building purposes, fully compensating for the lack of large belts of timber fitted for such use.

Acreage Under Cultivation.—There were sown in the county in 1872, 3,719 acres of winter wheat; in 1874, 5,004; in 1876, 9,129; in 1878, 7,897; in 1880, 9,351, and in 1882, 1,902.

Acres of rye for the same years were: 86, 298, 1,089, 623, 146, 298; spring wheat, 366, 806, 153, 205, 22, none; corn, 12, 682, 20,916, 19,278, 30,540, 38,740, 60,291, and barley, 9, 5, 34, 253, 312, none.

A brief glance at these statistics will serve to show that winter wheat occupied most space in 1876, spring wheat in 1874, rye in 1876, and that the acreage of corn has been steadily on the increase.

EARLY HISTORY.

The first settlement in Greenwood County was made in the spring of 1856, by colonists from Mississippi, who came with the avowed intention of helping to make Kansas an ally of the Southern slave-holding States. These Pro-slavery people drifted away to more congenial soil on the breaking out of the war of the rebellion or very shortly thereafter, and to-day but one of the number remains, and he has long since changed his views. A few anti-slavery men were sprinkled about the county in the fall of 1856, but real settlement did not take place in any considerable numbers until the following year. This spring saw a party of new comers in Lane and Madison Townships, among whom were D. Vining, Austin and Fred Norton, Anderson Hill, Wesley Pearsons, Mark Patty, Myrock Huntley, E. R. Holderman, William Martindale, E. G. Duke, James and W. F. Osborn, Isaac Sharp and David Smyth. In July of this year came Josiah Kinnaman, Archibald Johnston, Peter Ricker, Adam Glaze, John Baker, Wayne Sumner and William Kinnaman.

In 1858 and the two following years was a rapid growth in settlement, although money was a well-nigh unknown quantity, and the settlers saw their advance in worldly affairs chiefly in the improvement of their lands and buildings. In this condition they had to meet the disastrous drought of 1860. It was a bitter pill, but only such as ever and anon falls to the lot of the pioneer who pushes far beyond the beaten path and calmly faces the dipping of the scale which shall insure him utter defeat or a grand success. Supplies could only be brought from Atchison, a distance of 160 miles, through bitter storms, and with teams enfeebled by scanty rations, and when received, enough must be sold to pay the freighters. Under this grinding pressure, many were forced to forsake all they had obtained by such severe exertions and return to older places; but still many held on with a death grip and weathered through. And they had their reward in the copious harvest which the fertile soil brought forth in 1861. Bright prospects did not, however, long continue. The cloud which far beyond their horizon had been muttering in the South, broke forth in lightning flashes, which awoke the whole country to the prologue of the great drama that for long years made the United States the cynosure of the world. The flash of the lightning made a gorgeous pageant to those who scanned it from a distance, but it seared the near spectator. Greenwood County was the scene of violence from all quarters. Divided against itself in the sentiments of its settlers, its villages sacked and burned, exposed to the attacks of hostile Indians and those who sought in the troubled times an excuse for indiscriminate pillage, Greenwood might well be pitied. During 1861, a rough fort was built at Eureka, and named in honor of Col. James Montgomery, of the Tenth Infantry. It was built by the home guard, under Capt. L. Bemis, and was occupied by them during their entire term of service.

At the close of the war, emigration set in with great rapidity. A new Town Site Company was organized at Eureka, and settlement was very rapid all over the county.

Upon the formation of Greenwood County, a part of it was included in the reservation of the Osage Indians. This reservation was a strip twenty by seventy miles and took in parts of Elk, Wilson and Butler Counties as well as Greenwood. In the latter, it cut a strip ten miles in width from the southern part of the county, the line running about four miles south of Eureka City. These lands were by the treaty of 1870 placed in trust with the United States to be disposed of for the Indians who had removed to the Indian Territory. This was done by placing it for preemption and homesteading at the regular Government price of $1.25 per acre. Many of the best farms in the county are located in this tract as is also the thriving town of Gould or Severy.

At a very early day, itenerant Methodist preachers occasionally traversed the indefinite circuit known as Southwestern Kansas. In 1860, the first regular circuit embracing this county was cut off and named the Eureka Circuit. It embraced Greenwood, Butler, Woodson and Wilson Counties, and was supplied by Rev. T. B. Woodard who succeeded in gathering a membership of twenty during the year. In 1861, the name of the circuit was changed to Belmont and W. H. Travis, by whom the membership was increased to forty, appointed. W. H. Fisher was appointed in 1862, but served only part of the year and made no report. Rev. C. Meadows served during 1863 and resided at Belmont, then quite a town, but never rebuilt since its burning by the rebels during the war. J. Paine served in 1864. In 1865, Belmont Circuit was again divided and Eureka Circuit consisted of Greenwood County and the counties southwest of it. In this year and until 1868, Rev. John Stansbury was preacher in charge. This man deserves more than a passing notice. A true enthusiast in the cause of Methodism, he was a product of frontier life—a man of the time. Owning a farm on Owl Creek in Woodson County, he pinched from it in the rare intervals between his pastoral trips, a scanty subsistence. Mounted on his pony, he went from station to station, sleeping indifferently in the scattered houses along the way or upon the naked prairie, and preaching wherever he found opportunity. He removed in 1870 to Cowley County, where a year later he was crushed to death by a falling log. In 1868, Greenwood County was made a separate circuit and placed in charge of Rev. J. E. Cohenour, who by zealous work increased the church membership from 82 to 160. In 1869, Rev. Mr. Cohenour was retained and a parsonage built at Eureka at a cost of $300. In 1870, the county was divided into three circuits and Rev. S. A. Green appointed to Eureka. From this time the history of the circuit is shown in the history of individual churches.

The first capital offense committed in Greenwood County took place in April, 1865. The victims were William and Jacob Bledsoe, who lived in the southeast part of the county and were by some suspected of horse thieving. Between these men and three others, there existed a bitter animosity, growing out of some petty "spites" inflicted. Under these circumstances, any pretext was sufficient and the Bledsoes were arrested. One dark night they were removed from one impromptu guard house to another, but en route were assassinated. The story of their guards, John Taylor, William Brown and Thomas Craig was that an attack was made by Indians who had suffered the loss of ponies, and the prisoners dispatched. The authorities did not, however, take this view of the case and after a weary length of time Brown was convicted and Craig acquitted, the decision being reached in May, 1878. Taylor was never apprehended, and is reported to be dead.

The Murder of Robert Clark.—This was one of the most atrocious crimes ever committed in Southern Kansas. G. W. Petty was a bushwhacker of the war, although connected with neither side, and working for his individual profit only. On the conclusion of open war, he is reputed to have still continued a lawless life. Some time prior to 1866, he had lost his wife, for whom he seemed to feel a great affection, and upon whose grave he placed a costly monument. This monument was discovered in May, 1866, so brutally defaced as to be totally ruined. Petty suspected Clark and determined upon his death. The same month, as Clark was sitting with his wife and children in his cabin on the Verdigris, a man rode up to the door and asked the direction of Brazos. This, Clark, still sitting in his chair but bending out of the door, was giving, when another man riding past the window on the opposite side of the house shot Clark, who fell to the floor, but staggered up again and tried to reach his gun. As he fell a second time three men rode up to the window where they remained motionless until Clark was dead. When they appeared, Mrs. Clark recognized Petty and cried out: "For God's sake, Wash Petty, don't kill me and my children, you have killed my husband!" No answer was given, and, seeing Clark dead, the men rode off. An indictment was found against Petty in 1870, and he was arrested and after many delays in May, 1879, found guilty. He is now in the State Penitentiary.

Murder of Crookham.—On October 17, 1874, Alexander Harman shot O. C. Crookham as he was gathering corn in his field. The circumstances which led to the shooting were, briefly, certain mortgages held by Crookham and the settlement of a claim of Harman for some prairie-breaking. Harman, who appears to have been hardly sane, walked coolly up to Crookham and placing a pistol to his neck discharged it, the ball making a ragged hole. Crookham died two days later, and Harman, after due process, was found guilty and taken to the penitentiary. Here his conduct was so violent as to lead to his removal to the Asylum for the Insane where he now is.

COUNTY ORGANIZATION, ROSTER AND BUILDINGS.

The organization of the county was effected on March 14, 1862, at a meeting of the County Commissioners, held at Janesville, the temporary seat of justice. At this meeting, the county was divided into townships, as follows: Lane, from the northeast corner of the county west six miles; thence south eighteen; thence east six miles, and north to point of beginning. Pleasant Grove began at the northeast corner of Section 6, Town 25, Range 13, ran west six miles; thence south ten miles; thence east six miles on the south boundary of the county; thence north to initial point. Janesville began at the northeast corner of Section 3, Town 23, Range 14, and ran west sixteen miles; thence south fourteen miles; thence east sixteen miles; thence north to place of beginning. Eureka began at the northeast corner of Section 15, Town 25, Range 12; ran west sixteen miles; thence south eight miles; thence east sixteen miles, and thence to initial point. The board, after defining the township boundaries, proceeded to appoint county officers. I. M. Todd was made Probate Judge; W. M. Hill, County Clerk; E. Tucker, Register of Deeds; James Steel, Sheriff; William Martindale, County Treasurer. Elections were ordered in the different townships for March 24, 1862. On April 12, there was a second meeting of the County Commissioners, and the bonds of the county officers being approved, they qualified for office. There seems to have been some change in the interim, as C. Cameron became Register of Deeds instead of E. Tucker, who refused the proffered honor, and D. Nichols was made Sheriff instead of James Steel. The County Commissioners at this time were M. E. Stratton, F. Osborn and R. Gasaway.

After the appointment of county officers, the first regular election was held in November, 1862. Those who have held official positions since that date are given below, with the date of their election. County Clerks, H. Norton, 1862; D. T. Nichols, 1863; H. Norton, 1865; J. L. Benson, 1867; L. N. Fancher, 1869; W. S. Reece, 1875; F. J. Cochrane, 1877; J. W. Kenner, 1879. Registers of Deeds, P. Somers, 1862; D. Roach, 1863; James Willis, 1865; J. Gilmore, 1867; I. R. Superintendents of Public Instruction, E. [illegible]cker, 1862; F. G. Allace, 1866; W. E. J. Nixon, 1868; L. H. Platt, 1870; G. H. Martz, 1872; [illegible] Johns, 1874; J. F. Troxell, 1876; G. H. Martz, 1878. In all cases, the name given last i[illegible] the list of officers is that of the present incumbent.

On June 3, 1871, the proposition to vote $30,000 in bonds of the county, for the purpose of constructing a suitable court house at Eureka, was submitted to the people of the county. The vote on this proposition was found to be 474 for to 371 against, and work was at once begun. As the building progressed, however, it became apparent that a further sum would be needed to complete it in fitting shape, and the issuance of fresh bonds became necessary. These, to the amount of $15,000, were secured at the November election of 1872, the vote standing 734 for to 291 against. At a still later period, $5,000 more was required, and this sum was appropriated from the county funds. This swelled the total cost to $50,000, an apparently large sum for so new a county, yet no one who looks upon the noble edifice can fail to see that the county has value received for its outlay. The building is of limestone, quarried about a mile and one-half west of the town, with trimmings of a similar stone, found in the Flint Hills, on the western border of the county. The county jail is built at the back and forms part of the structure. On the first floor are the offices of the County Clerk, Treasurer, Probate Judge, Superintendent of Public Instruction and County Attorney, the Jailer's rooms, and three unoccupied offices. The second floor is occupied by the County Surveyor, Register of Deeds, Clerk of the District Court and Sheriff, the County Court room with its adjoining consulting rooms and the jail. On the third floor are four jury rooms. The jail on the second floor is fitted up in a style that must be discouraging to prisoners, as it is lined throughout with steel. The architect of this building was J. G. Haskell, of Lawrence, and the builder, John Hammond, of Emporia.

RAILWAY MATTERS.

Like most of the counties containing rich agricultural lands and the possibilities of numerous thrifty towns, Greenwood has been the recipient of overtures from many railway companies, either already operating lines or projecting them. The first of these was from a company projecting a line from Ottawa through some part of Greenwood County, and asking for $200,000 of the bonds of the county in exchange for an equal amount of stock of the railway company. This proposition was acceded to by a vote of 485 to 250, but the road was never constructed. The next proposals came from the Fort Scott, Humboldt & Western Railway, which was to run from Fort Scott to Humboldt, and thence west through this county. Bonds to the amount of $200,000 were asked, and at an election held December 19, 1871, they were voted by a poll of 597 to 446. The third election looking to the acquisition of railway facilities was held June 17, 1877, to get the "sense of the county" on the proposition of the St. Louis & Kansas Central Railway offering to build a road through the county in consideration of the subscription of $4,000 in county bonds, running twenty-five years, for each mile of completed track. This was decided adversely, by a vote of 403 to 530, and the road was never begun. On April 24, 1877, it was decided, by a vote of 831 to 682, to accept the offer of the Kansas City, Emporia & Southern Railway Company. This provided for the issuance of $4,000 of the bonds of the county per mile of track built; the funding of the bonds at the expiration of thirty years, and the privilege of taking them up at any time after five years on giving twelve months' notice of intention to do so. It was also provided that their cash value in such a case should be 85 per cent of their face. This road was built through the county in 1879, and now has its terminus in Howard, Elk County.

The proposition of the Kansas City, Burlington & Southwestern Railway and Telegraph Line was lost December 30, 1878, by a vote of 1,134 to 523.

On June 17, 1879, the question of giving bonds to the St. Louis, Wichita & Western Railway was voted upon in Otter, Salt Springs and Twin Grove Townships. The returns of Otter were thrown out by the Board of Canvassers, and those of Salt Springs and Twin Grove shown to give a vote of 248 for and 58 against the proposition. Upon the location of the road, it was not thought expedient to follow the proposed line, and the Salt Springs bonds were invalidated, leaving the bonds of Twin Grove, $15,000, the only ones outstanding. The road was built in 1879 and 1880, and now runs through to Wichita, under the name of the St. Louis & San Francisco Railway.

A precinct election of November 3, 1879, gave the bonds of Pleasant Grove, Eureka, Spring Creek and Walnut Creek precincts to the Kansas & Arizona Railway by a vote of 82 to 29, but the road remains like so many others, a paper concern.

Eureka Township and the city gave on September 30, 1881, $48,000 in bonds to the St. Louis, Fort Scott & Wichita Railway, the bonds being divided into $40,000 township and $8,000 city. These bonds bear 7 per cent interest, payable semi-annually. The road reached Eureka in June, 1882, and is now being constructed westward.

EDUCATION.

The educational history of the county is one of constantly increasing facilities and students to profit by them. The following table, giving the principal statistics of the last three years, is, perhaps, as good a means of showing the scholastic status of the county as any that could be found:

	1879.	1880.	1882.
Number of school districts	80	82	99
Census of school population (5 to 21 years)	3,424	3,804	4,219
Number of pupils enrolled	2,571	2,729	2,987
Average daily attendance	1,488	1,677	1,775
Number of teachers required	84	81	97
Schoolhouses built during the year	4	5	8
Value of all school property	$61,700.00	$64,921.00	$77,000.00
Total school expenditures	21,275.64	24,746.18	[illegible]

MANUFACTURING.

The manufacturing concerns in the county are seven in number, and consist of the steam grist mill of Smith & Lawther, more particularly described under Eureka; the water-power grist mill of John Denison, on Fall River, about a mile east of Eureka, having a capital of $10,000; the flouring mills of William Smith, at Twin Falls, capital $3,000; Harlan & Wilson, at Madison, capital $2,200, and J. D. Allen, at Fall River, capital $6,000. There is also a small saw mill at Virgil, owned by Allen & Miller, and having a capital of $416.

EUREKA.

Eureka is located on the northeast quarter of Section 3, Township 26, Range 10. The town site belonged to two different parties, the north half to David Tucker and the south to Levi N. Prather. This south half was purchased by David Tucker for $130, and the whole town site sold for $50 to E. Tucker, by whom it was transferred to the Eureka Town Site Company, the transfer bearing date August 12, 1867.

As laid out by this company, the town was divided by streets running north and south and east and west. These streets are eighty feet in width, with the exception of First and Main, which are 100 feet each.

The town was located and surveyed. The first building erected was a schoolhouse made of short planks riven from logs and roughly finished. These impromptu boards formed both siding and roof, and though not of the latest pattern, were, in their way, elaborately carved. In this house were held, for several years, all public meetings, religious, scholastic and political, and here the Eureka Debating Society rubbed their wits on the great questions of the day, while the walls were yet ringing with the voice of the singing master.

At this time (1857) no enterprising merchant had established a corner grocery, and stores of all sorts had to be brought by ox team from Kansas City, a distance of 140 miles. The nearest post office was near Burlington, in Osage County, and mail for Eastern friends had to be sent by the chance hand of overland travelers.

Postal Affairs.—The first post office in the county was at Pleasant Grove, and was supplied once a week from Le Roy, Coffey County. Late in 1858, the postal authorities allowed the residents of Eureka an office of their own on condition that they did their own route-carrying. This continued for several months, until supplanted by the official pony-rider.

The post office at Eureka, the first in the county, was opened by Edwin Tucker in 1858. He was followed by James Kenner, S. G. Mead, I. R. Phenis and J. W. Nicholas, the present incumbent, who has held the office for a number of years. Previous officials had made a post office of their places of business, and it was not until Mr. Nicholas took charge that a separate office was established. The room now occupied is in the brick addition to the bank building.

EARLY EVENTS.

The first store opened in Eureka was the result of a determination on the part of the settlers to combat the reflux tide which was draining the county of settlers, for a natural part of the re-action after the giant struggle of the war was inimical to new settlements. At this time, James Kenner, who was living on a farm about four miles north of Eureka, was deputed to carry on business for one year, with the understanding that if it interfered too much with farming, the store should, at the end of one year, be turned over to Edwin Tucker. A stock of goods was procured and brought to town, but it was not until about the 1st of April, 1866, that a cabin could be secured large enough to accommodate them. At the expiration of one year, Judge Kenner turned the stock over to Edwin Tucker, who ran the store about six months, and then sold out to two new comers, Hitchcock & Farris. After a year, these parties sold out to Durkee & Riggs, who at the expiration of two years sold out to G. M. Rizer & Co. This firm continued for five years, when G. M. Rizer became sole proprietor, and so continued until September 1, 1882. M. L. Ashmore, one of the first settlers in the county, claimed some skill as a physician, but the first regular practitioner in the neighborhood of Eureka was a Dr. Reynolds, who was drowned about 1866, in the Cottonwood. To him succeeded Dr. Tutton, who located here in 1868, and remained a few years. Judge Lillie, one of the first settlers, was an attorney, and coming to Eureka in the spring of 1868, was its first lawyer. Judge Phenis arrived in Eureka the same year. Mechanics began to come to Eureka at an early day in its history, a blacksmith named McCartney coming in 1866, and a carpenter named Hawkins in 1867. The first birth in the town was that of Clarence Stoddard, who was born in May, 1869; the first death, Mrs. Mary Stoddard, the mother of this child. The first hotel was built in 1868, on the south half of the town, by the Town Company, and was occupied by a Mr. [illegible]. It was used for hotel purposes until 1882, when it was vacated. The Metropolitan, now the only hotel of the town, was opened by William Green, and after passing through a number of different hands, came, in May, 1882, into those of J. Forrest Hammond, who now keeps it.

Although laid out by the Town Site Company in 1867, Eureka was not incorporated until April 30, 1870, the Trustees being I. R. Phenis, A. F. Nicholas, L. H. Platt, Harley Stoddard and C. A. Wakefield. A year later it assumed the form of a city of the third class, with Ira P. Nye, Mayor, and George H. Lillie, City Clerk. Mayors since that date have been, I. P. Nye, 1872; H. L. Stoddard, 1873; G. H. Lillie, 1874; S. R. Huntington, 1875-76; J. C. Nye and G. H. Lillie, 1877; H. L. Stoddard, 1878-79-80; H. A. Dennis, 1881-82. City Clerks since 1871 are as follows: S. A. Martin, 1872; Z. Harlan, 1873; H. L. Stoddard, 1874; G. F. Dunham, 1875-76; Z. Harlan, 1877; J. W. Kenner, 1878; A. W. Hart, 1879; F. W. Watson, 1880-81-82.

The first term of the District Court convened on the second Tuesday in May, 1867, but adjourned without transacting any business. The second meeting was held in May, 1868, with a good docket. Judge Watson presided, and the bar consisted of Judge G. H. Lillie, of Verdigris, and Judge I. R. Phenis, of Eureka.

SCHOOLS AND THE PRESS.

The first school in the neighborhood of Eureka was opened by Edwin Tucker in December, 1858, and was taught in an old building near the site of the present school. On the burning of this building in 1861, the school was removed to old Fort Montgomery, where Miss Annie Cutter and others taught at irregular intervals. At the close of the war, a stone school building was erected on the site of the present school. Here L. N. Fancher, H. A. Dales and Miss M. J. Clacomb taught successively. The new schoolhouse was opened under J. F. Troxell, who was succeeded by G. H. Martz, — Robbins, J. M. Ross and Theodore S. Gallagher, the present Principal.

Perched on the highest point in the town, in full view of the graceful rolling bluffs that line the streams in the far and near distance, Eureka's school building is a landmark for many miles. It seems to stand at once aloof from the town and yet within it, and to point silently to the present results of trained intelligence and the great possibilities of the future. The building is of the limestone of the county, cruciform and surmounted by a belfry-cupola. It contains the four rooms of the original plan, and one recently fitted up in the basement to supply the demand (the ceaseless demand of the whole world) for more room. This building was erected in 1873, at a cost of $20,000—$15,000 secured by bonds of the district, and $5,000 by direct taxation. It is supplemented by a small frame building on the opposite side of the town and just back of the court house. This was built in 1881, and is occupied by a part of the primary department. It is taught by Mrs. Collyer.

The Eureka Herald was the first journalistic venture in the county, and was published by S. G. Mead. Its first issue bears date August, 1866, and has the motto "Be sure you're right—then go ahead." The sheet was a six-column quarto, and so continued until April 29, 1870, when it became a seven-column folio, and July 20, 1871, to an eight-column paper of the same form—a form it still retains. In the issue of September 10, 1874, the title of the publishers was changed to Mead & Dunham, and on February 1, 1877, it became Dunham & Rizer, and January 1, 1882, to H. C. Rizer, under which head it is still issued. It is published Thursdays, and has a circulation of 816 copies.

The Censorial.—The Censorial was a six-column folio, started in September, 1875, in Howard, Elk County, by W. E. Doud, and published there for nineteen weeks, when it was removed to Eureka, where it was published first as an independent, and later as a Democratic sheet, until February, 1878, when it was sold to Wassam & Co., who re-christened it as the Graphic, and ran it until June, 1882, when it passed into the hands of G. C. Rogers, who published it as the Greenwood County Democrat; under this style it is now published, retaining its original form.

The Sun.—Shortly after disposing of the Censorial, W. E. Doud began the publication of another Democratic paper, called the Sun. This paper was a 26x40 seven-column folio, and made its first appearance in May, 1878. It was after a few weeks enlarged to an eight-column, in which form it completed its existence, not by "suffering a sea change into something rare and strange," but by being converted, November 10, 1880, into the Republican.

The Republican.—Born full grown, with the type, material and form of the Sun, the Republican had a fine start in newspaper life. It was owned by the Republican Publishing Company, consisting of W. E. Doud and Clogston & Martin. At the expiration of three months, Doud bought the interest of the others, and became the sole owner. The Republican now has a fine office on the main street, and is doing well, having a circulation of 700. It is published on Friday.

CHURCHES AND SOCIETIES.

The Christian Church of Eureka was organized on August 20, 1862, by James Kenner, who became its pastor, and up to the fall of 1882 continued so preach for the society from time to time. C. C. Dewese, the present pastor, was called in October, 1882. This church, starting with an enrollment of about twelve, has now upon its books 170. A church edifice, built in 1870, at a cost of $3,700, has a seating capacity of 400. The Sunday school was not organized until December, 1878, but has now a membership of sixty. It is in charge of J. M. Fowler, as Superintendent.

The Methodist Episcopal Church was organized at Eureka in March, 1868, under Rev. J. E. Cohenour. He was succeeded in 1870 by Rev. S. A. Green, who remained one year. During his pastorate, the church building was erected at a cost of $1,345, and dedicated June 30, 1870. The pastors of the church since Mr. Green are as follows: Matthew Fenimore, 1871-72; Allen Buckner, 1872-74; William Bristow, 1874-75; N. S. Buckner, 1875-77; J. B. Lee, 1877-78; T. J. Griffith, 1878 (appointed but never took charge); F. M. Sisson, 1878-80; E. C. Brooks, 1880-81; C. W. Gullett, 1881, to the present.

The first church building having blown down, a new one, built of the stone common near Eureka, was begun, and after several years of labor completed in 1882, at a cost of $8,000. It is 25x60 feet. A Sunday school, having an average attendance of 105, is held weekly, under the superintendence of J. N. Smith. Its total enrollment is 150.

The First Congregational Church of Eureka was organized on October 21, 1868, A. Copeland, G. A. Gordon, S. G. Meed, J. L. Benson and others signing the call. The first pastor of the society, Rev. L. H. Platt, received a call on December 4, 1869, and soon afterward entered upon his duties. On his departure, after several years of arduous labor, his place was filled in turn by Revs. A. Hale, E. Rogers, W. C. McCune, and H. C. Scotford, who still ministers to the church. After the usual financial difficulties incident to such societies on the frontier, the church was, in 1881, freed from debt and made self-supporting. The present membership is 107. A church building was erected in 1870, at a cost of $1,200, and is still in use. The Sabbath school of 150 members is making good progress under the superintendence of H. C. Scotford.

The First Presbyterian Church of Eureka was organized in 1872, with a membership of twenty, and was in charge of Rev. A. D. Jacke. Upon his resignation it was supplied by various occasional preachers, until Rev. A. H. Lackey became its pastor; on his departure in the spring of 1882, the church was left unsupplied for some time, although services were held regularly. It has a membership of forty. A church edifice erected in 1874, at a cost of $3,000, has a seating capacity of 200. It is located on the corner of Main and Fifth streets. A Sunday school, with an average attendance of seventy, is in charge of Robert Loy.

St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church was begun in August, 1881, and dedicated on October 31, of the same year. The building cost $500. For seven years prior to this time, services had been held in the house of Francis Dailey, by priests from Emporia. As this parish has very few of this faith, there is no resident priest, and services are held on Fridays whenever practicable.

Second Congregational (Colored).—The Second Congregational Church of Eureka was organized on November 16, 1881, under Rev. W. W. Weir, who still remains its pastor. The membership which at the time of organization was nine, is now eleven. Shortly after the organization of the society, a subscription was started for the purpose of raising a building fund. Work was begun on the church in July, 1882, and the structure completed the same year at a cost of $1,000. It has a seating capacity of 150. A Sunday school, organized a short time before the church society, has an average attendance of twenty-five. It is in charge of the pastor.

Eureka Lodge, No. 52, I. O. O. F., was organized on February 7, 1870, with six charter members and the following officers: H. L. Stoddard, N. G.; Dr. C. A. Wakefield, V. G.; W. W. Denison, R. S.; F. S. Olney, P. S.; A. F. Nichols, Treasurer. The society has thriven greatly in the past few years, and now numbers seventy-three. Its officers are: Ralph Bennett, N. G.; W. F. Herwick, V. G.; W. W. Denison, R. S.; S. Winter, P. S.; J. L. Baker, Treasurer. Meetings are held each Monday evening in Odd Fellows Hall. This hall, which is occupied also by the encampment, is 25x60 feet, located over the Eureka Bank and is neatly fitted up. The property of the lodge consists of regalia valued at $450, and a fund of upward of $1,400 in cash placed at interest.

Oriental Encampment, No. 44, I. O. O. F., was organized on August 2, 1882, with seven charter members and the following officers: W. W. Denison, C. P.; H. Smith, H. P.; A. P. Ingalls, S. W.; H. Zilley, J. W.; W. W. Morris, Scribe; J. L Baker, Treasurer. The present membership is thirty-eight. Meetings are held on the first and third Wednesday of each month in Odd Fellows Hall.

BUSINESS INTERESTS.

The first bank opened in Greenwood County was started in the summer of 1870 by one Quackenbush, and continued business until about the first of 1871, when it closed its doors.

The Eureka Bank is the only institution of its kind in the county. It was started in November, 1870, by the firm of Martindale, Tucker & Company, who still own it, although the name has been supplanted by that of Eureka Bank. Its first place of business was a small frame building opposite the court house, where business was transacted until 1879, when the present building was erected. This is 25x75 feet, of brick and stone, and cost $6,000. As this is a private concern, no statement of resources is given but they are well known to be ample.

The Greenwood County Building and Loan Association was started in June, 1881, with sixty-five members and a capital stock limited to $120,000. The object of this association is to make loans for the purpose of erecting buildings or making improvements in the county. The first series of $40,000 was full in April, 1882, and as there were numerous applications for membership, a fresh series was started. The stock is divided into shares of $100. The officers of the society are: J. C. Nye, President; A. Wakefield, Vice President; H. F. Rizer, Secretary; Edwin Tucker, Treasurer. Meetings are held every Saturday night.

The Eureka Mills were built in 1872, by a stock company represented by E. Mahan, and cost $18,600. This may seem a large price for a mill of the size, although a fine one, but it must be remembered that this was years before the advent of the railway, and all the heavy machinery had to be hauled a long distance by wagon. After leasing the mills to various parties, the company finally, in 1878, sold them to W. H. H. Barger. In 1879, Mr. Barger disposed of a half-interest to J. E. Lawther, and in 1882 the remaining half to A. H. Smith. These gentlemen form the present firm. The mill building is 45x45 feet and three stories and one-half high. Power is furnished by an engine and boiler of 45 horse-power. There are four run of buhr stones and a set of rollers for making new-process flour—the only kind manufactured. The mill has a capacity of 100 barrels of flour per twenty-four hours' run. The annual product is about 10,000 barrels.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

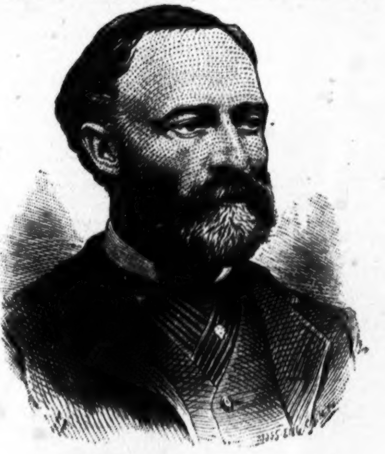
DAVID R. BROCK, real estate, insurance and sewing machine agent, was born in 1841 in Indiana, where he received his education at the common school, afterward engaging in clerical occupations, until the removal of his parents to Lyon County, Kan., in 1858, where he for a time assisted his father in the management of the farm, and subsequently acting as Deputy Land Agent, and engaging for a short time as school teacher. Upon the breaking-out of the war he enlisted July 12, 1861, in Company F, Fifth Kansas Infantry, and continued with his regiment, participating in all its engagements until mustered out at Fort Leavenworth. He then made a short visit, to friends in this county, and then returned to Lyon County, where he remained three years. Returning to Kansas in 1868, he located on the southeast quarter of Section 24, Town 9, Range 2, of Fall River Township, which he still retains and devotes to agriculture; wheat, twenty-six bushels to an acre and corn fifty. He also deals extensively in cattle. Mr. Brock is the owner of nine town lots, three acres outside town, and several dwellings. He represents the interests of several of the best known Eastern insurance and sewing machine companies, and is one of the charter members of Dick Yates Post, G. A. R.

SAMUEL BROOKOVER, farmer, Section 34, P. O. Eureka, was born in Adams County, Ohio, in 1835, and resided there until October, 1865, when he removed to Champaign County, Ill., where he remained until September 28, 1867, when he came to Kansas, locating upon 240 acres on Section 34, Township 25, Range 10, and to which he subsequently added 320 acres on Section 27. He has 200 acres under cultivation, with an average yield of wheat twenty bushels, and of corn forty-five bushels; he has about 75 to 100 hogs, 100 to 125 head of cattle, and usually fifteen horses, raising many of the latter for sale. He is a very successful farmer, and his fine residence and other buildings are fully insured. June 8, 1858, he married Miss Tamer Shelton, of Adams County, Ohio, who has borne him a numerous family—Cyrus, born April 15, 1859, and is now Under Sheriff of the county; Elizabeth E., born November 16, 1861; Jessie R., born June 27, 1863; William J., born August 21, 1865; Sarah D., born July 25, 1869; Horace G., born November 27, 1871; Samuel E., born February 14, 1873, and Dolly, born November 30, 1879. Mr. Brookover was one of the Board of School Directors in 1874–75, and has been Chairman of the Board of County Commissioners for the past three years, and has been elected a member of same Board in election of 1882, to serve for succeeding three years. He is one of the leading men of Greenwood County, and is always to the front when wanted.

J. B. CHALLACOMBE, farmer, Section 31, P. O. Eureka, was born March 18, 1834, in Wayne County, Penn., and, in 1856, removed to Cleveland, Ohio, where he worked as carpenter until September 9, 1861, when he enlisted in Company H, Second Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. The regiment was organized by Senator Ben Wade and commanded by Col. Charles Doubleday, and was for some time on duty in Kansas and Mississippi ere it was sent to the South to gain well-earned laurels under such men as Sturgis, Custer and Sheridan. Mr. Challacombe was in thirty-five regular engagements with his regiment, besides numerous skirmishes, and had three horses shot under him; was three times taken prisoner, and as often escaped. Upon one occasion he and Sergt. Thurston, unaided, captured seven bushwhackers and seventeen stolen horses in McDonald County, Mo., and upon another occasion, he and Sergt. Capron, during the fight of April 6, just prior to the surrender of Lee, took forty prisoners and mules, marching them at pistol muzzle up to the Provost Marshal, and among the prisoners were four commissioned officers. Mr. Challacombe was finally mustered out at Benton Barracks September 11, 1865, and returning to Ohio resumed his trade until the date of his emigration to Kansas. In the latter part of March, 1870, a company of emigrants known as Thorpe's colony, and numbering about seventy, left Ohio for Kansas, but many of them settled along the way. Others returned, and of the fourteen persons who came to Greenwood County, Mr. Challacombe is the only remaining representative. He landed in Eureka April 1, 1870, and at once took up 160 acres on Section 31, Town 26, Range 10, which he has so far improved that he has now upon it a comfortable and commodious frame residence, stone barns and other outbuildings. His land is chiefly what is called high prairie, and is all under cultivation. His average corn yield being thirty-five bushels per acre, and German millet two tons. His orchard contains 800 trees, chiefly apple and peach. In addition to this farm property, which he values at $3,000, he has property in Eureka to the amount of $2,000 more.

CHARLES CHRISTIANSON, farmer, Section 4, P. O. Eureka, is a native of Toten, Norway, and was born in 1829, emigrating to America in 1855, and landing in Quebec, Canada, from whence he proceeded to Stoughton, Wis., where he spent three years, two winters of which were spent on Manistee Island, engaged in cutting timber, and in the spring of 1858 came to Kansas, locating in Salem Township, this county. Mr. Christianson was one of the first settlers in the township, and we may say in the county, there being at that time but seven or eight settlers on Fall River. Here he remained seven years, and in company with the pioneer settlers of this and other portions of the State, experienced his share of hardship and privation, until afforded relief from Atchison. In 1865, he sold his farm, and removed to his present farm of 160 acres, on Section 4, this township. October 9, 1861, he enlisted as private in Company I, Ninth Kansas Cavalry, and participated in all the engagements of his regiment until mustered out at Duvall's Bluff, Ark., March 22, 1865. In May of that year, he married Miss Sarah E. Brock, who bore him two children—Mary Caroline, born September 7, 1866, and Jacob, born February 13, 1869, and whose birth was followed by his mother's death, which took place on the above date. On May 7, 1875, Mr. Christianson was again married, this time to Miss M. E. Lund, a native of Denmark. By this marriage the only surviving child is Mabel, who was born November 10, 1877. Besides his farm, Mr. Christianson owns a good frame house and two lots in Eureka. He is a prominent member of the Lutheran Church, and a charter member of Dick Yates Post, No. 50, Grand Army of the Republic.

HON. J. B. CLOGSTON, lawyer, was born August 19, 1840, in Washington County, Ohio, and educated in Winnebago County, Ill. He subsequently became a teacher of youth, meantime reading law and medicine, and afterward came to Kansas in 1861, and in the summer of that year enlisted at Tecumseh, in Company H, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and participated in the active duty of the regiment, until the spring of 1863, when he was detailed to scouting duty under Gen. Ewing, and remained on such duty in Missouri until the spring of 1864, when he rejoined his regiment, and participated in all its engagements until mustered out with his regiment at Fort Leavenworth, in September, 1865. Upon leaving the army, Mr. Clogston returned to Kansas, locating at Tecumseh, Shawnee County, and resumed the study of medicine with Dr. Huson. In 1866, he removed to Salt Springs, where he practiced medicine until 1875. In November, 1863, while on a leave of absence from the regiment, he was married at Tecumseh to Miss Mary R. Hoggland. They have had three children—Louis E., born March, 1870; Robert H., born in April, 1876, and Fred, born in September, 1878. Mr. Clogston was admitted to the bar of the State in June, 1873, and represented Greenwood County in the Legislature in 1879–80–81, and has again been re-elected to the same honorable position. Besides his town property and residence, he owns upwards of 320 acres on Section 27, and in this county, of which 120 acres are under cultivation, with an average corn yield of fifty bushels to the acre. At present his farm is rented. Mr. Clogston is a member of the R. A. Chapter, of Dick Yates Post, No. 50, Grand Army of the Republic, and is a large shareholder in the new hotel company. He has a very large law practice, in which he is ably assisted by his associate, Mr. Fuller, and ranks as one of the most prominent men of Eureka.



J. B. Clogston

HON. ANTHONY P. COGSWELL, State Senator, and son of the Rev. Frederick Cogswell, was born in Gilmantown, N. H., July 16, 1829, and received an academic education. When twenty-one years of age, he went South, and engaging in real estate business, became wealthy; but the great financial crash of 1857 left him comparatively poor. While in Baton Rouge, La., he married Miss Laura Hearnes, and soon afterward moved to Virginia, where, at the breaking-out of the war, he organized and sent into the field several companies to sustain the old flag. He was appointed Marshal and Enrolling Officer in a district where it was dangerous to wear the blue, and held the position with credit to himself and to the great benefit of the Union cause, until the close of the war, when he moved to Brownville, Neb., and was twice elected Mayor of that city. He was widely known as a politician, a prominent Mason, and was, by the Odd Fellows, elected Grand Master of the State. He was one of the first projectors of the Quincy & Pacific Railroad, and was one of its directors for several years. In 1870, Mr. Cogswell was appointed by the Governor of Nebraska to represent that State in the Capital Convention, held in Cincinnati. In February, 1877, he moved to Iola, Allen Co., Kan., and the following fall settled in Eureka. In 1880, he was elected State Senator for the Twenty-fourth District, which comprises the counties of Lyon and Greenwood. Mr. Cogswell has six children—Cora, born April 3, 1860, and who is now the wife of Mr. Jay W. Kenner, County Clerk; Helen A., born July 28, 1862, and now Mrs. L. S. Wallace; Frank P., born April 13, 1864; Charles R., born May 16, 1868; William F., born August 13, 1870; and Laura Nellie May, born May 6, 1879. Mr. Cogswell is the owner of the Metropolitan Hotel building, and considerable real estate, besides his handsome stone residence—all of which is fully insured. Mr. Cogswell deals largely in real estate, a business for which he is especially adapted by his past experience. Naturally a man of liberal and generous impulse, he has ever been foremost in every effort to advance the interest and welfare of his adopted State, and the position he so well and ably fills in her Senate is but an evidence of the just appreciation in which he is held by his constituents.

O. COLBURN, merchant, is a native of Chautauqua County, N. Y., and came to Kansas in 1868, locating at first upon 320 acres situated in Sections 21 and 22 on Otter Creek. His average corn yield has been fifty bushels per acre. Wheat he has never raised; while on the farm he usually had from seventy-five to one hundred head of cattle, and four to seven horses. In 1875 he removed to Eureka and opened a general store, and has since continued in business; his stock of choice groceries and dry goods is no less than $6,000. He is the owner of the building and resides over the store, his stock of merchandise as also all his buildings being fully insured. For several years past he has rented his farm, his increasing business in the store rendering it impossible that he could devote his attention to aught else, in justice both to his own interests and those of his patrons. Although often importuned to do so, Mr. Colburn has persistently refused to accept any office whatever, preferring to leave municipal and State affairs to those who could command the time necessary thereto.

N. R. COLLINS, farmer and stock dealer, P. O. Eureka. Is a native of Ohio, and for fifteen years carried on an extensive wholesale grocery business in St. Louis, Mo., but having when a boy always been accustomed to life on a farm, he, having acquired a competence, forsook the busy marts of trade, and purchasing a farm in his native state, in Portage County, and within a short distance of the city of Cleveland, he engaged for a time in agricultural pursuits, also in buying and shipping grain and produce, until 1880, when he came to Kansas, bringing with him as part of his contribution to the wealth of the State, a car load of the finest Berkshire hogs for breeding purposes. Mr. Collins is already one of the leading cattle men of Greenwood County. He owns 320 acres of land on Sections 34 and 27, one-half of which is under cultivation, and yielding in corn sixty bushels to the acre, and three and one-half tons of millet. During the year 1882 he devoted eight acres to sorghum, for stock-feeding, and his experiment has proven so successful that he intends cultivating it extensively, as he is of opinion that it forms the best feed for stock and has the great advantage over corn and other grain, in that it does not impoverish the land. Mr. Collins is already an extensive dealer in stock, and has another large farm, which he intends using chiefly as a cattle range, comprising the north half of Section 1, and northeast of Section 2, being 480 acres, and situated six miles north of Eureka. In addition to his farm residence he has also a fine residence and outbuildings in the city and owns twenty-one and one-half acres situated on the edge of town. All his buildings are fully insured. Of native or domestic stock he usually has from 200 to 500 head, and that number will shortly be greatly increased, and, in addition thereto, he will have some imported stock for breeding purposes, of the very best grades. Mr. Collins is one of the Trustees of the Congregational Church in Eureka.

MISS GEORGIANA DANIELS, County Superintendent of Public Instruction, the successor of Mr. Martz, and elected in 1882, is a native of Genesee County, N. Y., where she was born in 1857. In 1864, her parents removed to Wisconsin; she received her education in Columbus, Wis., and graduated with high honors. She taught "the young idea how to shoot" for one year in Rock County, Wis., and three years in Wright County, Iowa. She came to Kansas with her parents, who located here in 1877, and has been since engaged in school here. Her election to the important position of County Superintendent is, in itself, sufficient evidence of the high esteem in which she is here held. Miss Daniels is a young lady of refinement and culture, and, takes a great interest in all matters pertaining to the duties and responsibilities of her position.

THOMAS L. DAVIS, lawyer, was born October 17, 1841, at Hartford, Ky., where he received his education, and subsequently read law under Col. Cicero Maxwell and Hon. H. D. McHenry, and was admitted to the bar in 1860, and at once commenced the practice of his profession, continuing therein until disturbed by the breaking of the war cloud, shortly after which he repaired to Washington, D. C., where he remained until the fall of 1868, when he went to New Orleans, and in April, 1869, removed to Richmond, Va., and from thence to Evansville, Ind., and finally located in Eureka in 1873; at once engaged in the practice of his profession. Before attaining his twenty-first year, he was elected Prosecuting Attorney in Kentucky. Mr. Davis is a man of family and owns his residence and other property in Eureka, all fully insured. He has a very lucrative practice, constantly increasing.

CHARLES E. DECKER, of Decker & Terry, proprietors of Central Steam Flour Mills, was born in Rensselaer County, N. Y., in 1842, and learned the trade of machinist and millwright in the shops of Walter A. Wood & Co., reaper and mower manufacturers, of Hoosick. Subsequently, he was four years in the employ of the H. R. R. R. Co. In 1862, he enlisted as engineer in the United States naval service, and for three years served under Admiral Farragut in the Southern Blockading Squadron. At the close of the war, he located in Chicago, and in the winter of 1876 came to Greenwood County, Kan., locating first on Otter Creek, where he established a cheese factory, having for part of its supply the milk of 125 cows of his own. He sold out in 1879, and removed to town, where he at first opened a machine shop, employing seven practical workmen, and later, in addition thereto, he operated a feed and flour mill, motive power being two large-sized standard wind-mills of Halliday's manufacture, Batavia, Ill., for which Mr. Decker is agent. Finding that his increasing business required more machinery, etc., he added another large building, put in a twenty-five horse-power engine and boiler, and associated with him a partner, Mr. John Terry, an old and well-known resident of the county. The mill has three run of stone and is capable of turning out daily fifty barrels of flour, 200 bushels of meal, one car of chop, and of shelling 3,000 bushels of corn. Buildings and machinery, fully insured. Being a practical workman, and fully alive to the wants and requirements of Eureka and surrounding country, Mr. Decker's commendable enterprise and business ability have already placed him in the front rank of Eureka's leading business men.

H. A. DENNIS, Mayor of Eureka, was born in Guilford, Medina County, Ohio, August 18, 1843, and in 1852, his parents removed to Joliet, Ill., where, after leaving school, he learned the trade of a carpenter, working at his trade until August 9, 1862, when he enlisted in Company G, One Hundredth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Infantry. He participated in all the engagements of his regiment until June 6, 1863, when he was detailed at Murfreesboro, Tenn., as Clerk of court martial, Capt. Gardner, of Company I, of his regiment, being Judge Advocate. Mr. Dennis was subsequently detailed as Clerk in the office of Brigade Inspector, remaining therein until the fall of 1863. Upon the re-organization of the army, he returned to his regiment and served until his discharge, with the rank of Sergeant, July 1, 1865. Upon leaving the army, Mr. Dennis returned to Joliet, where he remained until December, 1877, when he came to Kansas, locating in Eureka, and resuming work at his trade. In July, 1860, he was married at Peoria, Ill., to Miss Anna Hackett, who has borne him three children—Arthur H., born July 12, 1873; William R., born August 20, 1876, and Maud, born February 8, 1880. Shortly after coming to Eureka, he entered into partnership with his father (since deceased), in the furniture business, continuing therein from 1879 to 1882, and retiring therefrom upon his father's demise. Mr. Dennis was elected Justice of the Peace in 1880, and Mayor in 1881, and is now filling his second term in the latter office. He was one of the charter members of Dick Yates Post, G. A. R., and its first S. V. C. He is also a member of the Knights of Pythias and Knights of Honor. His residence and other property is fully insured. Mr. Dennis has ably filled the office of Mayor, and has always taken a warm interest in the welfare of Eureka.

WILLIAM W. DENISON, farmer and miller, P. O. Eureka, was born October 5, 1845, in Yorkshire, Eng. His parents emigrated to America in 1849, and located in Shelby County, Ind., until May 26, 1855, when they removed to what is now Burlingame, Osage County, Kan., where his father, Mr. John Denison, engaged in farming. September 9, 1862, the subject of this sketch enlisted in Company I, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and participated in every skirmish and battle in which his regiment was engaged until mustered out with it at Fort Leavenworth, September 26, 1865. After the war, he returned to Burlingame, Osage County, the place from whence he enlisted, and remained there until the spring of 1868, when he moved to Eureka, Greenwood County, Kan., at which place he still continues to live. He first engaged in the mercantile business until 1872, when he sold out his business and took charge of the Clerk of District Court's office, to which office he was elected in the fall of 1869, and which he retained until 1874; after this, and ever since, up to the present time, he has been engaged in the milling business; he now owns in connection with his brother, Mr. I. N. Denison, the Eureka Water Mills, built by them in 1876, on Fall River, a stone building, 30x40, three stories and basement, three run of stone, and are running on the new process; they have seventeen-foot head, and use a thirty-inch Eclipse water-wheel; the mill cost when completed, $16,000. In connection with this, Mr. Denison owns a good bottom farm on West Creek in this county, 160 acres, eighty acres under cultivation, and eighty acres good timber, and also a good comfortable residence in Eureka. Mr. Denison is a member of the I. O. O. F., A., F. & A. M. and G. A. R.; is a sound Republican in politics, "He helped to fight the good fight and has kept the faith."

W. E. DOUD, the editor and sole owner of the Republican, was born in Pulaski County, Ind., in 1848. He is the son of C. A. and S. A. Doud. After receiving his education in Indiana, he moved in 1863, with his parents, to near Paola, Kan., where he worked on the farm until 1870. He then went to Winfield, and after learning the trade of a printer, bought a half interest in the Censor, the firm name being Doud & Webb. Three months later he passed from newspaperdom to the office of Deputy Sheriff, where he remained two years. He then engaged in other business until the starting of the Censorial, from which time his public life has already been detailed. He married, July 2, 1871, at Winfield, Kan., Miss Emma J. Mann. They have two children—Eva G. and Myrtle (deceased).

J. S. EASTWOOD, Register of Deeds, was born in 1845 in Wabash County, Ill., where he resided until he enlisted in Company G, Forty-eighth Regiment Illinois Veteran Volunteer Infantry, but soon after being mustered in, he was enrolled in Company H, same regiment, and took part in every engagement of his regiment until July 21, 1864, at Atlanta, where he was wounded in the knee joint by a rifle ball, necessitating amputation, after which he returned home on a furlough and was formally discharged at Quincy, Ill., June 27, 1865. He attended the Illinois Soldiers' College at Fulton upwards of three years, thus acquiring an education. Upon leaving the institution, he continued alternately farming and school-teaching until his removal to Kansas in 1874, locating on a farm on Otter Creek, Fall River Township. In 1877, he removed to Eureka and engaged in the grocery business, which he continued until his election to the office of Register of Deeds in 1879. When his name was first announced as a candidate for the office he had an opponent, but the day before the convention he withdrew, and having no opposition, he received a unanimous nomination, and when re-elected in 1881, he had no opposition at all, which is good evidence of the sympathy and respect the people of the county have for a crippled soldier. In 1872, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary A. Mitchell, by whom he has had five children, four of whom are living—Orpha J., born July 5, 1873; Nora O., born March 8, 1875; George William, born September 19, 1876; Ira Edgar, born December 20, 1878, died March 16, 1880; and Bertha M., born January 14, 1882. Mr. Eastwood was Trustee of Fall River Township in 1876. He is a member of the K. of H. and the K. of P. He is a United States Pensioner and a member of Dick Yates Post, No. 51, G. A. R.

A. N. GODFREY, County Surveyor, was born in 1854, in Mahaska County, Iowa, and came to Kansas with his parents in 1859, locating near Madison, this county, where his father, W. B. Godfrey, engaged in farming until his death in 1872. Mr. Godfrey attended the Agricultural College at Manhattan, graduating in the class of 1878. In the fall of 1879, he was elected County Surveyor, when he took up his residence in Eureka, but still pursuing his studies, graduated again in 1880, with the degree of Master of Science. He was re-elected to his present office in 1881. Mr. Godfrey is an ardent entomologist and possesses many very rare entomological, mineralogical and geological specimens. In 1878, he married Miss Estelle Bouton, of this county. They have one child—Jessie, born March 30, 1880. He still owns the farm formerly his father's, located about a mile northeast of Madison, in Sections 7 and 8, Township 22, Range 12, and consisting of 200 acres with residence. Average production of corn, sixty bushels. There are upwards of 900 apple, 100 pear, 200 cherry and about fifty plum and several hundred peach trees. At present the farm is rented. Mr. Godfrey is Chairman of the Committee on Entomology of the State Horticultural Society. He is also a member of the K. of H. and the K. T. M. B. U. Mr. Godfrey's father was a member of Company D, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and was mustered out as Second Lieutenant after three years of active service.

JOHN GRAFFIN, saddlery and harness, is a native of Franklin County, Penn., having been born there in 1844, where he was educated. In August, 1864, he enlisted in Harrisburg in Company D, Eleventh Pennsylvania Cavalry, and was in all the subsequent engagements of the regiment until mustered out at Richmond, Va., June 8, 1865, and returned to his native State until 1867, when he removed to Macon County, Ill., where he subsequently learned the trade of saddler and harness-maker. In the fall of 1870, he came to Eureka, where, in 1881, he opened his present store in company with C. S. Bennett, who is a practical workman and superintendent of the workroom, where from two to four men are constantly employed. The firm usually carry stock to the amount of of $2,000, partly insured. Mr. Graffin married Miss Florence Jamieson, of Wilson County, February 9, 1875. Flora, the eldest child, was born February 28, 1876, and another child was born November 14, 1882. Mr. Graffin has lost one child by death. Mr. Graffin is a member of Dick Yates Post, No. 50, G. A. R., and is also M. W. of the lodge of United Workmen.

GRANVILLE GRIFFITH, Justice of the Peace, is a native of Ross County, Ohio, where he was born in 1835, and when five years of age, his parents removed to Paris, Ill. Mr. Griffith was educated in the Edgar Academy, Edgar County, Ill., and graduated in 1849. Turned his attention to farming, which avocation he pursued until 1856, when he started for Kansas, and was compelled to foot it from Keokuk, Iowa, to Topeka, arriving at the latter place without a dollar. Undismayed, however, he took up a claim on the Neosho River, near what is now Hartford, Lyon County, and proceeded to improve it. His next neighbor was a Mr. F. W. H. Ingham, of Connecticut, who owned a team of oxen and some farming implements, and he being laid up with the ague, Mr. Griffith borrowed his team, etc., and paid the owner by working half time on each claim. His first home in Kansas was, of course a log cabin, but so primitive and well ventilated that the cayotes used to crawl in through the interstices between the logs in search of food. By dint of hard work on his claim in summer time and by splitting rails, etc., in the winter, he was enabled in the course of two years to possess a team of his own, although this desirable end had only been reached by practicing the strictest economy. As a member of the Free-State party, he joined the Tecumseh Light Guards during the border troubles, and subsequently during the days of the rebellion was sworn in for three years as a member of the irregular service, liable to be called on at any time. July 31, 1862, Mr. Griffith was married to Miss Mary E. Dale. They have two children—Joseph L., born September 14, 1863, and James E., born November 23, 1864. Mrs. Griffith died January, 1870, and in September, 1879, he married Miss C. R. Clutter who has borne him one child, a son—Francis G. To his original claim, which consisted of the northwest half of Section 35, Town 20, Range 13, he added the northeast quarter of Section 34, Town 30, Range 13, and now has about 120 acres under cultivation, with an average wheat yield of twenty and corn fifty bushels per acre. He has also upwards of 1,000 fruit trees, principally apple, cherry, plum and pear, which have of late years borne well. A good substantial residence has long since taken the place of the log cabin, and, although Mr. Griffith has rented the farm for the past few years, he usually has upon it about fifty head of his own cattle. In the fall of 1876, he came to Eureka and has since been engaged as agent for musical instruments, sewing machines and school furniture. He was appointed to the office of Justice in October, 1882, and is a member of Ossian Lodge, Knights of Pythias. He owns property in town and his residence and ten acres just outside town limits, both that and his farm residence being insured. Looking back over the past years since his arrival in Kansas, Mr. Griffith, like many another old settler, cannot but observe the facilities open to those who to-day emigrate to Kansas and compare them with the days of 1856.

CAPT. Z. HARLAN, County Attorney, was born in 1843, in Clinton County, Ohio, and when eighteen years of age, enlisted in Company H, Thirty-ninth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and subsequently re-enlisted in the same company and regiment at Prospect, Tenn., and served throughout the war. In April, 1864, he was commissioned Captain of One Hundred and Sixth Regiment United States Colored Infantry, and was mustered out in March, 1866, at Bridgeport, Ala., with the rank of Captain. He participated in the taking of New Madrid, Mo., Island No. 10, siege of Corinth, battle of Iuka, Miss., the second battle of Corinth, October 4, 1862, Parker's Cross Roads, Tallahatchie and Athens, Ala., where he was in command of four companies of his regiment, and was taken prisoner by Forrest, after a two-days' fight, and confined within the stockade at Meridian, Miss., several weeks, when he was paroled and sent to Memphis, subsequently being sent to parole camp, St. Louis, and exchanged in November, 1864. After being exchanged, he was detailed as military conductor on the N. & D. R. R. until July, 1865, when he rejoined his regiment at Stevenson, Ala., remaining with it until mustered out. While at Nashville, he returned home on leave and on May 16, 1865, he was united in marriage to Miss Nannie J. Harrison, of Clinton County, Ohio. After leaving the army, he engaged in the mercantile business at Burlington, Ohio, until January, 1868, when he removed to Peoria, Ill., remaining there until 1871, when he came to Eureka, and while engaged in mercantile pursuits, read law with W. C. Huffman, Esq., subsequently being admitted to the bar of Greenwood County. He was City Councilman in 1874 and City Attorney in 1877-78, elected County Attorney in 1880 and again in 1882. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and Commander of Dick Yates Post, No. 50, G. A. R.

A. W. HART, grocer, was born in 1856 in Miami County, Ohio, and received his education at the Covington Academy, and came to Kansas in the summer of 1877, locating at Eureka, and taught school here until the summer of 1878, when he went into the drug store of his brother-in-law, Dr. Wassam, as prescription clerk. In the spring of 1882, Mr. Hart entered into partnership with Mr. Claycomb as grocers under the firm name of Hart & Claycomb, but, in September of the same year he bought out his partner's interest in the business. He carries at present $2,000 worth of stock, and as he aims to keep nothing but the best groceries has rapidly built up a substantial and increasing trade. His store is situated on the west side of Main street, and his stock is fully insured. December 28, 1880, he married Miss Addie Claycomb, by whom he has one child—Mary Arrah, born December 8, 1882. Mr. Hart was appointed City Clerk in 1879, and was elected a member of the City Council in 1882.

A. J. HUNTER, merchant, was born in 1840 in Fairfield County, Ohio, where his father was an old settler. Educated in the common schools, he early evinced an aptitude for commercial pursuits. His parents removed to Shelby County, Ill., in 1851, where his father engaged in farming, but the subject of this sketch thought "following the plow" too slow work, and soon began operating in stock, etc. He came to Eureka in the fall of 1869, and opened a general store here in the following spring, continuing therein until 1872, when he sold out and bought the northwest quarter of Section 24 (now occupied by Williams Bros.). Finally, he sold his farm to parties above mentioned and went into mercantile pursuits here in the spring of 1878. His average amount of stock in store is $3,500, he sides which he is the owner of property to the amount of $1,500. In 1871, Mr. Hunter married Miss Elizabeth Weakly, of Shelby County, Ill., by whom he has four children. Mr. Hunter is a member of the K. of H., and was Township Clerk in 1878, School Director from 1879 to 1881, and City Councilman in 1881, and is still in the latter office. Although a Republican in politics, he takes little active part, contenting himself with his own affairs.

C. W. HUNTER was born in 1844 in the city of New York, and by the death of his father, Mr. John Hunter, ship-carpenter, he was early thrown upon his own resources for subsistence and education. His father's death so completely broke up the family circle, and the various members thereof became so widely scattered, that William Hunter, a younger brother of the subject of this sketch, has not been heard of by him since 1856, when he was in care of an uncle in his native city. When sixteen years of age, Mr. Hunter went to Tazewell County, Ill., and engaged in farming until June 25, 1861, when he enlisted in Company F, Eighth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and subsequently participated in the engagements at Fort Henry, Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Champion Hill and Raymond, which latter occurred April 22, 1862, and while the Eighth were charging the Twentieth Mississippi Regiment he, with about sixty of his comrades, were cut off from their support, surrounded and captured. They were first sent to Jackson, then to Mobile, and, finally, to Libby Prison, where Mr. Hunter remained six months and fourteen days ere he was paroled and sent to Annapolis, where he remained a month, and was then sent to the parole barracks at St. Louis, Mo. He did not remain long there, however, for, procuring a three-hours pass, he crossed to East St. Louis, and thereby determined to take a French furlough, and by repeatedly "jumping" freight trains was enabled to reach Peoria, Ill., and from thence to Pekin, where he remained until he saw his exchange had been effected. Shortly afterward he managed to rejoin his regiment at Vicksburg, and, on January 4, 1863, he re-enlisted in the same company and regiment, participating in all their subsequent engagements until May 17, 1866, when the regiment was mustered out at Baton Rouge, La., and forwarded to Springfield, Ill., for final discharge. Mr. Hunter returned to farming until February, 1870, when he came to Eureka and became a professor in the art tonsorial, conducting his establishment until 1877, when he opened a confectionery store and billiard parlor, continuing therein until September 28, 1882, when he sold out and purchased his present business December, 1882. July 21, 1872, he married Miss Lucy Snyder, of Eureka, by whom he has one child—Effie D., born May 10, 1873. Mr. Hunter owns his residence in town and other property in the county, and is a charter member of Dick Yates Post, No. 50, G. A. R., and since his residence here has always taken a warm interest in the welfare of his adopted State.

WILLIAM C. HURD, farmer, Section 10, Town 25, Range 12, P. O. Eureka, was born in 1815 in Richfield County, Conn., where he received his education, after completing which he served five years as apprentice to the trade of a carpenter; having acquired a complete knowledge of his trade, he continued it on his own account, and, in 1837, he married Miss Mary Ann Turney, by whom he has four children. In 1838, Mr. H. removed to Winnebago County, Ill., where he continued to work at his trade, and, in the course of time, acquired considerable property, but becoming infected with the war fever, he early in 1861 enlisted in Company H, Seventy-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and remained in active service with his regiment until it was mustered out in October, 1864, in Chicago. After his discharge, he returned to his old employment until 1871, when he removed to Kansas, locating on Section 10, as above stated, and engaged principally in sheep-raising for a few years; but finding that unprofitable, he turned his attention to agriculture, and has now an average yield of twenty-six bushels of wheat and fifty-eight bushels of corn per acre. Cattle, eighty-seven head, hogs thirty, horses seven. Mr. H. is a Republican, but has never of late years taken any particular personal interest in politics.

A. T. JAYNES, M. D., was born in 1842, in Delaware County, Ohio, where he received his elementary education, and, in 1866, graduated from the Miami Medical College, and at once commenced practice in Lamont, Mo., and, in 1880, came to Eureka, where he has since resided. He has an excellent farm in Janesville Township. In 1861, Dr. Jaynes enlisted in Company F, Forty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and served throughout the war, being mustered out in August, 1865, with the rank of First Sergeant.

H. S. JONES, farmer, Section 13, Town 26, Range 10, P. O. Eureka, was born in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, in 1833; his birth-place is now part of the city of Cleveland, and, in 1835, his father moved to Elkhart County, Ind., and, in 1849, removed to Marquette County, Wis., and in September, 1859, the family came to Kansas, locating upon his present homestead, which he has since increased to 1,200 acres. He has devoted his attention principally to stock-raising and farming. Mr. Jones is also one of the partners of the Eureka Bank, and served as one of the Board of County Commissioners, and several times as President of the Agricultural Association. March 16, 1861, Mr. Jones married Miss Elmira J. Willis, a native of Indiana, who has borne him five children—Benjamin H., March 16, 1863; Edna E., April 17, 1869; Guy C., August 9, 1873; Henrietta S., February 27, 1876, and Mary E., October 7, 1879. Mr. Jones, during the war, in 1863 raised a company which formed part of the Ninth Kansas. He has also entered into almost every other enterprise conducive to the welfare of his fellow-men.

J. M. KENDALL, farmer, Section 25, P. O. Eureka, was born in 1836, in Miami County, Ohio, and has ever since he was a boy of nine years been in the cattle business; his first venture being the purchase of a calf for the sum of $2.50 in gold. For several years, however, he turned from the ancestral paths and engaged in the sale of patent rights, wire fence, agricultural implements, etc., eventually returning to his boyhood's love (cattle). Mr. K. resided for short periods in many Western States, and has shipped thousands of head of his early friends to the Eastern markets and Europe. In 1873, he accompanied a shipment of his own to England, in which country he remained several months visiting the principal cattle shows and importing some very fine Durham bulls, etc. He eventually decided in 1881 to locate permanently in this State, and selected the above-named section as his starting point, that, however, being bottom land (corn fifty bushels to acre), he found insufficient to his wants, and has lately added a section of upland to his possessions. At present he has besides his imported Durhams several fine specimens of English thoroughbred Short-horns and other breeds. Of native cattle he carries usually from 150 to 200 head; hogs he does not meddle with to any great extent, finding it cheaper to buy and ship. Mr. Kendall has a very fine frame residence upon his farm, and also several dwelling houses in town, all of which are insured. He is married, and has three children; he does not bother with politics, but attends strictly to business.

JUDGE JAMES KENNER, was born in Gibson County, Ind.; his parents removing thence to Wabash County, Ill. Under the tutelage of the celebrated "Old Fox" (See Centennial history of Illinois), the Judge received his education. In the spring of 1860, he came to Kansas, locating first near Iola, and in the summer of 1862 he came to Greenwood County and selected his farm on Bachelor Creek, being the northwest quarter of Section 24, Township 25, Range 10. He was elected to the Legislature in 1863, and so well did he represent his constituents that he was returned in the following year 1864. He was in the State militia during the first year of the war, and he with ten others organized the first society of Christian Brethren in the county in 1862. A church was subsequently built in 1870, at a cost of $2,450. In 1865, he was appointed Judge of Probate, and in 1866, he was elected to the office and subsequently re-elected four times. In 1866, he opened the first store in Eureka, which, having changed owners six times, has now developed into the mammoth establishment of W. H. H. Barger, corner First and Main streets. He was Justice of the Peace from 1865 to 1867. In Edwards County, Ill., he was married to Miss Judith Willis, by whom he has two children living—H. T. Kenner, now occupying the old homestead farm in this county, and Jay W. Kenner now Clerk of the County Court, and mentioned elsewhere in this history. His farm is four miles from town; he is one of Greenwood County's pioneer settlers. The Judge has ever taken a deep interest in everything pertaining to its welfare, and has liberally contributed thereto. For some time past he has resided in his town residence. In politics, he is a stanch and uncomprising Republican.

JAY W. KENNER, County Clerk, was born August 26, 1852, at Albion, Edwards Co., Ill. His parents removed to Kansas in 1860, locating first at Humboldt, and in the fall of 1862 settling upon the northwest quarter of Section 24, Township 25, Range 10, four miles from Eureka. Mr. Kenner was educated partly in Eureka and also at the Normal School of Emporia. He subsequently studied law with Judge Lillie, and was admitted to the bar of Greenwood County at the November term of the District Court in 1877. He has held the offices of City Clerk and Police Justice, and in 1879 was elected to his present office. He is the owner of his residence, corner Fifth and Walnut streets; is insured. He is a member of the A., F. & A. M., and in politics is a stanch Republican.

JOSIAH KINAMAN, farmer, Section 11, Town 26, Range 10, P. O. Eureka, was born on the 22d of February, 1812, in Smith County, Va., known as Washington County, Va., and when in his third year his parents removed thence to Montgomery County, Ohio, and subsequently to Madison County, Ind. In the fall of 1846, Mr. Kinaman removed to Mercer County, Ill., where he remained until 1857, when he came to Kansas, and upon the 4th of July of that year settled upon his present location. Mr. Kinaman was one of seven families who came to Greenwood County at that time, and of whom he is now the only survivor in the county. He built the first log cabin 16x18 feet, which still stands on Fall River, and is undoubtedly the pioneer settler of Greenwood County. At that time there were no roads and few neighbors, save Indians, and ere winter came on he had to go to Kansas City for provisions, etc., for the year, subsequently for two or three years. The trip was made semi-annually, and usually occupied, even with a good team, from seven to ten days, the only guide for the first trip being a small pocket compass. It was while upon this, his first journey, that he met Mr. Edwin Tucker, moving in June 19, 1834. Mr. Kinaman married Miss Susannah Smothers, of Madison County, Ind., and who died March 2, 1878, leaving six children—Jane, born November 29, 1837, and since deceased; Eliza, born June 22, 1841, and now the wife of Oscar Coy, Esquire, of Coyville, Wilson County; Miram, born November 14, 1843, now Mrs. Thomas Williams; Biriam, born October 4, 1847, and now residing in Washington Territory; Catharine, now Mrs. John M. Fowler, born June 2, 1849, and Aaron born July 19, 1853, who is now residing in the original cabin home. William K., the elder, having several years since built him a substantial frame dwelling. October 25, 1878, Mr. Kinaman married his present helpmate, Mrs. Mary A. Stapleford, a native of Indiana, but who has resided in this county since the spring of 1860. In 1881, Mr. Kinaman had a severe stroke of palsy from which he has never fully recovered, but although in his seventy-second year his memory is as good as ever and scarcely a silver thread shows in his dark hair. At present he owns about seventy head of native cattle, his ill health preventing him from raising stock as extensively as formerly. His farm being situated on rich bottom land his grain yield has always been exceptionally good, corn averaging sixty to seventy, and oats sixty, bushels per acre. He is a member of the Christian Church, and although voting with the Democrat party, he has always refused every attempt to induce him to accept a public office.

JOHN LEWIS, florist and seedsman, is a native of Shropshire, England, and was born February 10, 1828, and upon completing his education, which included the study of botany, was apprenticed four years under an experienced and practical gardener and florist. He subsequently had charge, for seven years, of the large private estate of an English gentleman of wealth, and upon leaving whose employ he established himself in the dual business of photographer and taxidermist, until he emigrated to America in 1879. Coming to Kansas the same year, he engaged in farming on Section 9, Spring Creek Township, but removed to Eureka in March, 1880, and purchased his present property in the southeast portion of town, and upon the completion of his residence and hot-houses, devoted his attention principally to his old love—Flora. He has upward of 20,000 flower plants, besides ornamental trees and shrubs, and is rapidly increasing his trade in field and garden seeds, being compelled to import largely in order to meet the demand. Some fine specimens of his flowers are to be seen in the windows of the Eureka Bank. Mr. Lewis is also no mean taxidermist, a large glass case of some fine work of his being in the room of the County Treasurer in the Court House. Being the only one in the county, he is kept busy. He intends soon increasing his gardens and enlarging his hot-houses, besides adding an addition to his house, to better facilitate the taxidermical branch of his business.

G. H. LILLIE, Ex-Judge of Probate, etc., was born in Geauga County, Ohio, February 12, 1822, and received his education in Trumbull County. He read law under Gov. Tod, of Ohio, and was admitted to the bar of Ohio in 1843, and at once commenced the practice of his profession in the town of Warren, Trumbull County, continuing therein until his removal to Freeport, Ill., in 1845, where he remained a year, and from whence he removed to Shullsburg, La Fayette County, Wis. Resuming the practice of his profession in the latter place, he was, in the fall of 1846, elected to the office of County Attorney. In 1858, he came to Kansas, locating at first in Neosho Rapids, Lyon County. While residing in Lyon County, he was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention, and in the fall of 1860 he was elected to represent that county in the Legislature. During the war, Judge Lillie rendered very efficient service as an active organizer of companies, etc., and for some time held a position in the secret service of the Government. At Onego, Ill., May 9, 1844, he married Miss Melinda Wilder, who has borne him seven children—David M., born March 5, 1846; Mrs. Catherine A. Morris, born September 4, 1851; Mrs. Laura A. Boynton, born April 22, 1853; Mrs. Sarah A. Mann, born May 22, 1855; Mrs. Maria A. Sumner, born October 14, 1857; Mrs. Maranda M. Wells, born May 28, 1859; Mrs. Ella L. Edwards, born June 30, 1861. In 1868, Mr. Lillie came to Kansas, locating on Section 28, near Verdigris River, this county, and engaged in farming, teaching and practicing law until the fall of 1869, when he removed to Eureka, where he resumed practice, and was twice elected Mayor, and subsequently Judge of Probate Court, which latter office he filled uninterruptedly for upwards of ten years, until compelled to resign in the spring of 1882, owing to a stroke of paralysis, which has so impaired his health as to prevent his again pursuing his profession. Besides his residence and town lots (eight in number) he owns 160 acres in Section 16, situated on Spring Creek, and the greater part of which is under cultivation, with an average corn yield of fifty bushels, and at present occupied by his son; and fifty acres of Section 18, the latter being rented. The Judge has always been a prominent Free-State man, and has for many years been ever earnest to do his duty to his country, and few residents of Greenwood County are so universally respected. He is a member of the Christian Church, and contributed liberally toward defraying the cost of its erection.

ROBERT LOY, farmer, Section 29, P. O. Eureka, was born in Westmoreland County, England, and in 1854 came to the United States and located in Shelby County, Ill., upon a farm, which he subsequently sold, and in 1865 removed to his present location of 835 acres, 175 of which are under cultivation; but Mr. Loy has devoted his attention to sheep, his flock of American merinos being considered the finest in the county. Mr. Loy was married in Illinois, and has a family of seven children—Annie E., May B., John G., Alice F., Amelia and Myrtle. Mr. Loy is a good farmer, and a highly respected and influential citizen.

D. M. McKENNEY, was born in 1830. His parents removed to Butler County, Ohio, in 1836, where the subject of this sketch was educated, and subsequently entered upon the study of law, being admitted to the bar in 1850, and immediately entering upon the practice of his profession there for a period of ten years, removing to San Francisco, Cal., in 1860, where he again not only resumed the practice of his profession, but also entered upon the study of geology, natural history, entomology and botany, of which he collected and retains many fine specimens. In 1868, he went to Oregon, where he remained two years, returning again to California, he becoming District Judge. In 1874, he came to Columbus, Cherokee Co., Kan., where he served one term as County Attorney. In 1879, he came to Eureka, where he has already established a very fine law practice. In politics the Judge is a Republican.

G. H. MARTZ, Ex-County Superintendent of Public Instruction and farmer, Section 33, P. O. Eureka, was born in 1829, in Darke County, Ohio, where he received his elementary education. He subsequently attended the Western University of Ohio, where he graduated with high honors. Subsequently he taught the higher branches in various Ohio educational institutions, for a period of fifteen years. He finally came to Kansas in April, 1871, locating in Eureka, engaging for a short period in his old occupation. In January, 1872, he was appointed County Superintendent, to fill short term, and subsequently elected to the office by a unanimous vote. Upon the expiration of his term of office, he was again returned. About this time, he purchased one-fourth of Section 33, Township 24, Range 10, near Janesville, which he devoted to stock-raising chiefly. He was subsequently elected to his old office, which he has filled to the entire satisfaction of his constituents, serving altogether, as Superintendent of Public Instruction, here, eight years. At the late elections, he was nominated, but declined, as he preferred to devote his time to his increasing stock interests. Mr. Martz has recently bought an extensive stock farm in Missouri, which will be run by his eldest son. M. Martz has only two children, and intends devoting the remainder of his life to their interests.

PHILIP M. MOORE, farmer and stock raiser, P. O. Eureka, Greenwood Co., came to Kansas in the fall of 1857, located in Woodson County, one and a half miles northwest of Neosho Falls, where he took a claim on the New York Indian land, which he pre-empted in 1860, and improved a farm which he cultivated until September, 1862, but at the same time engaged in other business; was at one time interested in a lumber yard at Neosho Falls, and for the last seven years has had a loan and insurance agency at that place, and also a loan office at Yates' Center, in the same county, and one at Eureka, Fall River and Twin Falls, in Greenwood County, Coyville, New Albany, Wilson Co.; he has very recently purchased a farm near Eureka, and will soon move to that place. He has served as Township Trustee two terms, of Neosho Falls Township. He was born in Henry County, Ind., August 10, 1835; son of William and Nancy Moore; lived in his native county five years, in Wayne County five years, in Henry County one year, Grant County eight years, Howard County three, and then moved to Kansas, where he still resides. He was married near Iola, Kan., August 12, 1860, to Melissa G. Anderson, daughter of Watson G. and Beulah J. Anderson; by this union they have six children, four of whom are living—Charles E., Effie E., Ada A. and Arthur M. Moore. Mr. Moore is one of Woodson County's enterprising business men, and is highly respected as a useful citizen.

B. J. NEWMAN, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 23, in Eureka Township, and 160 acres of Section 8, Janesville Township, P. O. Eureka, was born in 1845, in Dutchess County, N. Y., where his father had for many years carried on an extensive dairy farm. April 12, 1858, his parents removed to Kenosha, Wis., and now reside there. The subject of this sketch came to Kansas in the fall of 1870, and having previously engaged very extensively in the cattle trade in various States, decided to embark in stock-raising, he locating for that purpose on sections named above. Upon the bottom land he depends for the corn to feed his winter stock of cattle, and hitherto has raised exceptionally good corn crops. At present he has but 180 head of hogs (Poland-China and Berkshire) and 157 head of cattle. Mr. Newman has also a large range in Bourbon and another in Lyon County, the latter now being under the charge of his son, Benjamin J. Newman, Jr.

J. W. NICHOLAS, Postmaster, was born in Virginia in 1836, and subsequently removed to Lexington, Ill., where he engaged in mercantile pursuits until he enlisted in Company K, One Hundred and Forty-fifth Iowa Volunteer Infantry. His regiment was detailed for guard duty in Missouri, and he remained with it until mustered out at Camp Butler, Ill. In the fall of 1864, he resumed his former occupation, continuing therein until 1872, when he came to Kansas, locating in this county, and at first turning his attention to farming. In the fall of 1872, he opened a store in town, which he conducted for upwards of a year. In March, 1865, he was married to Miss Margaret Hyers, of Lexington, Ill. She died in February, 1872, leaving him with three children, viz.: Lelia, Charles A. and Willie H., February 12, 1873, Mr. Nicholas married Mrs. Holman, who was then Postmistress at Eureka, having been appointed September 10, 1872, and re-appointed, owing to a change of name, occasioned by her marriage, March 6, 1873. Mrs. Nicholas held the office of Postmistress for a period of three years, when I. R. Phenis, now Probate Judge, was appointed and held the office one year. Mr. Nicholas succeeded him at the expiration of the year, and has held the office uninterruptedly since. Prior and subsequent to his marriage with Mrs. Holman, Mr. Nicholas conducted the stationery and fancy goods store in Post Office Building. By his second marriage he has two children—Ona and Frankie. In addition to his residence, Mr. Nicholas owns two business blocks and several town lots. He is a member of the Kansas Mutual Benefit Society, and also of the State Temperance Mutual Benefit and Insurance Associations. As a Government official Mr. Nicholas is essentially the right man in the right place, faithfully discharging his often trying duties in such a courteous manner, that has earned for him the universal esteem of that hard to please master, the public. Eureka being a money order office, he has of course an assistant, and it is worthy of remark, that during Mr. Nicholas' term of office, not a mistake has occurred in his office, even with not less than 70,000 letters being annually mailed therein.

IRA P. NYE, lawyer, etc., was born July 13, 1836, in Herkimer County, N. Y., and with his parents removed to Beloit, Wis., in 1846. He received his education at Beloit College, and came to Eureka in 1870, where he opened a general store, being joined in August of the same year by his brother, Mr. J. C. Nye, who is now County Treasurer. In 1874, Mr. Nye sold out his interest in the store and opened a real estate and loan office. He is the owner of 480 acres of land on Bachelor Creek, four miles north of town, 100 acres being under cultivation, and also several buildings in town. In 1862, he enlisted in Company B, Twenty-second Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and accompanied the regiment, taking part in all its engagements with the enemy until March, 1863, when he was taken prisoner and confined in Libby prison until exchanged, the latter part of May of that year. Upon the re-organization of his regiment, he was upon detached duty until the close of the war, when he was mustered out at Milwaukee, Wis., July, 1865, with the rank of First Lieutenant. Mr. Nye was admitted to the bar of this county in April, 1875, and later to that of the United States Supreme Court. He was the first Mayor of Eureka upon its organization as a city of the third class in 1871, and was elected to the Legislature in 1872. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and the G. A. R.

WILLIAM ODDY is a native of Bradford, Yorkshire, England, having been born there October 22, 1832, and is a graduate of the class of 1848, of Airdale College. In 1852, he emigrated to this country, landing in New York and subsequently resided for four years in Chicago, where he was engaged in the importation of English cloth goods. In 1856, he came to Kansas, and had scarcely been an hour in Topeka, when a call was made for volunteers to go to the relief of the Free-State party at Lawrence, responding to which he subsequently became prominently identified with Jim Lane, John Brown and other leaders of the Free-State party, and not only bore arms in its defense but aided it financially to the amount of $3,500, which it is needless to say has never been refunded. Late in the year 1856, he went to Nebraska, and Colorado in the 1860, where he remained until shortly after the breaking-out of the war of the rebellion, when he enlisted in the Independent Battery Colorado Volunteer Artillery, in which he served in Missouri, Kansas and Arkansas, and with the exception of a short period when he was detailed as hospital steward, was on active duty, against rebels and Indians, receiving a painful arrow wound from the latter at Box Elder, when on detailed service. Was engaged against the Cheyennnes and Arapahoes, and was mustered out May 22, 1865. While in Colorado Mr. Oddy was Justice of the Peace and Recorder of Summit County. At the close of the war he located for a short time in Lawrence, and thence to Junction City, finally settling in Eureka, in Greenwood County, 1871 May 27, 1874, he was married to Miss Sarah Clark, by whom he has one child—George E., born February 18, 1875. Since locating here Mr. Oddy has devoted his attention principally to lime burning and building. He has held the office of Constable and Clerk of School Board, and is charter member and Quartermaster Sergeant of Dick Yates Post, No. 50, G. A. R.

A. R. PETERS, jeweler, was born in 1838, in Columbia, Lancaster Co., Penn., and received his education at Wickersham's Academy, Marietta, Penn. Being of a mechanical turn of mind, his parents placed him with George W. McCauley, of Harrisburg, Penn., to learn the trade of watchmaker and jeweler. In 1859, he went Denver, Col., where he remained two years. In 1861, he returned to the States, served in the Ninety-first Pennsylvania Regiment three years, after which he resided in New York City six years. On account of his health he left the city, and resided in Centre County, Penn., until 1878. As he had always preferred the West, since his residence in Denver, he now resolved to make it his future home. In 1878, he removed to Eureka, Kan., where he at once commenced business, and has built up a profitable trade. Mr. Peters is a first class artisan and appreciated by his fellow-citizens. He is one of the Board of City Councilmen, and a leading member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. In politics, he is a Republican, but has never done more than exercise his right of franchise.

I. R. PHENIS, Probate Judge, was born April 20, 1825, in Franklin County, Ind., where he received a common school education, subsequently attending the Western Agricultural High School of Sugar Plain, Ind., leaving there in 1846. Turning his attention to the study of law, he was admitted to the bar in 1865, and practiced in Tippecanoe until he removed to Kansas in 1867, locating here. In 1868, was elected County Attorney and re-elected in 1872. Resuming the practice of his profession he continued therein until appointed Judge of Probate, to fill vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Lillie, and was elected in the fall of 1882. While in Indiana he was Auditor of Union County, and was in Cavalry Company in the Indiana Legion, being frequently called out by the Governor of that State during the war times. In 1852, he married Miss Emily Gardner, of Union County, Ind., by whom he has had four children—Albert, born September 17, 1853, and now on the editorial staff of the Kansas City Times; Lucy, born December 13, 1854, and now the wife of Dr. J. B. Draper, of Oswego, Kansas; Florence, born August 14, 1856, and now Mrs. E. F. Rizer, of Eureka, and Vinton, born May 8, 1859, at present with Benton, Myers & Co., druggists, Cleveland, Ohio. Since early boyhood the Judge has been a strong abolitionist and has always advocated liberty and freedom.

J. B. PIERCE, M. D., was born in 1839, at Potsdam, St. Lawrence Co., New York. In 1846, his parents removed to Michigan. He received his elementary education in the district schools of the latter State. He enlisted in 1863 in the Fourteenth Michigan Infantry, and was detailed to Quartermaster's department, where he remained until sent to the hospital, and was discharged, owing to disability, in August, 1864. Upon regaining health, he resumed his studies at Bronson, Mich., subsequently attending the Ann Arbor Medical College, and graduating therefrom in 1869. He located in Eureka, Kansas, in 1871, and continued in practice until 1876, when he repaired to the St. Louis Medical College, in order to take a course in obstetrics. In 1865, he had married Miss Nellie M. Hunt, of Delton, Wis., by whom he had two children, James Rollin, and Earl Wilson. Shortly after his return from St. Louis in 1876, his wife died, and in 1878, he married Miss Ida M. Fuller, of Albion, Me. The Doctor is a member of the A., F. & A. M. and A. O. U. W. The Doctor owns 160 acres on Section 7, Town 25, Range 11, and also several buildings in town, including livery stable, machine shop, stores and residences, part of them being insured. He has always contributed liberally to all religious and educational movements, and has built up an excellent practice, and for what he is and may yet attain to he has but his own unaided exertions to thank.

C. W. REICH, builder, etc., is a native of Ohio, but was educated in Illinois, and learned the trade of house carpenter. In July, 1861, he enlisted at New Harmony, Ind., in the First Indiana Cavalry, commanded by Gov. Baker, and participated in all the engagements of his regiment, with the exception of eighteen months, when his company was detailed at Helena, Ark, as body guard for Gen. A. P. Hovey. He held the rank of Corporal when discharged at Indianapolis July 3, 1865. Mr. Reich came to Eureka in 1871, and has built under contract several of its principal buildings and residences, notably the brick schoolhouse, Hotel Greenwood, Lutheran Church and several of the principal stores on Main street, besides his residence, work shop and other buildings, all of which are insured. He owns fourteen town lots, and has recently assumed charge of the extensive lumber yards and other interests here of S. A. Brown & Co., of Chicago. The annual sales of lumber in Eureka, chiefly pine, if we except cedar and oak posts, amounts to upwards of $65,000, while more than sixty car loads of coal, of which that from Fort Scott and Rich Hill is considered the best, at an average cost to consumers of $4.75 per ton, is sold during the season. Mr. Reich also deals extensively in lime and building sand, the former chiefly from Pierce City, Mo., and Fort Scott and Junction City, Kan., the best lime being considered that which comes from Missouri, and the sand most in use being that from the Kansas River. During the building season, Mr. Reich employs in his work shop alone from four to eight competent workmen. For upwards of a year, he owned a well-stocked lumber yard of his own, but sold the contents of his yard to Messrs. Brown & Co., upon assuming charge of their interests here, and the firm is fortunate in having such a competent and able representative. Mr. Reich is a member of the Christian Church and Masonic fraternity.

HON. G. M. RIZER, was born in Cumberland City, Alleghany Co., Md., August 2, 1827, and lived there until 1852, when he crossed the plains to California. He returned to Cumberland in 1853, and was appointed Deputy Postmaster. In 1854, he married and remained in Cumberland until the fall of 1870, when, in company with W. H. H. Borger, he visited Eureka, Kan., and purchased a stock of goods. In the spring of 1871, he removed his family to Eureka, and has been engaged in the mercantile business, until last September, when he sold out. Mr. Rizer owns a cattle ranch and farm of 400 acres on Upper Fall River, and is now engaged with three other parties in erecting a merchant steel-roller mill at Nickerson, Reno Co., Kan., which is all the business he is engaged in at present. He has held several local offices both in Maryland and Kansas. He was never an aspirant for any political office.

H. C. RIZER was born in 1844 in Cumberland, Md. He is the son of Jacob and Mary Rizer, now residents of Eureka. His early education was gained at the seminary in Middletown, Md. On the breaking-out of the war he enlisted as a private but went to the front as a Sergeant, and when mustered out bore the rank of Colonel of the Third Maryland Infantry. He next entered the office of George Sands at Ellicott's Mills, Md., where he read law until he entered the office of Judge Weisel, at Hagerstown, Md. In June 1870, he came West and located at Eureka, where he has ever since resided, first as a general practitioner, then as County Attorney and for a number of years past as editor of the Herald.

GEN. GEORGE C. ROGERS, attorney at law, was born November 22, 1839, in Piermont, N. H., and removed with his parents to Vermont in 1846, where he was educated at Bradford Academy; also at Wauconda Academy, Ill., studied law with Hon. E. P. Ferry, and was admitted to the bar at Springfield in 1860. In the spring of 1861, he enlisted as a private in Company I, Fifteenth Illinois Infantry, but, upon the organization of the regiment he was mustered in as First Lieutenant of the said company, and, in September of the same year, was made Captain. At the battle of Shiloh he was wounded four times, but refused to quit duty, and subsequently for bravery was appointed Lieutenant Colonel, becoming Colonel after the battle of Hatchie. He was also wounded twice at the battle of Champion Hills. The works at Altoona, Ga., were built under his direction. He accompanied Gen. Sherman in his memorable march to the sea, and continued with his regiment during all its engagements, commanding a brigade during the Atlanta campaign. In June, 1865, he was made Brigadier General, then in his twenty-sixth year, becoming the youngest general in the army. His brigade was mustered out at Fort Leavenworth September 16, 1865, when he returned to the practice of his profession (law) in Chicago, continuing there until the great fire of 1871, when all his property was destroyed, which not only included many relics of his hard fought battles, but also a fine law library. He then went to Kansas, locating for a short time in Burlingame, Osage County, finally settling in Eureka in 1872. He was County Attorney from 1878 to 1880, and, in February, 1882, purchased the Graphic, changing the name to the Greenwood County Democrat, which paper he has continued to manage with great success until recently, when he sold out in order to devote his whole time to the interests of his many clients. As a soldier, his record speaks for itself, and his grit is well known to the many surviving boys in blue. He now owns a residence and half a block of dwellings in town, and since his retirement from journalism finds his practice taking all his utmost energies. In 1871, while in Chicago, he married Miss Josie C. Carey, of that city, by whom he has Frank C., born February 28, 1873, and George T., born October 25, 1875. Both boys bid fair to equal their father in ability. The General has always taken a prominent part in politics, and is a stanch and uncompromising Democrat. He is a charter member of the Dick Yates Post, G. A. R., and, in fact, was one of the most successful and ardent workers in the original organization of the order, if such we may be permitted to call it. Gen. Rogers, since his residence in Kansas, has done much by voice and pen to benefit the State. Lately, he has bought some 600 acres, which he intends devoting to stock-raising under competent men, as he cannot refrain from the practice of law.

Its seating capacity is about 150. Present membership upward of 100. The church is free of debt. Present officers are Messrs. Edwin Tucker and John Warr, Deacons, and Messrs. N. R. Collins, Thomas Holverson and George Mitchell, Trustees. The pastor is Superintendent of the Sunday school. SCOTT STEWART, Clerk of the District Court, was born June 5, 1847, in Corinth, Williamson County, Ill., and, in 1869, came to Kansas, locating in Wilson County until the spring of 1871, when he removed to Quincy Township, this county, and engaged in farming until his election to his present office in 1876, when he removed to Eureka. He was re-elected Clerk of the District Court in 1878-80-82. In April, 1872, he married Miss Smith, of Quincy, this county. They have four children—Clarence H., born December 7, 1873; John D., October 17, 1875; George R., November 17, 1877, and Florence, January 23, 1880. He owns two residences in town, besides other property. Although not himself in the army during the late unpleasantness, yet the family was ably represented, as his brother Zadoc T. Stewart, now of Brown County, Kan., who was three years in Company D., Eighteenth Illinois, and another brother, Virgil A. Stewart, now of Perry County, Ill., by virtue of re-enlistment, served throughout the war in Company E, Twenty-ninth Illinois. Mr. Stewart is a stanch and hard-working member of the Republican party. He is Trustee of the M. E. Church, and a member of the K. of H. He also represents the Hartford, North American, British American and Orient Fire Insurance Companies.

N. F. SHEARER, engineer, was born in Monroe County, N. Y., in 1844, and while yet a child his parents removed to Marengo, Ill., where he was educated, afterward working on his father's farm until July, 1862, when he enlisted in Company A, Ninety-fifth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and subsequently participated with his regiment in the siege of Vicksburg, battles of Champion Hill, Germantown, Nashville, and was on the Red River Expedition under Gen. Banks. He was present at and participated in the taking of Spanish Fort, and, in fact, every engagement of his regiment until mustered out in September, 1865, at Springfield, Ill. While engaged at the siege of Vicksburg, in taking a cartridge out of his box, he was wounded in the hand, the missile penetrating the cartridge box and nearly severing a finger. On leaving the army he returned home, and, in [illegible], removed to Johnson County, Mo., and for three years worked as fireman on the Missouri Pacific Railroad, subsequently becoming locomotive engineer on the A., T. & F. R. R., and removing to Eureka in 1878, where he now owns several town lots in addition to that upon which his residence is situated. December 15, 1874, he was married to Miss Mary Trapp. They have but two children—Claude, born October 3, 1875, and Frederick, born January 12, 1878. Mr. Shearer is a member of the I. O. O. F., and Sergeant Major of Dick Yates Post, No. 50, G. A. R.

JAMES P. SILSBY, M. D., farmer, Section 28, Township 26, Range 11, P. O. Eureka, was born in Detroit, Mich., in 1837, and was educated in Conway, Livingston County, to which place his parents had removed in 1848. He enlisted on May 10, 1861, in Company D, Fourth Michigan Infantry, and participated in the first battle of Bull Run, and in 1862 at the siege of Yorktown, and subsequently on the advance upon Richmond; was witness upon one occasion of the characteristic impetuous courage of the late Gen. Custer. Col.

Woodbury, of the Fourth Michigan, had received orders from headquarters (McClellan's) to send a reconnoitering party of his regiment to the Chickahominy, and upon their reaching the river they found Custer with a handful of cavalry in the timber, almost surrounded by a rebel brigade. To charge to his support was the order for the Fourth, and as they did so, Custer, bareheaded, and having a sabre in one hand and one of those ugly Louisiana "cheese knives" in the other, dashed from the timber followed by his men, and, by wheeling and counter-charging, routed the enemy, who lost over 300 in killed, wounded and prisoners, the Union loss being about twenty. At the battle of Mechanicsville, Mr. Silsby was wounded in the left shoulder by a piece of shell, yet took part next day at Gaines' Mills, subsequently participating in the engagements at Cold Harbor, Savage, White Oak Swamp and Malvern Hill, where he received a bullet wound in the same shoulder, which laid him up for about five weeks. He was in the seven days' fight at Antietam. Later, he was on Burnside's memorable "mud expedition," and at Chancellorsville, assisted in re-taking the ground lost by the Eleventh Army Corps. At the battle of Gettysburg the regiment had only 300 men fit for duty, and that number was reduced to ninety on the second day, when the subject of this sketch was taken prisoner and sent to Belle Isle, where he was one of those who suffered the extreme cold and hardship of New Year's Day, 1864, when ten of the Union soldiers were found next day frozen to death, there being no wood allowed for fires, and the few tents there were offered but slight protection from the cold; hundreds were severely frost-bitten, and all the following day was consumed in taking them across the river in an open boat. February 21, 1864, he was sent to Andersonville, where he remained until September 8, when he was sent to Savannah, where he remained until exchanged, November 9, and was finally mustered out January 5, 1865, at Detroit. Subsequently, he attended the Cleveland Medical College of Homœopathy, and graduated therefrom in 1868, and afterward practiced his profession in Livingston County, Mich., until November, 1877, when he came to Kansas and located upon Section 28, as stated above. July 4, 1859, he married Miss Mary A. Booth; they have lost one child by death, yet four are left—Antoinette, (born in 1860, and who is now the wife of P. M. Day, Esq., of this county), James C. (born in 1874), and Edward W. (born in June, 1880). Of the 182 acres which the Doctor owns, fully one-third is under cultivation, and yields the average quantity of grain. He prefers stock to agriculture, however, and usually carries from seventy-five to one hundred head of cattle. Besides his farm and residence, the Doctor owns some town lots in Eureka. He does not trouble himself much about aught save his own concerns, and is a United States pensioner.

SMITH & LAWTHER have been proprietors of the Eureka Steam Mill since 1882, having then purchased it from Mr. Barger. Mr. Smith was born, in 1828, in Monroe County, N. Y., where he had for years been engaged in the milling business, and came to Kansas in 1879 and located in this county. Was engaged in sheep-raising until the present year. His partner, Mr. Lawther, is also a native of the Empire State, having been born in Schoharie County in 1831, and, in 1851, removed to Chicago, where he remained engaged in the dry goods business until 1870, when he went to Topeka, engaging there in the marble trade until his removal to Eureka in 1878. The Eureka Steam Mill was built in 1871. It has four run of stone, one of which is reserved for corn, and a capacity of 100 barrels per day. The engine is a forty-five horse-power. Building and contents insured for $4,000. They attend strictly to business, and, we understand, have all the business they can attend to.

A. M. STODDARD, contractor and builder, was born in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, in 1843, and came to Kansas with his parents in 1859, locating in Burlingame. In August, 1862, he enlisted in Company I, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and participated in all the engagements of the regiment until it was mustered out at Fort Leavenworth, September 21, 1865. Upon leaving the army, he learned the carpenter's trade, and in the fall of 1868, came to Eureka, where he became associated as partner with his brother and Mr. Denison in business, but sold out to his partners in the fall of 1870, and turned his attention to building and contracting. Besides his large new residence in Eureka, he is the possessor of several choice town lots, and in conjunction with his brother, owns the old homestead in Osage County. In October 15, 1871, he married at Eureka, Miss Effie Green, of Ohio, by whom he has had six children, four of whom, however, died in infancy, the only survivor being Essie, born June 26, 1877. Mr. Stoddard was a member of the first Eureka City Council, and is a member of the I. O. O. F. and A. O. U. W.

Mr. Stoddard enlisted in Company I, Eleventh Kansas Cavalry, and subsequently participated in all the engagements of the regiment. At Platt's Bridge, Dacotah Territory, he was wounded by arrows in the thigh, side and arm, and was mustered out with the regiment at Fort Leavenworth, September 21, 1865. He then returned to Burlingame, and in 1868 came to Eureka, engaging for a time in business, but eventually preferring the farm, bought half of Section 4. His corn averages sixty-five bushels per acre. In 1869, he married Miss Helen Bush, of Burlingame, by whom he has four children—May, born November 26, 1870; Ella, born December 25, 1872; Helen born June 17, 1878; Grace born May 25, 1880. Mr. Stoddard is a P. G., of Eureka Lodge, No. 53, I. O. O. F., P. M. of Fidelity Lodge, No. 106, A., F. & A. M., and charter member of Dick Yates Post, G. A. R. His farm, residence, outbuildings, etc., on Fall River are insured. Mr. S. has been City Councilman, and is a Republican in politics.

REV. M. F. TROXELL, pastor Lutheran Church, is a native of Maryland, and received his collegiate education in Gettysburg, Penn., graduating from the Pennsylvania College in 1880, with the degree of A. B., and in theology he is a graduate of the Lutheran Seminary of Pennsylvania, which is also situated in Gettysburg. Mr. Troxell preached his first sermon to his present congregation on July 23, 1882, and in October of that year, was married to Miss Julia T. Forney, of Baltimore, Md. The Lutheran society here was organized by Messrs. Jacob Riser, A. B. Norberg, Jacob Knudson, J. M. Seidle, S. A. Petterson and a few others. In 1873, the Rev. F. W. Sargent, of Emporia, preached the first sermon in that year, and subsequently he with Rev. Messrs. Gift and Groseclose held services at irregular intervals in the old Episcopal Church, until the increase in membership necessitated the building of the present church edifice, which was opened for worship in September, 1882. It has a seating capacity of 400, and was erected at a cost of $3,100. The church is out of debt. The membership is now upwards of sixty, with average congregational attendance of 150 persons. The present Elders are Messrs. W. H. H. Barger and S. A. Petterson. The present Deacons are Messrs. A. Anderson and H. F. Riser, the pastor being Superintendent of the Sunday school.

HON. EDWIN TUCKER, banker, was born in 1836, in Newbury, Vt., and while yet a boy, his parents moved to Beloit, Wis., about 1846, and there Mr. Tucker received his education. In the spring of 1857, he came to Kansas, his father's family following in the fall, and located on Section 3, Township 26, Range 10, Eureka Township. At that early date in the history of Greenwood County, there were but few neighbors, many of the settlers being simply camping out and not all of them eventually locating here. He turned his attention principally to stock-raising until 1870, when for a short time he became engaged in the mercantile pursuit, and in that year the Eureka bank was opened, which he has since continued to manage. In 1863, Mr. Tucker married Miss Amelia Willis, of Eureka (her parents being from Edwards County, Ill.), by whom he has six children. Mr. Tucker has been County Superintendent two terms, and for upwards of ten years has been one of the Regents of the State Normal school. In 1867–68, he was elected to the Legislature, and in 1869–70, he represented Greenwood County in the State Senate. A live business man, he has done much to advance the interests of Eureka. He is one of the originators of the new Hotel Company, and a member of the Congregational Church.

MATTHEW J. VERNER, Sheriff, was born in the "City of Brotherly Love," January 5, 1847, and while he was yet but a child, his parents removed to St. Clair County, Ill., and there, at the tender age of seven, he was left an orphan, both parents having died within a short period of each other. A friend brought him up, until he was twelve years old, when he went to his brother, residing in Shelby County, and worked on a farm until fourteen, when in July, 1862, he enlisted at Shelbyville, in Company B, One Hundred and Fifteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, ostensibly as a musician, but he shouldered his gun with the best of them, and proceeded with the regiment to Covington, Ky., and participated in the battles of Chickamauga, Mission Ridge, Lookout Mountain, Resaca, and several minor affairs and skirmishes, his regiment forming part of the Fourth Army Corps of the Army of the Cumberland. In September, 1863, he was appointed Brigade Orderly by Brigade Commander, J. H. Moore, formerly his Colonel, and acted as such until mustered out with the regiment at Springfield, Ill., in June, 1865. Upon leaving the army, he repaired to Shelbyville, where he attended school for five months, that being the only education he had received, with the exception of a knowledge of the alphabet. He then went on a farm until March, 1868, when he came to Eureka, where he soon afterward opened a hardware store, and in 1872, associated with him Mr. Daum, under the firm name of Verner & Daum, and in 1877, they sold out to present proprietors, Messrs. Biggs & Bennett. Relieved of the cares of business, he then removed to Charleston, this county, where he purchased 120 acres on Section 10, sixty-five of which are under cultivation, with an average corn yield of fifty bushels; seventy-five head best grade cattle and good eight room house and barns, etc., all insured. Mr. Verner was Register of Deeds in 1870–74, and in 1879 was elected Sheriff of the county, which office he still retains by virtue of re-election. His term of enlistment having expired, he was mustered out with the regiment at Mattoon, September, 1864. He subsequently attended college at Springfield and Eureka, Ill., and then attended the Ann Arbor, Mich., Medical College, graduating in chemistry in 1868, and from the St. Louis, Mo., Medical College as M. JOHN WARR, merchant, is a native of Bristol, England, born in 1837, and learned there the trade of carver and gilder, subsequently carrying on business for himself until he came to the United States in 1869, locating in Milwaukee, Wis. Mr. Warr then engaged in business as picture dealer and house decorator, etc., until 1870, when he came to Eureka and opened a hardware store on the site now occupied by the new hotel building, continuing therein until 1876, when he removed to his present large store, corner of Main and Second streets. In addition to general hardware, he is also the only furniture dealer in town, and has always on hand a large assortment of undertaker's supplies, the value of stock in the store being upwards of $7,000. Mr. Warr is the owner of the building, which, with the stock, is insured. A. M. WASSAM, M. D., is a native of Pennsylvania, being born in Somerset County, December 15, 1846. His father, Jacob Wassam, emigrated to the United States in 1828, from Germany, when twelve years of age, with his parents, who settled in Somerset County, Penn., and were among the early pioneer farmers of that State. His father, Jacob, as above, married Miss Barbara Berkey, of Somerset County, in 1837, the subject of this sketch being the fourth child or their second son. In the year 1849, his parents moved to Indiana County, Penn., and from there, in 1864, to Darke County, Ohio, where, after remaining for several years, they moved to Miami County, Ohio. Until he was twenty years of age, Dr. Wassam lived with his parents, assisting them on the farm, attending, and also teaching school, during which time he laid up the sum of $650, at that time a neat amount, which he gave to his parents for their assistance. He had early turned his attention to the study of medicine, the last year of his stay at home devoting his whole time to the same, under the direction of Dr. L. J. Cunkle. In 1868, the Doctor went to Chicago, and took a course at the Rush Medical College. In 1869, he returned to his home in Miami County, and was married to Miss Nancy Hart that same year, immediately afterward removing to Cherry Tree, Indiana Co., Penn., where he commenced the practice of medicine. He remained there four years, building up a very successful and lucrative practice. In 1873, he again went to Ohio, and took a regular course of study at the Ohio Medical College at Cincinnati, from which institution he graduated with the degree of M. D. Soon afterward, Dr. Wassam came West, and settled at Eureka, where he has ever since resided, engaged in the practice of his profession, having the largest practice of any physician in this section of the State. The Doctor has amassed quite a fortune, and has been active and prominent in all public enterprises for the benefit of his town. He is a member of the State Medical Society of Kansas; has also attained to the degree of K. T., No. 19, El Dorado Commandery. He has been President of the Board of Health of Eureka. Dr. Wassam has contributed several articles to the Cincinnati medical journals, and also to his home papers, on contagious diseases, viz., membraneous croup, diphtheria and typhoid fever. The Doctor has three children—Dora May, Anna Laura and Nellie Dot.

F. W. WATSON, M. D., was born in 1841, in the city of Troy, N. Y., and at an early age started in life for himself, having supported and educated himself since seven years of age. At fourteen, we find him in Wisconsin, working on a farm, and in the lumber woods, where he continued until 1862, when he went to Chicago, and with the money saved by hard toil was enabled to take the first steps toward acquiring a knowledge of medicine. After attending Rush Medical College for two terms, he, in May, 1864, enlisted in Company D, One Hundred and Forty-first Illinois Volunteers, being soon after appointed Assistant Surgeon. In November, 1864, he was appointed Surgeon of the Seventh Illinois Cavalry, then stationed at Nashville, and served throughout the Hood campaign, and subsequently appointed Assistant Surgeon in the cavalry corps hospital at Gallatin, where he remained till March, 1865, when he was appointed Assistant Surgeon to the Eighteenth Illinois, but was compelled to resign, owing to ill health, in October following. Upon his return to Chicago, and recovering his health, he proceeded with his studies, and graduated from Rush, with degree of M. D., in 1866. In the same year, he married Miss Eliza A. Baysinger, of Paris, Ill., by whom he has three children. He commenced practice in Hartford, Lyons Co., Kan., and in 1875 went to Mount Clemens, Mich., where he remained until December, 1879, when he returned to Kansas, locating at Eureka, and has lately purchased residence and lot corner of Walnut and Second streets. The Doctor has been City Clerk of Eureka since 1879, and Adjutant of Dick Yates Post, Grand Army of the Republic, since its organization.

THOMAS C. WILLIAMS, farmer, Section 12, P. O. Eureka, was born July 9, 1841, in Edwards County, Ill. In 1859, his father, Mr. A. J. R. Williams, who is now in Colorado, left Illinois for Kansas and located in this county. The subject of this sketch, after leaving school, worked on his father's farm until December, 1862, when he enlisted in Company I, Ninth Kansas Volunteer Cavalry, at Fort Riley, and was with his regiment on frontier duty and stationed at Forts Riley, Larned and Lyons, remaining in active service until mustered out at Duvall's Bluff, Ark., March 22, 1865, and subsequently sent to Fort Leavenworth for final discharge. Upon his return home, he at once took up 160 acres of land on above section under the Homestead Act, and proceeded to improve it. He now has the whole under cultivation, with an average corn yield of fifty bushels per acre and of wheat about seventeen bushels. Usually Mr. Williams has about sixty head of cattle. His farm is well stocked and his comfortable residence and substantial outbuildings are insured. In September, 1865, he was united in marriage to Miss Miriam Kinniman (a daughter of the oldest settler in the county), by whom he has three children, viz., John Wesley, born September 26, 1870; Effie Susan, born September 3, 1872; and Forrest Edwards, born September 22, 1880. Mr. Williams is a member of the Christian Church, and although taking an active interest in the welfare of his State and county, has never taken an active part in politics.

They have 280 acres under cultivation and are devoting their attention principally to the cultivation of trees, tame grasses, etc., besides cattle-raising, having several clear Durham bulls, and intend raising cattle for breeding purposes only. Since December, 1880, they have improved and planted a beautiful orchard and proven themselves two of the best stockmen in the State. Natives of Baltimore, and for sixteen years residents of Piatt County, Ill. They came to Kansas in 1880.

FALL RIVER.

Fall River is located in the extreme southwest of the county four miles west of the line between Greenwood and Wilson Counties, and a half-mile north of the south line of Greenwood County. It was laid out late in the fall of 1879 by the Fall River Town Company, and covers a space of a little more than 160 acres, although the lands of the Town Com.

pany were more than double that amount and embraced eighty acres in Elk County. Although but three years old, the town is in a way much older, its first citizens and many of its buildings being removed from Charleston, one of the oldest towns of the county, and located two and one-half miles northwest of the present town.

The first building erected on the town site is the residence of J. M. Edmiston, and was built by Andrew Bergstrom in October, 1879. This was soon followed by the hardware store of Romig Brothers and the Fall River House, built by George Bulkley, Secretary of the Town Company, and one of the chief promoters of the town. About this time a part of Beard's Block, the post office building and the residence of Albert Allen were removed from Charleston to Fall River. The same fall, W. D. Marr built a house and blacksmith shop, and a Mr. Reddington put up the old livery stable. In February, 1880, the firm of Ritz & Putnam opened the first general store. The same month, the post office was opened, with George Bulkley, the present incumbent, as Postmaster. The first physician in the new town was J. J. Lemon who was soon followed by B. F. Pugh and Andrew Edmiston. A. M. Hunter, who came in 1881, is the sole representative of the legal profession. The St. Louis & San Francisco Railway ran their first train to Fredonia on the evening of Saturday, December 13, 1879, and the next day opened the depot and telegraph office.

The Town Company, which has been the chief element in evolving Fall River, was formed on November 21, 1879, with B. F. Hobart as President, and George Bulkley, Secretary and Treasurer. The company still remains in its original form with the substitution of C. M. Congdon for B. F. Hobart as President.

Fall River is located on a broad level near the bank of Fall River, from which the town takes its name. On all sides of it rise gentle slopes, which should protect it from the effects of violent storms. To the north are the famous salt springs, from which in early times a large supply of salt was procured, three barrels of water yielding one of salt. This salt was sent to the Territorial Fair in 1862, and carried off the premium offered for the best salt exhibited. Near this spring is another reputed to have excellent qualities for the restoration of weak or inflamed eyes. It may reasonably be expected that at some day in the near future these overlooked bonanzas will be turned to profitable account.

The Fall River House was built as soon as the town was laid out, and occupied on November 23, 1879, by its owner, George Bulkley. It has fifteen rooms and cost $2,000. It is the only hotel in the town fitted to meet the demands of commercial trade.

The first school taught in Fall River was a subscription one gotten up by B. F. McVay in 1881. The following spring a public school was taught in a rented room, by L. H. Johnson, and a class of sixty gathered together. No attempt was made to have a fall term in 1882, as the new school building was not completed. This building is now under contract to be finished in December, 1882. It will have two rooms and accommodations for over 120 scholars, and will cost when complete $2,000.

The town now has a population of nearly 300, and is growing rapidly, new buildings being constantly in course of construction. Its industries are represented by three general, two hardware and four grocery stores, one hotel, meat market, wagon shop and livery, one drug store, one furniture maker, one millinery store, one billiard hall, one harness shop and two blacksmith shops. All of these establishments are doing a thriving business.

LOCAL MATTERS.

Fall River has as yet no church building, although three societies have a recognized membership. In 1881, an effort was made severally by the Baptist, Methodist and Christian Church societies for the erection of a church and parsonage. Lots were donated to each for use as sites, but none accomplished any construction except the Baptists, who built a parsonage. This is now used as a dwelling. The Methodists and Baptists have held meetings with a certain degree of regularity, but discontinued them in the fall of 1882. The Christian society hold meetings at the schoolhouse near the former site of Charleston, under Rev. T. A. Fancher. With the completion of the new school building will probably come a renewal of interest in all denominations and a revival of stated services.

The Fall River Times was first issued on September 8, 1881. At that time the paper was owned, edited and published by N. Powell, and was a seven-column folio. On April 20, 1882, the editorship was transferred to J. A. Somerby, and on September 16, of the same year, he leased the entire business, Mr. Powell going to Fredonia, Wilson County, to establish a Democratic paper. The Times still retains its original form ; is Independent in political matters, and is published on Thursday of each week. It has a circulation of three hundred and fifty.

Greenwood Lodge, No. 163, A., F. & A. M., was organized on October 5, 1875, at Charleston, and removed on the completion of the new hall to Fall River. Its officers at the time of organization were as follows: J. M. Fedrick, W. M.; D. W. Sears, S. W.; G. W. Donart, J. W.; I. Headley, Secretary; A. Thompson, Treasurer. The lodge has now a membership of over forty, and the following officers: W. H. Parton, W. M.; P. G. Greegh, S. W.; J. D. Allen, J. W.; J. A. Ravenscroft, pro tem. and acting Secretary; W. D. Marr, Treasurer. Meetings are held on Saturday on or before the full moon, in the hall jointly owned by this society and the Odd Fellows.

S.; Thomas Munson, Treasurer. Meetings are held on Friday of each week, in the hall owned jointly by the Odd Fellows and Masons. This hall is newly erected, being completed in the summer of 1881, at a cost of $1,700.

G.; B. Wade, Q.; W. A. Noakes, Chaplain; Charles Wickersham, Secretary. Meetings are held in Johnson's Hall, on the first Saturday after each full moon and every two weeks thereafter. The post numbers thirty-three.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

J. D. ALLEN, farmer, Section 12, Town 28, Range 12, P. O. Fall River, and one of the old settlers of this portion of Greenwood County, was born August 15, 1838, in Manitou County, Mo., and was engaged in farming until 1861, when he came to Kansas and remained a year in Shawnee County ; thence to Colorado, then to Atchison County, Kan., and finally located here in 1866, on a farm of 272 acres on above named section ; 160 acres are under cultivation and being bottom lands, his grain yield has been very good. For several years he was engaged in the cattle trade, but now has only about 100 head. In 1870, Mr. Allen bought the Fall River mill property, situated on the river bank and about two miles from Fall River City. The mill had been built in 1866, by Mr. M. Swords, but Mr. Allen rebuilt and enlarged it, putting in new machinery, etc. It contains three run of stone, the motive power being a turbine water wheel, and has a capacity of grinding fifty barrels of flour and 200 bushels of corn daily, and is in charge of Mr. Clift, who is an experienced practical miller. When Mr. Allen first settled here, Humboldt was the nearest supply depot and in 1866–67, corn was sold at $3.50 per bushel and flour at $9.50 per hundred. March 28, 1861, Mr. Allen married Miss Mary E. Clogston. They have five children, viz.: Minerva, born March 14, 1862 ; Emma, born December 5, 1863 ; John and Martha, who were born September 27, 1868 ; and Lewis, born August 9, 1871. In addition to his farm before mentioned, Mr. Allen owns twenty acres and residence in vicinity of the mill and eighty acres about three miles east of town. His mill and other property are fully insured. He is a charter member of Charleston Lodge, A., F. & A. M., and was Treasurer of School Board a number of years, having been almost constantly one of the Board of School Directors.

GEORGE BULKLEY, Postmaster, is a native of Greene County, N. Y., and was born in 1818. He received but a common school education and commenced life as a merchant's clerk. In 1845, he went to Wisconsin, locating first in Elkhorn and afterward in Walworth County, doing business in both counties as a merchant, banker, etc., for twenty-five years. In 1870, he came to this State, settling in Neodesha, Wilson County, where, in conjunction with other pursuits, he for several years kept the Neodesha Hotel, and in 1878, sold out his hotel and other interests. When the St. Louis & Santa Fé Railroad was being surveyed, he was appointed to select a suitable site for a town, as near half way as possible between Severy and Fredonia, on the border line between the counties of Greenwood and Wilson. Upon the re-survey of the road and lands being broken upon this side of the river, Mr. Bulkley selected the present site of Fall River and at once made arrangements for the organizing of a town company. He is now Secretary of that company, Messrs. Hobart and Condon, the bankers of Oswego, being the principal shareholders. Mr. Bulkley is their agent and his own in loaning money, etc., and is general railroad land agent. While in Wisconsin, Mr. Bulkley was Deputy Internal Revenue Collector, and upon the settling of Fall River, was appointed Postmaster, February, 1880. He has a fine two-story frame residence, which commands a fine view of adjacent country. He has one son, who is now in New London, Conn., as Secretary to Col. Barlow, in the Department of United States Government Engineer Corps.

W. E. CASE, of Brown & Case, general merchants, is a native of Jackson County, Ind., born in 1848. He is one of the earliest settlers, not only of Fall River, but also of Kansas, as he came to the State with his father in 1852, Mr. Case the Elder being then an Indian trader and Government agent of the Sac and Fox tribes. December, 1881, Mr. Case opened the first store in Fall River, and in March, 1882, he associated with him as partner William McBrown. The firm carry a very heavy and well-assorted stock of general merchandise, their dry-goods department being very full. Value of stock in trade, $10,000, insured for $6,000. They occupy the lower part of the large building erected by the Odd Fellows and Masons, but are now building a very fine two-story stone building with iron front, costing $4,000 ; dimensions 80x24 feet. In addition to their mercantile interests, the firm are large stock and grain dealers and shippers. Mr. Case is married and has two children. Owns fine residence in town. He is a member of the Masonic and Odd Fellows organizations and one of the leading business men of Salt Springs Township.

LEWIS CLOGSTON, farmer, Sections 17 and 18, P. O. Fall River, is one of the leading farmers of this portion of the State, and one of the first settlers of Elk County. He is a native of West Virginia, but was raised in Washington County, Ohio, where in 1839, he married Miss Frances Kepple. His three children are J. B. Clogston, of Eureka (mentioned elsewhere in these pages), Mary E., now Mrs. J. D. Allen, born March 8, 1844, and Kitty J., now Mrs. E. Brockenshaw of this township, born December 9, 1859. Mr. Clogston was a brick-maker in his youth, and worked at it many years. He came to Kansas May 1, 1861, and located in Tecumseh, Shawnee County, until 1866, when he removed to Elk County, and was the first County Commissioner elected there, and the first settler of Longton Township. He has always been a strong Republican, and in fact was one of the refugees from Missouri. He having first intended settling in that State, but his voting for Lincoln as President made him a marked man in that community. He sold his farm in Elk County and purchased his present one of 208 acres in this county in 1881. He has 100 acres under cultivation, and being of opinion that to insure success, the farmer should first cultivate his land before his crops, he has been always very successful. His wheat yield has been twenty-five, and corn fifty bushels per acre, on an average for the past twelve years. He has a fine residence and orchard, and is one of the very few who have found it pay to raise clover, and believes that almost any grain or seed can be raised in Kansas if the land is first well tilled.

S. M. DIXON, farmer, Section 36, P. O. Fall River, was born in Edgar County, Ill., in 1842, and was educated in Ohio, whither his father removed in 1856. He has a good frame residence and substantial outbuildings, all insured, a good orchard, and so far has made corn and millet his principal crops. In February, 1868, at Terre Haute, Ind., he married Miss Caroline Random, who has borne him eight children, four of whom are living. Mr. Dixon varies the monotony of farm life by taking contracts for building, etc., and is a member of Charleston Lodge, No. 161, I. O. O. F. He is also a member of Fall River Post, No. 112, G. A. R., and was its first commander.

He resumed his trade in his native State until 1870, when he went to Cumberland County, Ill., and engaged in farming. While there, in 1871, he married Miss Martha E. Eaton. Mr. Edmiston was subsequently attacked with hemorrhage of the lungs, and compelled to resign and return home. While convalescent, hearing that the rebel Morgan was approaching, Mr. Edmiston mounted and warned the farmers and others in the vicinity of the expected raid, and upon returning from his errand was met and taken prisoner by the guerrilla chief, who however, released him next day, but retained his horse. Soon afterward his father, Mr. Andrew Edmiston, had a similar experience. In 1867, he with his father removed to Kansas, and located in New Albany, Wilson County, and for a time engaged in farming, but he shortly afterward went to Elk Falls, where he opened a general store, and where he was twice elected Justice of the Peace. GARDNER BROS., hardware merchants. These gentlemen are natives of Henderson County, Ky., and in 1863, removed with their parents to Jersey County, Ill., where their father engaged in farming, remaining there until 1870, when the family removed to Pleasant Valley Township, Wilson County, Kan., Mr. S. B. Gardner (their father), locating upon an improved farm of 160 acres. In 1878, the brothers, W. J. and C. B., engaged in the hardware business in Altoona, Wilson County, and in 1880, sold out, and removed to Fall River, where they at once built and opened their present store. Their stock is valued at from $1,200 to $1,500, and as they are practical tinsmiths and plumbers are kept constantly busy. Both gentlemen are yet unmarried, and in addition to their store, own several town lots and good residence; buildings and stock insured. During the war, Mr. William J. Gardner was a private in Company E, Fourteenth Illinois Infantry, having enlisted before he was sixteen years of age, and was mustered out at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., in September, 1865. He is a charter member and Adjutant of Fall River Post, No. 112, G. A. R. The firm of Gardner Bros. is one of the most enterprising and successful in the embryo city.

PETER GREEGH, builder and contractor, is a native of Sweden, and came to the United States in 1869, remaining about a year in Galesburg, Ill., when he came to Kansas, locating first at Ottawa, then to Greenwood via Elk County. He is a practical builder, and has erected almost all the stone residences in the Fall River Valley, notably the large two-story stone schoolhouse in Fall River and the stone stores, he and Mr. Wash Light erecting a store with iron front during the summer of 1883, at a cost of $1,500. He owns his residence and several town lots, and is Secretary of both the Odd Fellow and Masonic Lodges here.

N. HASKINS, farmer, Section 2, P. O. Fall River, was born in Oswego County, N. Y., in 1828, and in 1837, his parents removed to Michigan, and seven years later, to Indiana, where he enlisted at Valparaiso during the second year of the war, in Company A, Seventh Indiana Cavalry; said company and regiment being afterward consolidated with the One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Cavalry. With the exception of Grenada and Guntown, he was principally scouting in Mississippi and Tennessee hunting guerrillas, and was mustered out in July, 1865. He returned to Indiana, and resumed his trade of plasterer and mason until 1869, when he came to Kansas, locating on a farm on Fall River, situated fifteen miles from Eureka, where he remained until 1881, when he sold out and removed to his present location. In 1850, he married Miss E. J. Childers. They have four children living, who are married, and reside in this county. While residing in Salem Township, he served for several years as one of the Board of School Directors. He is a charter member of Fall River Post, G. A. R.

A. M. HUNTER, lawyer, was born in Williamson County, Ill., in 1841, and worked on the farm until he enlisted in Company I, One Hundred and Twenty-eighth Illinois Infantry, in the fall of 1862. The regiment was soon after consolidated with the Ninth Illinois, and in Company F, of the latter, he remained, participating in all its active service as part of the Seventeenth Army Corps, with the exception of some time spent as Clerk in the Quartermaster's Department, until mustered out July 9, 1865. Upon leaving the army, he went to Illinois, and taught school in several counties of that State, reading law meantime, and in 1876 entered the law office of Crebbs & Conger, at Carmi, White County, Ill. In 1879, Mr. Hunter came to Kansas, and taught school in Butler County, until 1881, when he was admitted to the bar at Wichita, and in October of that year came to Fall River and began the practice of his profession. While in White County, Ill., he was once elected Justice of the Peace. Mr. Hunter is married, and has five children, from eight months to thirteen years of age. In addition to his law practice, he is a Notary Public and the Agent of Messrs. Crippen, Lawrence & Co., of Salina, as money broker, loan and land agent. He is a member of the Christian Church, and of the Masonic and Grand Army of the Republic Lodges.

L. H. JOHNSON, Justice of the Peace, Notary Public, etc., is a native of Shelbyville, Ill., where he was born in 1855, and when six years of age, his parents removed to the town of Effingham, same State, where he was educated and subsequently taught school there. He came to Kansas in 1878, and engaged in school teaching in Elk and Greenwood Counties, locating in Fall River in 1881. He was in February, 1882, elected Justice of the Peace. In November, 1882, he married Miss Emma E. Short, of this town. He owns two lots, residence and store here, and is a member of the A., F. & A. M. and the I. O. O. F. He represents three fire and two life insurance companies, and is the agent of the Kansas Loan & Trust Company, of Topeka, and is doing a good business in that respect here. Mr. Johnson is studying law, and will no doubt prove one of Fall River's solid, as he is one of her rapidly rising, citizens.

MILTON KIRKPATRICK, farmer, Section 1, P. O. Charleston, was born in Parke County, Ind., in 1835, and in 1844 removed with his parents to Bond County, Ill., where he, on August 20, 1861, enlisted in Company I, Thirtieth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was at the taking of Forts Donelson and Henry, and the siege of Corinth (second siege); shortly after which he was seized with hemorrhage of the lungs, and upon recovery was assigned to duty in the Quartermaster's Department, in which he continued until mustered out in October, 1864. He returned to farming in Illinois, and in 1870 came to Kansas, settling in Elk County, where he was Constable for two years; and in 1881 removed to his present farm on Section 1, this township. In agriculture, corn has been his principal crop; but he has recently given his attention to stock-raising. He has a family of five children. He is a charter member of Fall River Post, Grand Army of the Republic.

WILLIAM McBROWN, farmer and capitalist, Sections 33, 27, 34 and 28, P. O. Fall River, is a native of New Hampshire, and when twelve years of age his parents removed to Wisconsin; and in 1857 he came to Kansas with Prof. Goss, and settled at Neosho Falls, where he made his home until 1866. Being on a visit to Wisconsin when the war broke out, he, in August, 1861, enlisted in Company C, First Wisconsin Cavalry, and September 12, 1862, he, with a portion of his regiment, was captured, and sent on parole to Camp Randall, in Wisconsin, where he was discharged; and, returning to Kansas, again enlisted in August, 1863, in Company F, Ninth Kansas Cavalry, and was with this regiment in Missouri and Arkansas, doing frontier duty until mustered out July, 1865, by general order, after the surrender of Lee. In March, 1866, Mr. McBrown located in Wilson County, and opened a store at Jackson Mills, and engaging in the buying and selling of stock, grain, etc., having at one time three stores running, having opened one at Fredonia, and another in this county. Mr. McBrown has one of the best improved farms in Greenwood County; it embraces not less than 1,700 acres, and Fall River waters every quarter-section of it. Lying in a beautiful valley it looks, even in the dull light of a winter's afternoon, a very Eden. He built his residence on Section 33, in 1872; and his orchard numbers over 800 well-bearing fruit trees of all kinds. He has 590 acres under cultivation, his corn and wheat yield being excellent. His stock usually consists of from 350 to 450 head of cattle, 25 horses, and 200 to 300 hogs (Berkshire). He has two fine thoroughbred Durham bulls, and crosses them with the one-eighth to one-fourth bred native cows. He has large cattle pens and weighing scales in Fall River, near the St. L. & St. F. Railroad, and is an extensive shipper of live stock, with the exception of sheep, which he does not handle. All of his buildings are well insured, and his taxes are upwards of $400 per annum. In 1870 Mr. McBrown married Miss Maggie Mills, who has borne him five children, four of whom survive, as follows, viz.: Bertram, born July, 1873; Bertha, born February, 1876; Frank, born November, 1878, and Hattie B., born July, 1881. Whilst in Wilson County he was elected County Treasurer; and, although preferring to keep out of the political arena, and give his undivided attention to his large business interests, it is scarcely probable that the people of the county will permit him to do so. He is a Royal Arch Mason, and a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and a liberal supporter of every measure brought forward for the educational, religious or commercial welfare of the community.

WILLIAM D. MARR, blacksmith, is a native of Forfarshire, Scotland, and was born December, 23, 1849. He learned and worked at his trade in his native land, and in 1871 came to the United States, locating in Coyville, Kan., where he remained two years, when he removed to Charleston, this county; and where he, in May, 1874, married Miss Rhuanna Cordell. They have but one child—Charles R., born in May, 1875. Upon the building of the town of Fall River he removed here, and built his workshop and residence, a two-story frame, costing $1,500, and he has since built another, which he has rented. He is one of the Board of School Directors, and Clerk of the township. He is a member of the I. O. O. F. and A., F. & A. M., and takes a prominent part in the welfare of the town and county.

JAMES L. NOAKES, farmer, Section 15, P. O. Fall River, was born in 1828, in Crawford County, Ark., and moved to Missouri with his parents in 1834, locating in Newton County, and was engaged in farming until June 27, 1861, when he enlisted in Company A, Twenty-seventh Regiment Missouri Cavalry, and served until mustered out in 1862, by order of Gen. Halleck. He afterwards served a year in the Missouri State Militia. Came to Kansas in 1871, locating on Section 15, his present residence. Of his 160 acres, one-half is under cultivation; and he raises corn, castor beans and flax. He has about forty head of cattle, and a good orchard. He is married, and has three daughters, all married. Mr. Noakes has proven indisputably that the cultivation of the castor upon upland soil can be made remunerative. He is a member of Fall River Post, Grand Army of the Republic.

B. F. PUGH, M. D., was born in Grant County, Ind., in 1842, and in due time attended the Cincinnati Medical College, graduating from that institution in 1867, with the degree of M. D. He at once commenced the practice of his profession in his native county, and remained there until the summer of 1878, when he removed to Charleston, this county, and was one of those who moved from there to Fall River upon the building of the latter. April 12, 1864, Dr. Pugh was married to Miss E. N. Taughinbough; but one child is now left them, viz., Lydia E., who was born October 21, 1866. The Doctor resides on Merchants avenue, and has established a lucrative and large practice, which is constantly increasing. He is the examining physician of the F. & M. B. Assurance Company, and a member of the Masonic fraternity.

O. W. ROMIG, pioneer hardware store, is the senior partner of the firm of Romig & Sweet, and, in company with his brother, Mr. D. S. Romig, now of Independence, Kan., built the first store in Fall River, in October, 1879, at a cost of $400. He is a native of Waterloo, N. Y., but when six years of age, his parents removed to Indiana, and in 1860 to Muscatine, Iowa, where he acquired his business education, and in which town he remained until locating in Kansas, except six years which he spent in San Francisco, Cal. He first settled in Charleston, this county, in April, 1879, and engaged in hardware business, but upon the formation of the Fall River Town Company, he was among the first to remove here as stated. January 1, 1881, Mr. Anson Sweet became associated with him as partner under the firm name of Romig & Sweet, and in 1883 they have built, almost contiguous to their old stand, a handsome stone store with iron front, at a cost of $1,700, and 24x60 feet clear inside. In addition to their large and varied stock of general hardware, they hav a full line of agricultural implements and machines, the stock being valued at $4,500 to $5,000, their annual sales being about $16,000 to $17,000. Both buildings and stock are fully insured. Mr. Romig is a member of the I. O. O. F. and A., F. & A. M., and is one of the wide-awake young business men of Kansas.

ISAAC C. SHARPE, farmer, Section 9, P. O. Fall River, was born in 1847, in Sangamon County, Ill., and after leaving school worked on a farm until nineteen years of age, when he learned the trade of blacksmithing, at which he worked until disabled by a kick from a horse, while engaged in shoeing it. Upon regaining strength, he removed in 1874 to Southwest Missouri, where he resumed farming, and in November of that year he married Miss Tabitha S. Miller. They have three children living—Maggie, born January 11, 1876; Charles, born April 3, 1877, and Willie I., born November 17, 1881. In 1879, Mr. S. moved to Kansas, locating upon 160 acres on above section, to which he has just added forty acres on Section 9. He has about eighty acres under cultivation, raising corn principally. Has now 53 head of cattle, fourteen hogs, four horses and speaks well of the State of Kansas, his health having greatly improved since his residence here.

WILLIAM SHARP, farmer, Section 10, P. O. Fall River, was born in 1805, in Tennessee, and clearly remembers the war of 1812. He removed from Arkansas in 1857 to Tecumseh Township, Shawnee County, and settled upon a farm some five miles from Topeka on the Kaw River, where he remained until 1868, when he removed to his present home. He has 160 acres, of which 70 are under plow, and he has raised corn, wheat and oats to good advantage. He has had twelve children, ten of whom survive, and he has fifteen grand and four great-grandchildren. During the war two of his boys were in the Union army. Mr. Sharp's mental and physical faculties are still clear and sound, as are those of his aged companion and wife, and from his excellent memory he can recall and tell many interesting reminiscences of frontier life.

J. A. SOMERBY, editor and proprietor of the Fall River Times, was born in Berlin, Washington Co., Vt., March 26, 1821, and when eighteen years old went to Montpelier, where he learned the printer's trade, afterward completing it at St. Johnsbury, Vt., and subsequently worked upon the Boston Post and Bee. He was in the newspaper business for many years in his native State on his own account, and in 1854 opened a job office in Madison, Wis., and later conducted several newspapers; finally, in 1875, ran the North Star Hotel, in the town of Viroqua, Wis., which he conducted for two years and then sold out, and then opened a drug store, which he ran for two years, when he removed his business to Faribault, Minn. We next find him in Elmwood, Ill., conducting the Herald and Chronicle, which he bought out and again sold in 1876, and came to Kansas, locating at Howard, Elk County, where he started the Kansas Rural as a four column weekly quarto. In July, 1881, he came to Fall River as foreman of the Fall River Times, subsequently buying out the paper. He has greatly improved it. Its tone is independent in politics, and it has 400 subscribers. We have found him an energetic, courteous and educated gentleman, thoroughly up to his business, and are much indebted to him for many facts and data and many courtesies extended to our staff of compilers and agents. By a tornado June 28, 1865, in Viroqua, Wis., all his property, including building and bookstore, newspaper office, etc., was entirely destroyed causing him a loss of several thousands of dollars.

CHARLES SPRINGLE, watch-maker and jeweler, was born in New Orleans, La., in 1846, and removed with his parents to Brownsville, Nemaha Co., Neb., in 1856, and in March, 1863, he enlisted in Company C, Seventh Iowa Cavalry, and engaged in frontier service. Upon one occasion, he, and forty-eight men of his regiment were besieged at Jewelsburg, on the Platte River, Col., by 1,600 Sioux and Cheyennes, and were relieved on the third day by reinforcements from Fort Cottonwood. While in the service he received a gunshot wound in the right knee, which has rendered him a cripple for life. He was mustered out at Fort Leavenworth in June, 1866, and is now a United States pensioner. After leaving the army he engaged for about six years in grist milling in Rulo, Richardson County, Neb., and in 1874 he removed to this State, locating at Neodesha, where he built and ran a grist mill for two years, when he sold out and moved to New Albany, where he opened a general store, which he disposed of in the spring of 1881, and in the same year, locating at Fall River, he opened another store, his interest in which he subsequently sold to Mr. Willett, and has established himself as the only watch-maker and jeweler in the city. His business is good and constantly improving, as the town becomes larger. Mr. Springle is a widower, with one little girl of five years, who resides with his parents at New Albany. He is a member of New Albany Lodge, No. 91, I. O. O. F., and charter member of Fall River Post, No. 112, G. A. R.

ANSON SWEET, proprietor Fall River House, is a native of St. Joe County, Mich., and was born June 23, 1844, and in November, 1863, at Mendon, Mich., enlisted in Company C, Nineteenth Michigan Infantry, the regiment being in Second Brigade, Third Division, Twentieth Corps. He participated in the engagements at Resaca, Cassville, Lookout Mountain, Kenesaw Mountain, Buzzard's Roost, etc., and at Peach Tree Creek was wounded severely in left temple by bullet, laying him up three months. He was mustered out at Jackson, Mich., July, 1865, and soon after he opened a grocery store in Mendon, which he sold out in 1866, and removed to Vernon County, Mo., where he remained until 1869, when he came to Kansas and located upon 197 acres, situated upon Sections 9 and 10, Spring Grove Township. He engaged very successfully in farming and cattle dealing, and in November, 1881, purchased the Fall River House for $2,000. This hotel had been erected in October, 1879, by Mr. Bulkley, and since it has come into the possession of Mr. Sweet, he has enlarged and improved it. It now contains about twenty rooms, and they, with the "cuisine" and general "menage" are excellent. Mr. S. has rented his farm, and in addition to his hotel interests, has, since January 1, 1881, been in partnership with Mr. Romig, in the pioneer hardware store. His cattle and stock interests are also large for this section, his annual shipments being from thirty-five to fifty car loads. December 24, 1868, he married Miss Florentina Klontz. There are three children, viz.: Flora, Lucretia and Ada. In 1876-77-78, Mr. S. was Justice of the Peace, and has been School Treasurer for six years. He is a member of Charleston Lodge, No. 161, I. O. O. F., and of Greenwood Lodge, No. 163, A., F. & A. M.

MICHAEL SWORD, farmer, Sections 12 and 13, P. O. Fall River. This gentleman was born in Kentucky, in 1815, and is the pioneer settler of this region. He, with two of his brothers, located in Jasper County, Mo., in 1839, and he assisted in the removal of the Osage Indians, upward of 5,000 in number, from Osage River, Mo., to their reservation in Kansas. This being successfully accomplished, he returned to Missouri, and engaged in farming, trading and milling, and in 1857 built a mill on the site of that now owned by Mr. Allen on the banks of Fall River, Kan., he having secured the lands for that purpose from the Indians with consent of the Government. Returning to Missouri in order to close up his affairs there, ere bringing his family and effects to his new location, he was taken ill, and his health remaining poor, he was unable to return to Kansas until 1860, when he found his buildings had been destroyed by fire. He rebuilt the house and, locating here, remained until shortly after the breaking-out of the rebellion, when finding himself isolated, and in consideration of his family's wishes, he removed to Coffey County, where he engaged in milling until the close of the war, when he returned to Fall River and built the mill which he ran until it was rented to his son Josiah, and after this sold to Mr. J. D. Allen. He has been thrice married, and has been the father of twelve children, and has been made the grandfather of twenty-nine and the great-grandfather of four representatives of the human race; his first marriage occurred in Kentucky, 1835, and he was united to his present helpmate in 1862. At present he has only sixty-five acres of his farm under cultivation, yielding an average for past ten years of fifty bushels of corn, and twenty-two of wheat. Mr. Sword was Justice of the Peace from 1866 to 1872, his present residence having been built in the latter year; he has always led a life of vigorous activity, and yet bears his years as if he was still intent upon outliving many more of his descendants.

CHARLES TIBBITS, farmer, Sections 7 and 12, P. O. Fall River, was born in 1852 in Waushara County, Wis., his father, Mr. William Tibbits, being one of the early settlers of that region, and who removed to Kansas with his family in 1869, locating upon a 200-acre farm on above sections. Since his decease the farm has been worked by the subject of this sketch, his widowed mother residing with him; one hundred and twenty acres are under cultivation, with an average wheat yield of twenty-three bushels per acre, and corn fifty bushels. About sixty head of cattle are usually kept. The orchard contains upward of 100 fruit trees; the residence, a well built two-story house, is situated on the slope of a hill. Mr. Tibbits is married and has two children; he has been Treasurer of his School District for several years and in 1881 was elected Treasurer of the township, and informs us that the receipts for 1882 have been $750, and expenditures $608. Mr. William H. Tibbits is a painter, is married and resides in Fall River.

J. E. WALTERS, Assistant County Surveyor and Principal of Fall River School, was born in 1849 in Scotland County, Mo., and is descended paternally from an old English family of that name, who came to America with the celebrated Daniel Boone. Mr. Walters' father was a large slave-holder in Missouri, and came to Kansas with his family in 1854, locating in Bourbon County, and shortly afterward, owing to his well known Pro-slavery principles, his house and other buildings were burned by the Free-State men in 1856. The elder Walters returned to Missouri, and in 1861 entered the rebel army, but his son, the subject of this sketch, remained in Kansas, and during the winter of 1858-59 worked for his board, although but nine years of age, and having early imbibed a strong antipathy to slavery (having once been severely punished for teaching a slave to read), he enlisted when only thirteen years of age at Davenport, Iowa, May 13, 1862, in Company G, Twelfth Iowa Infantry, and continued in active service throughout the entire war, re-enlisting almost immediately upon the expiration of each term of service, and being successively in company and regiment named above, also in Company F, Thirty-sixth Iowa Infantry, Company F, Eighth Iowa Cavalry, and Company G, Forty-sixth Iowa Infantry, being finally mustered out at Duvall's Bluff, Ark., October 28, 1865. He was wounded at the battle of Peach Tree Creek, by rifle ball, in right shoulder, and with exception of the short time which he was thereby compelled to spend in hospital, was constantly in active service, participating in upward of thirty regular engagements. The course taken by his father in espousing the lost cause, entailed the loss of his property in Missouri and Kansas, which was confiscated by the United States Government, and upon leaving the army Mr. Walters at once proceeded to teach school in Appanoose County, Iowa, where he remained upward of four years. With the exception of what assistance he had received from his mother in his childhood he has been entirely self-taught, studying while in the army, and also while teaching others. In 1870, he located in Washington County, Kan., and engaged for several months in teaching and surveying, then removing to Eureka, where he was employed as clerk in the drug store of Wassam & Smith, and in April, 1876, was elected County Superintendent of Public Instruction, and upon the expiration of his term of office resumed teaching, becoming Principal of the school here, and also Assistant County Surveyor in 1882. Mr. Walters has been thrice married, and has been the father of nine children, four of whom are now living. His family reside in Madison Township, this county, where he has property. He is a charter member of Fall River Post, No. 112, G. A. R., and also member of the Odd Fellows and Masonic bodies. He has recently been appointed as United States Surveyor, and during the summer of 1883 will probably be engaged in the survey of the land appropriated by the Government for a reservation for the Ute Indians. Mr. Walters is an enthusiastic student of the natural sciences, and has made some rare discoveries in Kansas fauna. In the American Journal of Arts and Sciences of February, 1880, on pages 156 and 157, Prof. Williams, of Cornell University, he has an interesting article on a rare species of "Proetus, P. longicaudus," found by Mr. Walters on the banks of West Creek in Greenwood County. Mr. Walters also discovered in the Eastern portion of Greenwood and the northwest of Woodson Counties, covering hundreds of acres, a species of tree fern, the "Sigillaria" of naturalists, some of which were six feet in diameter, which are, according to Prof. Hay of Junction City, the largest specimens yet known to the world of science. Mr. W. has contributed to Cornell University (Ithica, N. Y.), and to several Kansas institutions, many fine and rare geological and mineralogical specimens. In addition to which he has a cabinet of over 2,000 fine specimens.

WILLIAM Q. WICKERSHAM, farmer, Sections 18 and 13, Township 28, Range 12, P. O. Fall River, was born in Columbiana County, Ohio, in 1836, and shortly afterward his parents moved to Stark County, the same State. In 1859, he removed to Kansas, locating upon a farm in Anderson County, and in September, 1862, he enlisted in Company G, Twelfth Kansas Infantry, at Paola, and was mustered in as private. The regiment was detailed to escort duty in Kansas and the Indian country, and he, with his company, participated in all its active service, including the Camden campaign and the engagement at Prairie De Anne and Jenkins' Ferry. He was mustered out as Sergeant in Lawrence in July, 1865. Soon after this Mr. W. took a trip to Ohio, and spent the winter of 1867-68 with a surveying party on the plains, and in the spring of 1868 he settled upon his present farm in this county. He has eighty acres on Section 18, Township 28, Range 12, upon which he resides, and sixty acres of which are under cultivation. His orchard contains upwards of 300 fruit trees, on Sections 7 and 12; he owns 160 acres improved, fifty acres being under cultivation, and a residence and orchard. This latter farm he purchased in 1877, and is now rented. In addition to these two farms he has fifty acres on Section 13, and Mr. W. owns eighty acres in Elk County. Mr. W's. tax receipts for 1882, was $112. His corn yield is 45 to 60, wheat 20 to 30, and oats 40 bushels per acre. Flax he finds does not pay. His stock at present consists of 11 horses, 60 head of cattle and as many hogs. There are forty acres of excellent timber on his land; as the Fall River runs through his farm, it is well watered. May 27, 1874, he married Miss Kate Gilbreath, a native of Ohio, by whom he has four children, all living. Mr. W. was the first Treasurer of Salt Springs Township. He was also elected Justice of the Peace in 1869, and has been Clerk of School District No. 31 for many years. He is a charter member of Fall River Post, No. 112, G. A. R., and was its first Adjutant, and is one of the leading agriculturists of this section.

MADISON.

The Madison of to-day is a new town on the Howard Branch of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway. Already it has a lusty life of its own; yet, back of it is a closed page. Young Madison is the child of Old Madison, and the parent town deserves a brief sketch before we pass to the new.

Early in 1872, a log house was put up in the timber northwest of the present town, and here E. Smith placed a stock of general merchandise, and did business with the settlers sprinkled over the surrounding country. Trade must have been better than expected, for shortly Green, Strails, Cunkle and Oglesby built houses and began to do business. Then came a quiet season, for the space on which the hamlet was located was too narrow for a very extended village. So matters stood when the railroad was built and New Madison came into existence.

Madison was laid out by the Madison Town Company, which was incorporated in June, 1879, with L. J. Cunkle President; S. J. Wells, Secretary, and W. Martindale, Treasurer. The first building erected in the new town was the residence of W. H. Green. Shortly after, the stores which had been in use in the old town, were removed to the new, and Green, Cunkle and Oglesby continued their respective businesses. The first marriage in the place was that of S. F. Wickler and Miss Alice Smith; the first child born was a daughter of James Butler; the first death that of George Ivy. Physicians were plentiful in the new town—Drs. L. J. & I. W. Cunkle and A. Stanly showing their shingles to a suffering public. Other professions gave in a representation from time to time, and now all are fairly represented.

A post office was opened at Old Madison at an early day, and T. B. McClure appointed Postmaster, a position which he retained until January 1, 1881, when W. O. Lunsford was appointed. The post office is located in the News building.

School privileges have been freely accorded to the children of both the old and new town, but a separate school building was not built until the new town was laid out. The present schoolhouse was then begun and rapidly completed. It is 26x36, and cost $1,100. Its first teacher was E. Walters, who was succeeded by G. W. Kendrick, the present Principal. Two departments are taught, the lower grade being in charge of a lady teacher. The school now numbers 126 scholars.

The town now has a population of 300 and is rapidly growing. There are two drug, two hardware and two general stores, three groceries, a restaurant, harness and shoe-shop, a millinery store, a meat market, carpenter-shop, hotel and grist-mill, the latter more particularly described already. A number of substantial residences are already built and more are in progress. Few towns of its age can look forward to a brighter future than Madison, and those who have felt the hearty hospitality of her citizens may well look on her encouragingly and wish her "God speed."

CHURCHES AND OTHER LOCAL MATTERS.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at this place was organized in the old town by Rev. H. P. Baker, and services were held with a good degree of regularity. Upon the completion of the schoolhouse in the new town, it was occupied for the services of this society until the completion of the church building. This structure, a neat wooden one, was built at a cost of $1,700, and was dedicated on October 22, 1882. The society now has a membership of 20, and is in charge of Rev. J. C. Hull.

A Sunday school, organized in the fall of 1879, has an average attendance of 60, and is in charge of G. W. Kendrick.

The Methodist Protestant Society was organized in the county, and held services there until the new town was built, when they removed to it, and now hold services in the Methodist Episcopal Church. The church has a membership of thirty-five and is in charge of Rev. A. A. McMurray.

The Madison News was started on May 2, 1879, by W. O. Lunsford, representing several parties desirous of promoting the growth of the town. At this time, it was a six-column folio (22x35), and as such it ran until January 1, 1882, when it was enlarged to a seven-column sheet. It has a circulation of 600 copies weekly, and is issued on Friday. The first few numbers of this sheet were issued in old Madison, but the real existence of the paper is one with that of the town it has materially helped to build up.

Madison Lodge, No. 196, A., F. & A. M., was organized in the fall of 1880, with a membership of ten, and the following officers: W. H. McKeaney, W. M.; W. Dunkerly, S. W.; Philip Hayes, Secretary: William Milner, Treasurer. The lodge now has a membership of sixteen, and the following officers: D. C. Callen, W. M.; Charles Moxley, S. W.; W. Dunkerley, J. W.; W. R. Phenis, Secretary; W. Milner, Treasurer. Meetings are held in the schoolhouse on Friday of each week, when the moon is full, and every two weeks thereafter.

Madison Lodge, No. 171, I. O. O. F., was organized in the fall of 1880, with a membership of eight, and the following officers: S. B. Green, N. G.; W. H. McKeaney, V. G.; W. S. Mason, Secretary; A. S. Stanley, Treasurer. The lodge now numbers thirty-six, and has the following officers: G. O. Lovett, N. G.; G. A. Abshire, V. G.; H. D. Porter, Secretary; W. H. Green, Treasurer. Meetings are held each Saturday evening in the schoolhouse. The property of the society consists of regalia to the value of $100, and $315 in cash.

The Madison Grist-Mill was built in the old town in 1878, and removed in 1881 to its present location in the east part of the new town. In 1882, it was sold by its builder, James Wilson, to Green & Harlan, who now run it. It has two run of buhr stones—one for wheat and one for corn—and can turn out 160 barrels of flour per twenty-four hours. Power is furnished by an engine of forty-five horse-power. The whole establishment is valued at $3,500.

The Strong House was built in 1880, by a stock company organized for that purpose, and known as the Madison Hotel Company. The officers of this company were S. V. Bitler, President; T. B. McClure, Secretary. Mr. G. O. Lovett has replaced Mr. McClure, but the company otherwise remains as originally formed. The building, which cost $3,000, is one of the best country hotels in Kansas.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES—MADISON TOWNSHIP.

W. S. BITLER, farmer and stock-raiser, Section 16, P. O. Madison, was born in Auglaize County, Ohio, in 1846, and is a son of Mr. Daniel Bitler, of Lyon County, who is mentioned elsewhere in this work. He came to Kansas with his father in 1866, and located in this county in March, 1880. Of his farm of 240 acres, ninety are under cultivation, with an average corn yield of fifty bushels to the acre, which is used principally for feeding stock. He, in partnership with his father, Daniel Bitler, of Lyon County, usually carries from 300 to 700 head of cattle, and sixty to seventy-five hogs. His shipments of the former average twenty to twenty-five car loads annually. His residence, a handsome two-story stone building, occupies a commanding position upon rising ground, and is insured against fire in the sum of $1,600; his barns, etc., for $500, whilst both farm buildings and residence are insured against the danger of a tornado in the sum of $1,000 more. In 1874, Mr. Bitler married Miss Arminda Keith, and of their five children but two survive—Ina, born November 22, 1879, and Ella, born December 22, 1881. Mr. Bitler is School Director for his district, and takes a warm interest in the welfare of his adopted State and county.

DANIEL D. BLAKELY, farmer, Section 2, P. O. Madison, was born in Hancock County, Ind., in 1844, and is now one of Greenwood County's early settlers. His father, Mr. Samuel Blakely, located in Jefferson County in 1857, and in 1858 moved to this county, locating upon the farm (now occupied by the subject of this sketch) of 160 acres, Section 2, Township 22, Range 11, ninety acres of which are at present under cultivation, with a yield of oats, thirty-five, and corn, forty-five to fifty bushels per acre, and an excellent orchard of 300 trees. Mr. B. has 140 head of cattle, forty hogs, and several horses and mules. During the war, he was a member of the State Militia. The log house built by his father upon his first locating here, is still in good condition, and is at present rented; the present Mr. B. having, in 1872, built a two-story frame residence, which he occupies with his family. Mr. Samuel Blakely died in February, 1878. Mr. Blakely married a daughter of Mr. J. R. Hensley, who came here from West Virginia in 1859, and owns a farm of 160 acres on Section 4, Township 22, Range 11, seventy acres of which are under cultivation. Mr. Hensley was one of the judges of the election of 1859, when all the votes cast in Madison Township only numbered thirteen. Mr. Blakely was Township Trustee in 1879–80, and has been a member of the School Board for the past thirteen years. His father was Justice of the Peace for many years, during the early history of the township.

S. BRUMBAUGH, farmer, Sections 22 and 28, P. O. Madison, is a descendant of the old Pennsylvania Dutch settlers, and was born in Miami County, Ohio, and has been a farmer from boyhood. He came to Kansas in 1870, and located upon his present improved farm, on Section 22, since which he has added 160 acres not yet improved on Section 28. He has one-third of the homestead farm under cultivation, and it is principally bottom land. His grain yield is very good, corn averaging sixty, and wheat eighteen bushels per acre. He has a fine orchard of 200 trees, and usually has about seventy-five head of cattle. In 1879, he built his present residence, which is one of the finest on the Verdigris River. It is a two-story frame structure, containing ten rooms, and cost upward of $1,500, and is situated upon a gentle slope, and the lawn in front is ornamented with some fine young evergreens; his barns, etc., are also superior to any in the county. Mr. B. was married in 1860, and has four children—La Fayette, born April 20, 1865, and now attending the agricultural college at Manhattan; Fidelia, now nineteen years of age, who also attended the Manhattan College one year; Viola Bell and Aminda V.

JAMES M. BUTLER is a native of Perry County, Ind., and was born in 1848. His father, A. J. Butler, moved from Munfordville, Ky., to Perry County, Ind., when he was eighteen years old. There his father was married to his mother, whose maiden name was Mary Inahan, a native of Indiana. In 1859, his father came to Kansas, and located upon a farm in Franklin County, near what is called Dutch Henry's Crossing, a locality well known to the partisans of John Brown, where he died in 1876. September 15, 1864, the subject of our sketch enlisted at Osawatomie in Company L, Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, and participated with his company in the operations against Price, and also in frontier and plains duty until he was taken ill and confined in the hospital at Fort Leavenworth until mustered out May 14, 1865. He returned to Franklin County, and in 1867 went to Lawrence, and from there to Butler County, where he remained until 1870, when he located upon a farm situated just across the county line of Lyon County. Here he remained until 1878–79, when he removed to this county, and at once opened a shop in Madison which he has since conducted. His uncle and brother reside in Butler County, and during the war times were members of the Tenth Kansas Regiment. Mr. B. was married August 9, 1874, and has four children. He owns his residence and shop in Madison, and is one of the first settlers of the new town. He is a clergyman of the first degree in the German Baptists, or, as they are more commonly called, Dunkards, and takes a great interest in everything that pertains to the welfare of the State and county.

He came to Kansas in 1869, and for the first three years located in Lyon County, and was engaged in stock-raising. In 1872, he bought his farm here, and built a fine two-story stone residence. The home farm is on Section 20, Township 22, Range 12, and contains ninety acres, thirty of which are under cultivation only, for corn; on Section 28, Township 22, Range 12, are 160 acres. There are 320 acres in Section 4, Township 22, Range 12, which are yet uncultivated. Mr. D. has devoted his attention principally to stock, and has usually from 150 to 175 high grade native cattle, mostly of his own raising. He raises annually about fifty calves from a pure Durham bull which he bought in Illinois, at a cost of $250. It is seven years old, and weighs 2,200 pounds. Mr. D.'s orchard contains over 200 apple and peach trees of the best varieties. In 1872, Mr. Dodge returned to Boston, where he married Miss Mary E. Hartz; they have five children, viz., Alice, William, Edward, Annie, three years of age, and an infant. Mr. D. is Clerk of the School Board, a P. G. and Per. Sec. of Madison Lodge, No. 171, I. O. O. F. and is now filling for the second time the office of Trustee of Madison Township, in which capacity he informs us that the average receipts of the township are about $700, and expenditures, chiefly on roads, are about $400. The total amount of taxable property in the Township in 1882 was $369,576, and there were only 114 tax-payers. In 1877, he married Mrs. A. Duncan, and during the following year purchased forty acres on Section 1, Township 22, Range 11, from the A., T. & S. F. R. R. Co., about one-half of which is now under cultivation. Upon both his farms are excellent orchards, containing in all about 500 good bearing trees, and both farms contain substantial frame residences and commodious barns. Mr. Dunkerly has but one child, yet in its infancy. He is a charter member and S. W. of Madison Lodge, No. 196, A., F. & A. M., and is a member of the School Board of this District, No. 1.

W. H. GREEN, merchant, etc., was one of the early settlers here, and his residence, which was moved from the old to the present town of Madison, was the first and for a short time the only house in town. He was born in 1844, in Miami County, Ohio, and enlisted at Covington, Ohio, August 16, 1862, in Company B, Forty-fourth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, and upon the expiration of his term of enlistment in 1864, re-enlisted in Company B, Eighth Ohio Cavalry. In 1867, Mr. Green came to Kansas, locating in this township where he engaged in farming until 1874, when he commenced business as general merchant, in the old town of Madison. In 1882, he purchased the grist mill of Mr. Wilson (built 1876), in Madison. It is a steam power (thirty-five horse) and has a capacity, with two run of stones, of eighty bushels of corn and forty to fifty barrels of flour per day, and is insured for $2,000. He is the owner of 880 acres in the county, divided into five farms, two of which are improved, one of them, which is situated two and a half miles from Madison and is rented, contains 360 acres, 115 of which are under cultivation, with an average corn yield of sixty-five bushels per acre. The other contains but eighty acres and is four miles from town, and well improved; both have good residences and outbuildings, insured. During the summer of 1883, Mr. G built upon the corner of Third and Main streets a fine two-story store of stone with iron front and plate-glass windows at a cost of upward of $2,500. He also owns twelve town lots in addition to those occupied by his residence and stores. In 1865, he married Miss Mary Arnold, of Ohio, who has borne him seven children, viz.: Owen, born August 14, 1867; David, September 17, 1869; Clara, December 18, 1871; Austin, January 15, 1873; Charles, March 8, 1879, and two yet in infancy. In the spring of 1866, he came to Kansas, spending the first year on the Cottonwood River Valley, and then moving into this county and locating upon the Verdigris River where Madison now is; engaged in blacksmithing for six years. He now owns a farm near town and has his shop rented, he in turn being engaged since 1880 in the livery business, having a well equipped establishment, and keeping a better class of vehicles and animals than are usually found in other than metropolitan stables. Mr. Green owns his residence and several city lots. He owns 3,200 acres in this county, 1,300 of which are in one tract. During the first two years after his arrival, he worked in the rolling mills of Portsmouth, Ohio, and upon a farm in Illinois until June 8, 1861, when, in Quincy, Ill., he enlisted in a company then being organized for the defense of the Union, and which was to have formed part of the Second Illinois Cavalry, but Mr. William Rose, who was in command, was persuaded by Jim Lane to bring his men to Kansas, which he did, and the subject of this sketch soon afterward became a member of Company F, Fourth Kansas, in which he remained until the regiment together with the Third Regiment became united as the Tenth Kansas. He participated in all active service until the close of the fight at Prairie Grove when he was shot in the left arm, necessitating amputation three inches below the shoulder. Upon recovery, he refused to be discharged, and acted as scout in Missouri, for Col. Weir and Gen. Blunt until the Missourians found him out, after which he acted as messenger until mustered out at St. Louis, Mo., in 1863. He still, however, continued to act as scout for Gen. Ewing until the close of the war, when he returned to Illinois, and was for some years engaged as shepherd near Springfield. In 1869, he came to this county and obtained employment with the Hon. Rose, and went to live on his present farm, which he had purchased several years previously, but which he had rented until then. He has about eighty acres under cultivation, and has raised corn to average fifty bushels per acre. He has no children of his own, but is assisted in the work of the farm by his stepson. Mr. Jones is a United States pensioner at $24 per month, and although twenty years have passed since he lost his arm, would be one of the first to respond, crippled as he is, should our country again require the services of all loyal citizens in the field.

SOLOMON PHENIS, farmer, Section 13, P. O. Madison, is one of the oldest settlers of this region. Born in Preble County, Ohio, in 1817. His parents removed to Indiana in 1823, and in 1855 he, with five of his neighbors from Hamilton County, that State, started for Kansas, making the journey by ox-team in thirty-four days; and locating upon the banks of a small stream, which has ever since been known as "Phenis Creek," upon the north line of what was then Madison County, but subsequently became part of Lyon. The party was joined during the same year by a brother of Mr. Phenis (Judge J. R. Phenis) and several of his former neighbors, thus forming quite a settlement. Lawrence was then their nearest post office and the mail was delivered weekly by carriers from that city, the settlers here paying him at the rate of a dollar per month for each family. This continued until the post office was established at Emporia. In 1860, Mr. Phenis was thrown from his horse and his thigh bone broken, which, being imperfectly set, owing to no medical man being at hand, has rendered him a cripple for life, and in spite of of his earnest desire to do so, prevented his entering the army. In 1863, he removed to this county, locating on a farm on Section 25, Town 22, Range 12, this township, where he remained until October, 1880, when he sold it and removed to his present one, which is nearer town, and upon which he has built a very fine house, the interior of which is very conveniently arranged and thoroughly furnished throughout, costing $1,500. Nearly half of his present farm is under cultivation, his corn yield being fifty-five bushels per acre. In 1839, Mr. Phenis married Miss Sarah Coats, who bore him thirteen children, the eldest of whom, Cyprus, born May 23, 1841, enlisted May 13, 1862, in Company B, Ninth Kansas Cavalry, and served three years, being discharged May 18, 1865, and who, while upon his return home, was taken ill, and died at Emporia upon the anniversary of his birth, May 23, 1865. The remaining nine children now left to Mr. Phenis are Kaley, born August 28, 1842; John Newton, born June 11, 1847; Isaac, January 23, 1848; Charles, February 14, 1850; William R., April 14, 1852; Evangeline, April 2, 1854; Nina, January 23, 1858; Hannah, February 28, 1861; and Ellsworth, April 21, 1862. All save the youngest are married, and all reside in the State and have made the subject of this sketch a grandfather no less than twenty-two times. Mrs. Phenis died October 11, 1876, and on January 18, 1877, he married his present consort, Mrs. Elizabeth Jones, nee Harrison, who is also one of the earlier settlers of the State. Mr. P. has never cared to accept any office, and, although twice elected County Commissioner, refused to serve; upon the last occasion, although compelled to qualify in order to satisfy the desires of his friends, he resigned the next day. His brother, I. R. Phenis, is Probate Judge of the county.

HORATIO PRITCHARD, farmer, Section 12, P. O. Madison, was born in Madison County, Ind., February 10, 1838. In the fall of 1857, his father, Benoni Pritchard, left Hancock County, Ind., with his wife, three children and a hired man named Bailles, and with two cows and two yoke of oxen brought their "schooners" to an anchor upon his present farm, after a voyage of five weeks. In passing through Missouri, they experienced great difficulty in getting provender and provisions. Corn cost a cent an ear, and a small sheaf of oats about twelve inches long sold for from 25 to 50 cents. For some time after arriving here, there were but eight families in the township. Burlingame was the nearest place to go to mill, and Leavenworth the nearest supply depot. Mr. Harris the elder died in 1872. The subject of this sketch, April 19, 1863, was married to Miss Frances M. Norton, daughter of the first Clerk of Greenwood County. One child has died in infancy, and those now surviving are William H., born March 2, 1864; Charles D., October 19, 1865; Dora A., November 10, 1867; Braton H., February 21, 1869; J. Edward, August 20, 1871; Effie L., February 14, 1873; Ella M., April 27, 1874; Martin C., November 2, 1875; Bertha B., July 2, 1877; Lena M., January 18, 1879; Fanny E., September 3, 1881. Mr. Pritchard's farm contains 120 acres in Section 12, and 160 in Section 14. There are 120 acres in cultivation upon the bottom lands of the Verdigris. Corn yields sixty to seventy-five bushels per acre, and other grains in proportion. He raises a great many cattle and hogs. His orchard contains about 200 good, fruit-bearing trees. Although Mr. P. is one of the oldest settlers now here, he has studiously avoided office, save upon the School Board of his District, No. 1, but has ever taken a warm interest in the welfare of the county, and is considered one of the most prosperous farmers of this region.

DR. A. STANDLEY, physician and surgeon, is a native of Greene County, Ind., and born in 1838, but when a child his parents removed to and settled upon a farm in Appanoose County, Iowa, where he was brought up. He first came to Kansas in 1860, and remained in this county a little over a year, and, upon his return home, enlisted in Indiana in Company L, Twenty-eighth Regiment First Indiana Cavalry. He was in active service with the regiment until the expiration of his term of enlistment, and was mustered out at Indianapolis, Ind., in August, 1863. He thereupon returned to Iowa, and in the fall of 1865 again came to this county, marrying the daughter of Dr. Raybell; he studied medicine with his father-in-law, and has now been practicing his profession for the past twelve years. He is married and the father of several children; owns his residence and other property in town; is a member of the Madison Lodge, No. 171, I. O. O. F., and is the examining physician of the F. & M. M. B. A.

ALPHONSO STREHLE, grocer, is a native of Bavaria, Germany, being born in 1844; but when he was seven years of age, his parents emigrated to this country, locating upon a farm near Three Oaks, Mich., where they still reside. Mr. S. came to Kansas in 1870, and settled upon a farm near Bazaar, Chase Co., where he remained for a time, when he removed to Cowley County, and finally, in 1873, located in Greenwood County, engaging in business in the old town of Madison, and removing with the town upon the location of it upon its present site, and, although one or two others were in business here before him, they have left the town, so that his is now the oldest established store in town. In March, 1864, he enlisted at Three Oaks in Company E, Twelfth Regiment Michigan Infantry, and served with his regiment upon frontier duty, principally in Arkansas, until mustered out at Camden, Ark., in April, 1865. He is married and has three children. Mr. Strehle carries a stock of about $1,000 in groceries, etc., which, together with the building and his residence, is insured for about two-thirds the value. He has also an interest with Mr. H. J. Davis in the flour and feed business; they carry a stock of from $600 to $800, and both branches of business are doing a good trade, which is constantly increasing.

J. B. THOMSON, druggist and stationer, was born in New Liverpool, on the St. Lawrence river, Province of Quebec, and but a few miles from that Gibraltar of Canada. His parents came to the United States while he was yet young, and settled in Oldtown, upon the Penobscot River, in Maine, where he was educated. He was for several years the book-keeper of a large manufacturing firm in New Lebanon, N. H., and later was, with his brother, engaged in engineering, etc., in the oil regions of Pennsylvania. He came to Kansas in November, 1873, and was engaged in school teaching until he commenced business in his present location, in December, 1879. He owns his store and residence, and carries from $900 to $1,200 worth of goods, and stock and building are fully insured. Mr. Thomson is married and has four children. He is a member of the Knights of Honor, and has for the past three years been one of the Board of School Examiners. He has steadily eschewed all, even local, politics, although taking a warm interest not only in Madison, but also in the welfare of his adopted State.

A. C. WATROUS, farmer, Section 1, Township 11, Range 22, P. O. Madison, and who is more familiarly known as "Chet," has been a resident of Kansas since 1856, and took an active part in the war for the Union, and in the later Indian troubles, having been one of Custer's trusty scouts. He was born in 1836, in Athens County, Ohio, and in 1840 his father, Mr. Horace Watrous, and who is now a resident of Coffey County, Kan., removed with his family to Wisconsin, where he remained until 1856, when the family came to this State, locating upon a farm in Coffey County. In April, 1862, the subject of this sketch was one of a company of volunteers raised in that county, but, finding the call had been already filled, and that no more men were then wanted from this State, he went to West Union, Fayette County, Ohio, where he enlisted in Company F, Third Iowa Infantry, and served in that regiment until after the first siege of Corinth, when he was detailed to Battery C, First Brigade Missouri Light Artillery, in which he remained till mustered out with rank of Sergeant at Davenport, Iowa, April 5, 1865. He was wounded by a shot in the right knee at the siege of Vicksburg, and also in the shoulder, at the Hatchie River. After leaving the army, he returned to Coffey County, where his father had some time previously established an Indian trading-post, to which he soon after added two others, one at Elk City, and the other in this county, in what is now known as Greenwood City. Establishing himself at the Elk City post, he continued therein until October, 1868, when he enlisted in Col. Crawford's Regiment, the Nineteenth Kansas, and assisted in quelling the Indian troubles, and subsequently acted as scout for Gen. Custer, and also as Government Interpreter in Texas and Mexico, he having acquired a thorough knowledge of the language of several of the Indian tribes. Shortly after returning to Kansas, he located in Shell Rock Township, where he continued until 1882, when he sold his farm there, and removed to his present one of 320 acres, half of which is in Greenwood, and the other half in Lyon County. He has seventy acres under cultivation, and has recently erected a residence, barns, etc. December 25, 1870, Mr. Watrous married Miss Anna F. Pierce; they have three children—Minnie, Linton and Adelbert. His brother, Mr. John Watrous, is the editor and proprietor of the Independent, published weekly at Burlington, Coffey Co. Mr. W. has a relic of the late war, in the shape of a finger ring with two hearts carved upon it, the material being a piece of the oak tree, under the branches of which, at Vicksburg, Col. Pemberton surrendered to Gen. Grant. The ring was cut and carved by —— Bush, of the Missouri Battery, and who had learned the art during his two years' confinement in Libby. While residing in Shell Rock Township, Mr. Watrous was for several years a member of the School Board. He is also Lieutenant Colonel of the G. A. R., having been elected in Topeka, during the re-union there in September, 1882. "Chet" is an excellent farmer, as well as a trader, scout and soldier, and still retains an upright, soldierly carriage and bearing.

A. WHERMAN, merchant, is a native of Germany, but in 1848, when he was but three years of age, his parents emigrated to the United States, and settled in Warren County, Mo. He first engaged in business as a grain and commission merchant, in Carrollton, Mo., continuing therein until 1879, when he removed to Kansas and located upon a farm of 280 acres in Section 12, this township. In the fall of 1880, he rented his farm and commenced business in his present stand on Main street, Madison. He has now a large stock of harness, hardware, etc., valued at $2,500, and employs a competent, practical harness-maker, who is kept constantly busy. He now owns two stores in town, which, with his stock, are fully insured.

H. A. WICKER, blacksmith, is a native of North Carolina, born in 1826, but was brought up in Indiana, whither his parents removed when he was yet but a boy. December 15, 1849, he married Miss Amanda E. Jackson, and has two children living—Sylvester F., who was born in 1852, and is now married, and resides in town; and Mrs. Viola Flock, born in 1856, who is also a resident of this county. Mr. Wicker came to Kansas in 1857, locating in Miami County, and at Stanton, September 18, 1862. He enlisted in Company D, Twelfth Kansas Infantry, and participated in the engagement at Prairie de Ann, April 13, 1864, and also at Saline Bottom, April 29 and 30, 1864, and was mustered out June 19, 1865, at Little Rock, Ark. After a residence of two years in Butler County, Mr. Wicker located in this township in December, 1873, and for some time his was the only forge in this vicinity. He owns his residence and shop, and although opposition has come with the location of the new town, continues to have a good run of custom.

SEVERY.

Severy is located at the junction of the Howard Branch of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fé Railway with the St. Louis & San Francisco road, and was laid out on January 7, 1879, by the Arkansas Valley Town Company. It is the successor of old Severy, which stood a few hundred feet south. The first building on the town site was the store and residence combined of R. Dodds. A. R. Tomlinson arrived on the scene soon after and lived in a tent until his blacksmith shop was completed. The first general store was opened by E. Ellingson, who was followed by W. M. Stewart, liveryman; N. S. McDonald, physician, and H. C. Reece, attorney. Wedding bells were first used to celebrate the nuptials of William Whittenhall and Miss Ella Weir. The first child born in the town was Myrtle Halsey; the first death, a baby boy of Mrs. Green. The first hotel was opened in February, 1880, by Weir & Whittenhall. A Union Sabbath school was organized soon after the organization of the town and has now an attendance of over one hundred.

The town was duly incorporated in April, 1879, and proceeded to the election of officers, E. Ellingson being elected Mayor. The following year R. Z. Swegle was elected to the Mayor's office and re-elected in 1882. M. F. Gibson was elected City Clerk in 1881. This position is now vacant.

In January, 1882, the town received a severe blow in the presence of a virulent form of small-pox. This dreaded disease broke out in one of the hotels and spread rapidly. By March it had run its course and disappeared, but the many vacant places told the story of its work. In the house of Mr. Wells four daughters died; in other points in town, Rev. I. N. Locke, pastor of the Congregational Church, Joseph Reed, a mason, and Alfred Berial, a carpenter. It is hard to picture the effect of such a scourge in a new and hopeful town. Trade was paralyzed, and even yet has not fully recuperated.

The first post office near Severy was located at R. T. Bullock's about two miles west of the present town. Thence it was moved to the old town when that began to have a separate existence, and in 1879, when the new town was formed, it was again removed. On this removal the name was changed to city of Gould, but this was a year later restored to the name of Severy, which the town had held throughout. The first Postmaster in the new town was R. Dodds, who held the office until May, 1880, when it was conferred upon the present official, Samuel Lybarger.

Old Severy had no public schools, and the new town was in the same condition until 1882, when a neat building, having four rooms and costing $4,000, was erected. School exercises were begun on October 1 of this year, with an attendance of one hundred and fifty, in charge of R. Thacher and G. R. West. As the town grows the two rooms now unused will be put in requisition and a full corps of teachers engaged.

The town now has a population of three hundred and is growing quite rapidly. Its industries may be summarized as follows: General stores, 7; hardware, 2; drug, 2; hotels, 2; furniture, 1; lumber yards, 1; harness shops, 1; meat market, 1; livery stables, 2. Besides these are churches, schools and other organizations more particularly mentioned already, the whole making a live and growing town.

CHURCHES, SOCIETIES, ETC.

The Congregational Church owns the only church building in the town. Begun in 1880, it was finished in 1881, at a cost of $1,600. Its pastor at that time and up to his death in 1882, was Rev. I. N. Locke. The church numbers nearly thirty members. As yet no minister has been called and the meetings of the society are irregular. It is probable that at an early day a re-organization will be effected and the work so well begun carried to a fitting conclusion.

The Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Severy was organized in the country, about three miles from Severy, and held services in a schoolhouse until its removal to the town in 1881. Services were held at irregular intervals by Rev. Dr. Toner, of Fredonia, and later by Rev. Mr. Wheat, of Eldorado, but the society has no regular pastor. The church membership is about twenty.

Twin Groves Lodge, A., F. & A. M., U. D., has as yet no charter, and therefore no number. It was organized on March 25, 1882, with a membership of eighteen, and the following officers: Albert Cutter, W. M.; N. S. McDonald, S. W.; H. Cottrell, J. W.; B. B. Finch, Secretary; S. S. Coleman, Treasurer. Meetings are held on the first and third Thursday of each month in the Masonic Hall.

Ridgley Lodge, No. 202, I. O. O. F., was organized on May 23, 1882, with the following officers: B. B. Finch, N. G.; J. M. Eagan, V. G.; R. Z. Swegle, Secretary; C. E. Arnold, Treasurer. Meetings are held on Monday of each week in the Odd Fellows' Hall.

Parson Brownlow Post, No. 79, G. A. R., was organized on June 24, 1882, with a membership of forty-one, and the following officers: C. H. De Ford, P. C.; W. W. Redford, S. V. C.; J. W. Beecher, J. V. C.; William Dunham, Q.; Isaac Wyant, O. D.; R. Z. Swegle, O. G.; William Rowley, I. G. The membership of the post is now forty-six. Meetings are held on the first Wednesday of each month in the Odd Fellows Hall.

The Severy Pioneer was started in March, 1880, as a four-page five-column Republican weekly. Two months later, it was enlarged to an eight-page paper, retaining the same owners—Gettys & Drake. On October 1, 1881, Drake sold out to Dixon, Price & Wood. January 1, 1882, Gettys sold out to R. P. Dixon, and a month later Dixon, who now was sole owner, sold out to J. A. Garner. A few months later, Garner in turn sold out to M. F. Gibson, who now runs the paper. Its circulation is 500.

The Commercial House was built in old Severy by a Mr. Lindsay, and removed to the present location on the building of the new town. The second hotel in the town was built by P. L. Holloway, and ran until the fall of 1881, when it was closed. The Pacific Hotel was built in 1880, and occupied by Wells & Son, until closed by the small-pox in 1882.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.—SEVERY TOWNSHIP.

J. W. BEECHER, grocer and coal merchant, was born in 1847, in Maidstone, Kent County, England, and at ten years of age came to this country with his father, who settled in Sherman, Chautauqua County, N. Y., where the subject of this sketch enlisted June 8, 1863, in Company E, One Hundred and Twelfth New York Volunteer Infantry. His regiment was attached to the First Brigade, Second Division Twenty-fourth Army Corps, and he participated with it in the battle of Fort Wagner, expedition to Florida, of Cold Harbor, siege of Petersburg, Drury's Bluff, Deep Bottom. Chapin's Farm, Fort Harrison, and twice at Fort Fisher, assisting in capturing it; the battle of the Wilderness, etc., and was mustered out at Buffalo, N. Y., June 27, 1865. Upon leaving the army he was engaged for some years in sinking oil wells in Kentucky and Pennsylvania, remaining there until January, 1870, when he removed to Kansas and settled upon a farm on the Verdigris River, where he remained one year, when he sold out and moved to Section 20, Town 27, Range 11, in Fall River Township. Upon the building of the Howard branch of the A., T. & S. F. R. R., he rented his farm and came to town, and entered the store of Mr. Ellingson as clerk, remaining there until April, 1880, when he opened a coal yard, which he still continues, and in 1882 he opened his present store of fancy groceries, fruit, etc. May 1st, 1881, he married Miss Rosa A. Huff. They have one child, Thomas, born May 21, 1882. Mr. Beecher is Road Overseer of this district, and Adjutant of Brownlow Post, No. 79, G. A. R.

D. F. BUTCHER, M. D., was born in Monroe County, Ind., in 1853. He is a graduate of the State University, of Indiana, and the Medical College of Ohio, in the winter of 1872 and 1873. He commenced the practice of his profession in Newberry, Ind., in the spring of the latter year, and continued there until 1875, when he returned to the same college and completed a course in obstetrics. He continued the practice of medicine in his native State until August, 1882, when he came to Kansas and located, and as many of his former patients had settled in this county, he speedily acquired a lucrative practice. In 1874, Mr. Butcher married Miss Mary A. Slinkard, of Indiana. They have but one child—Austin V., who was born in June, 1875.

J. W. CAREY, hardware merchant, is the oldest representative of his line of business in town, which he first opened in the spring of 1881. He is a native of Indiana, born 1842, and in 1851 removed to Iowa, in which State he resided for twenty years, being alternately engaged in agriculture and store-keeping. This was his first business location in Kansas, and in ten days from the time he commenced had his store built and stocked. His stock is now valued as $4,000, and together with the building is fully insured. He came to Kansas first in 1871, and located upon his present farm of 160 acres, on Section 1, to which he has since added eighty acres on Section 2. He has raised for the nine years prior to going into business, corn and cattle principally. His farm contains an excellent orchard of fifteen acres. In the fall of 1862, Mr. Carey married Miss Annie Livingood. They have four children living—Lillie, Frank, Maud and Edith. Mr. C. has been Township Treasurer several terms, on the School Board almost incessantly. Is a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and one of the Board of Trustees chosen by the Methodist Episcopal body, to erect a $1,500 edifice here.

J. D. CLARK, druggist, is a native of Chemung County, N. Y., and upon leaving school was for some years employed in a merchandise store in the city of Elmira. He came to Kansas in the fall of 1878, after a residence of four years in California, locating at first in Eureka. He was for two years in the drug store of Dr. J. M. Smith, as dispensing clerk, and in 1880 he came to Severy, built his present fine store on Maine street, and at once opened with a stock of medicines, surgical instruments and fancy goods, which he is constantly adding to. His stock is now valued at $3,000, and together with the building is fully insured. He also owns several town lots, and a residence in town, and is being well patronized.

S. S. COLEMAN, merchant, is the first man who opened a general store in the town of Severy, and is a native of Christian County, Ill. He came to Kansas in the spring of 1873, and located first near Bellemont, Woodson County, where he engaged in farming, and also opened a store in Bellemont, which he sold out in 1875, and removed to Twin Falls, where he engaged in business, and upon the first survey of the town site of Severy, opened a store there, in which he continued about a year, when he sold out his interest in it and removed to his farm. In the course of time he returned to town and bought the hotel building erected by Mr. Weir, but he has now gone out of hotel keeping, and confines his attention only to the interests of his store and farm. The former contains a well assorted stock of general merchandise, and is valued at $8,000, insured for $6,000. His farm of 160 acres on Section 1, Town 28, Range 10, and which was formerly the old Holloway nursery, contains an orchard of upwards of 1,100 assorted fruit trees. He has forty acres under cultivation, in wheat and corn, yielding fair average returns; his residence on farm and other buildings there and in town being insured. Mr. S. has a family of five children. Being in Terre Haute, Ind., in 1861, he, on June 7, enlisted in Company H., Fourteenth Indiana Infantry, and participated in almost all the heavy work of his company. He was at Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Antietam and the Wilderness (where he was wounded in left hand and shoulder), the seven days' fight at Richmond, and at Gettysburg, where he was again severely wounded, this time in head behind right ear, and in June, 1864, he was mustered out at Indianapolis, Ind. Mr. Coleman is a member of the Freemason fraternity, and although often solicited since his residence in Kansas, has steadily refused to withdraw his attention from his business and accept any public office.

CAPT. C. H. DEFORD, farmer, Section 17, Town 27, Range 10, P. O. Severy, was born in Jefferson County, Penn., in 1845, and, when ten years of age, his parents removed to Alabama, he being educated in Florence, Ala. In July, 1862, he enlisted at Nashville, Tenn., in Company H, Sixth Tennessee Cavalry, the regiment being for some time after he became part of it engaged in a sort of guerrilla warfare against the rebel Gen. Forrest until it became part of the Army of the Cumberland. Capt. Deford was in the engagements at Jackson, Tenn., Salem, Miss., and Ruckerville, Miss., and his company subsequently formed part of the battalion which was sent to Helena, Ark., and was there placed under command of Gen. Buford. Whilst the regiment was at Lagrange, the subject of this sketch being then a private, was promoted to the rank of Second Lieutenant for gallantry and merit, and transferred from his own company to Company A, shortly after which he became First Lieutenant, and whilst at Helena, Ark., he was placed in command of the battalion made vacant by the death of Capt. Hodges. Remaining in Helena some months, he, with his command, was then ordered to join his regiment at Nashville, where he arrived in time to participate in the fight, after which he was engaged upon scouting duty, being at one time in the saddle almost constantly for fifty days. He was mustered out at Pulaski July 26, 1865, with the rank of Captain. Shortly after leaving the army, he went to Ashley, Ill., where he engaged in mercantile pursuits, and then in the manufacture of woolen goods, removing to Tennessee in 1869, and continuing the same business there until 1881, when he came to Kansas, and locating in Severy opened a general store, which he conducted for upwards of a year, when he sold out to Mr. Black and purchased his present improved farm four miles from town. Being upland, his corn yield is only about forty bushels per acre, and wheat twenty. He has a large apple and peach orchard in excellent condition. His substantial farm buildings and commodious, well-furnished residence being, with their contents, well insured. Mr. Deford will enter extensively into the stock-raising and cattle business generally, purposing to enlarge his farm for that purpose. In 1866, he was married to Miss Boyd, who died in 1878, leaving him five children, four of whom survive—James W., born in 1867; Harry B., born in 1869; Lizzie G., born in 1872; May, born in 1875. In 1879, Mr. Deford married Miss Maria E. Howell, who has borne him one child—Henry, born in 1880. Capt. Deford is J. D. of Severy Lodge, A., F. & A. M., and he was the originator and leading spirit in the formation of Brownlow Post, No. 79, G. A. R., of which he was the first Post Commander, an office to which he has since been re-elected.

WILLIAM DUNHAM, Justice of the Peace and general agent, is a native of Mercer County, Penn., and was born in 1841, and when twelve years of age removed with his parents to the town of Andrew, Jackson County, Iowa, at which place the subject of this sketch enlisted September 28, 1861, in Company M, Second Iowa Cavalry. He participated with his regiment in the engagements of New Madrid, Tiptonville, Island No. Ten, Fort Pillow, Iuka and siege of Corinth, afterward being with Gen. Grierson in his famous raids in Mississippi, and was mustered out as veteran October, 1865, at Selma, Ala. Mr. Dunham is a United States pensioner, having been wounded severely in the right shoulder. Upon leaving the army, he returned to Iowa and engaged in farming until 1871, when he came to Kansas, locating on a farm on Otter Creek, this county, then opened a new farm on the prairie, where he remained until the town of Severy sprang into existence, when he removed into town and opened his office as Justice. Subsequently he became agent for five different sewing machine companies, the Marcy Organ Company, two fire insurance companies, and two life insurance companies. Mr. Dunham married, September 1, 1868, Miss Mary J. Reed, of Andrew, Iowa. The children are Harry C., born July 20, 1869; Clara B., born September 17, 1873; Rule A., born February 8, 1876; Roger, born November 16, 1878, and Dollie M., born September 5, 1882. Besides his office, Mr. Dunham owns three residences and lots in town. He is Justice of the Peace, Quartermaster of Brownlow Post, No. 79, G. A. R., Treasurer of Ridgley Lodge, No. 202, I. O. O. F., and is a member of the City Council.

JOSEPH ENTERKIN, merchant, was born in 1825 in the town of Girvan Ayrshire, Scotland, and upon leaving school was apprenticed to the trade of a cooper in the old historical town of Ayr so often mentioned in the poems of Burns. In due time, Mr. Enterkin established a cooperage of his own in his native town, which he conducted until the spring of 1853, when he emigrated to the New World, and, upon landing in New York, remained there about a year, working at his trade. In the fall of 1854, he removed to Wayne County, Ill., where he engaged in the dual occupation of farmer and cooper. In September, 1861, he enlisted in Company M, Fifth Illinois Cavalry, as Bugler, and was shortly afterward made Staff Bugler to Col. Hall Wilson. His regiment was attached to Gen. Curtis' division of the army, and he remained with it until mustered out in October, 1862, under an order from the War Deputy discharging all non-commissioned staff officers. Mr. Enterkin then returned to Wayne County until the fall of 1865, when he moved to Kansas and located upon what was then the Osage Indian Reserve upon Otter Creek, this county, and still retains 160 acres, it being now part of Section 18, Town 27, Range 11. Upon the surveying of the town of Severy, he removed to town, and at once erected the building he now occupies as a residence and store, stocking the latter with $3,000 worth of choice groceries. Upon first coming to Kansas, Mr. Enterkin was one of the originators of the formation of the M. E. Church Society in his district, and for many years services were held in his house, while he resided on the farm on Otter Creek. In 1850, Mr. Enterkin was married in Scotland to Miss Janet Logan, who has borne him children as follows—James (born August 22, 1852, and now married and residing on the old homestead), Jessie (born June 1, and now the wife of Mr. John E. Willis, lawyer of Washington Territory), Sarah (born February 14, 1857, and died October 6, 1867), Thomas (born in 1860), Margaret J. (born in November, 1862), Mary C. (born April 14, 1865). In addition to his original farm, since sold to his eldest son, Mr. Enterkin owns 440 acres adjoining it, 170 acres of which are under cultivation, with an average, for fifteen years, wheat yield, of twenty bushels per acre, and of corn sixty-five bushels. He also has 175 head of cattle upon it, also a good frame residence, and barns, etc. Besides his town residence, he owns two dwellings. He has been a member of the Board of School Directors of Twin Grove Township, and is V. G. of Ridgley Lodge, No. 202, I. O. O. F., and has always taken a great interest in everything pertaining to the welfare of his adopted State and country.

S. E. FARMER, farmer, Section 35, Town 27, Range 11, P. O. Severy, is a native of Rockford, Ill., and was for many years in business there as baker and confectioner. In 1878, he removed to Kansas, locating in Howard, where he engaged in the hardware business until March, 1881, when he sold out his business there and removed to Greenwood County, purchasing 240 acres, 160 in the above section and eighty in the Flint Hills. The farm was then well improved and included a comfortable frame residence, which he has since enlarged. His grain yield is about eighteen bushels of wheat and forty-five bushels of corn per acre; millet about five tons. In 1872, he came to Kansas, and locating in this township soon became one of its largest stock and cattle dealers. He owns 800 acres in Janesville Township, the greater part of which is in Section 19, where he has lately built a very fine residence. He has several very fine imported Durham bulls, and increases his stock by crossing with the native cattle, of which he usually has from 500 to 800 head. An admirer of horse flesh, the Captain has also some fine Hamiltonian and Messenger stallions. He has been Trustee of this township for eight years, and is one of its most enterprising and influential residents.

W. B. SMITH, of W. B. & W. M. Smith, Twin Falls, millers, was born in Owen County, Ind., and in 1872 he came to Kansas, when he, and his brother bought the mill here, formerly owned by Mr. Coy, and have continued to run it to the present time; they have greatly improved it putting in new machinery, etc., and making the Twin Falls Flouring Mills, one of the best in Kansas. Mr. Smith is a young married man, but one of the live men of the town.

JAMES STEWART, farmer, Section 23, Spring Creek Township, P. O. Reece, was born in Brown County, Ohio, and whilst yet young removed to Champaign County, Ill., and in 1870 removed to this State, locating upon his present farm. Since residing here Mr. Stewart has given his attention to raising horses, he having some of the finest Lexingtons always on hand. His large two story cut stone house, is one of the finest on the lower road, and his farm surroundings are a treat for the eye of an artist.

REV. PHILLIP WENGER, farmer, Section 25, P. O. Shell Rock, is a native of Baden, Germany, and came to the United States in 1854, locating upon a farm in Tazewell County, Ill., from whence he removed to his present location in 1877. His farm contains 640 acres, 200 of which are under cultivation, and although upland his grain yield has averaged for wheat, sixteen bushels, corn, thirty to thirty-five, and oats twenty-five bushels to the acre. He has about 100 head of native cattle, and a fine two-story residence, and substantial and commodious barns, all insured. Mr. Wenger has but one child, a daughter. He was one of the organizers and is pastor of the Apostolic Christian Church. The society numbers about 100 members, and in 1881 a church was built in this township at a cost of $1,400. It will seat 200 persons; services are held every Sabbath. In addition, Elder Joseph Huber has another charge ten miles east of this, where he conducts weekly services.

R. E. WOLCOTT, farmer, Section 13, P. O. Shell Rock, was born in Orange County, Vt., in 1832, and coming to Kansas in 1870, located in this township. His farm contains 235 acres on Sections 13 and 14, Township 23, Range 12 south, sixty acres being under cultivation, with an average corn yield of fifty to sixty, and wheat, twenty-five bushels per acre, oats, forty-five to sixty bushels. For some years past Mr. Wolcott has raised considerable sorghum cane, and having a small mill upon his place has found it remunerative. The yield has been about 100 gallons per acre, and it finds a ready sale at 50 cents per gallon. Of cattle he has about thirty head. His only son, Royal Wolcott, is married and resides upon the adjacent farm. Mr. Wolcott enlisted at Salem, Mass., August 8, 1861, in Company F, Twenty-third Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, and after being present at Roanoke, Newbern, etc., was discharged in August, 1862, on account of disability, and in 1864, he re-enlisted in the Thirteenth Veteran Reserve, and remained until the close of the war. Mr. Wolcott was first Master of Shell Rock Grange, No. 1,147, P. of H., and in 1874 he was elected Justice of the Peace, which office he held until 1877.

CHAUTAUQUA COUNTY.

LOCATION, SURFACE AND PRODUCTIONS.

CHAUTAUQUA County was formerly, in common with Elk County, included in the county of Howard. By an act of the Legislature, which took effect on the 1st day of June, 1875, that portion of Southern Kansas known as Howard County, became divided into two equal parts, and called Elk and Chautauqua Counties, the latter comprising the south half of old Howard County.

Chautauqua County, therefore, lies in the most southerly tier of counties in the State, the north line of the Indian Territory forming its southern boundary, while on the east lies the county of Montgomery, Elk on the north and Cowley County on the west. The county is twenty-one miles from north to south, and thirty-one miles from east to west; having an area of 651 square miles, or 416,640 acres.

The general surface of the county is rough and broken, abounding in rocky ridges and high, bluffy elevations. Toward the north, it becomes more even, and in some places sufficiently smooth to admit of cultivation; but a very large portion of the county is incapable of being cultivated at all. There are, however, rich level bottoms lying along the streams susceptible of easy tillage and highly productive. It is estimated that the bottom lands comprise about one-fourth of the entire county, and from these nearly all the agricultural products are derived.

The county is covered with a rich growth of wild grasses, however, which with its numerous streams and springs of healthful water and abundant growth of timber for shelter, makes this one among the finest stock-growing regions in the State.

The principal of the water courses are the Big and Middle Caney Creeks and Salt Creek, each of which is fed by numerous other streams of varied size and importance. A considerable growth of timber is also found in this county, and although the greater portion and the best quality is found along the streams, yet in some places it covers the hills and draws. The principal varieties of the timber are cottonwood and white oak, and other varieties in limited quantities, while that upon the bluffy lands is made up of a species of oak, vulgarly known as "black jack."

The mineral resources of the county are practically unimportant so far as discoveries have been made. Coal has been found in some parts, but in such limited quantities as to render its development unprofitable, the veins being surface veins of from only three to fifteen inches in thickness.

A few specimens of lead ore were discovered in the south part of the county, but further investigation failed to reveal the presence of the mineral in quantities sufficiently large to justify its development, and the enterprise was abandoned. There is, however, an almost inexhaustible supply of sand, and limestone of excellent quality and valuable for building purposes, which abounds generally throughout the county.

Pottery and fire clays have been found in some localities, but in small amounts, the latter having been utilized to some extent.

EARLY HISTORY.

The first white settler that located in what is now Chautauqua County was Richard Slater, who came in July, 1868, and settled on a claim in Salt Creek Valley, in Salt Creek Township, in the northeast corner of the county. The land, however, was not open to settlement at that time, being owned by the Big and Little Osage Indians, from whom it was obtained by the Government under a treaty made with the Indians while holding their grand council on the Verdigris River in 1870. In July, 1869, William Bowcher settled in Lafayette Township, and, in the fall of the same year, settlement was first made in Harrison Township by O. Hanson; in Sedan Township, by H. S. Halladay; Caneyville Township, by Alexander Shawver; in Summit Township, by George M. Ross, and in Belleville Township, by John W. Morris and John Sutton.

O. Hanson, the first settler to enter what is now Sedan Township, having limited means and no vehicle, was compelled to transport his worldly goods to his place of settlement on a "stone-boat."

The population of the county, given for various periods, shows more plainly the rate of increase and degrees of development of the county in point of settlement.

In 1870, the population of Howard County numbered 2,794, and in 1875, just prior to the division of the county, it was 13,632. Just following the creation of Chautauqua County, in 1875, its population was 7,417, and in 1878 it was 9,246, or an increase in three years of 1,829. In 1879, it was 10,537, or an increase in one year of 1,291. In 1882, the population of the county numbered about 12,000.

The first term of the Eleventh Judicial District Court convened at Belleville, Howard County, May 15, 1871; W. P. Campbell, Judge, and Daniel Carr acting as Clerk. The first case docketed for hearing was that of the State of Kansas, ex rel, against Daniel Carr and others. It was a mandamus case to compel the county officers to remove from Elk Falls to Peru.

On the 4th day of June, 1870, M. Smith, Probate Judge of Howard County, issued the first marriage license to J. M. Cole and Margaret J. Comer, and on the next day united them in the legal bonds of matrimony.

The first marriage in Salt Creek Township was that of Ebenezer Horton and Martha Starks, February 14, 1869; in Caneyville, John C. Johnson and Helen Cooley July 2, 1871; in Harrison Township, Hiram Winter and Mary Conklin, March, 1871; in Sedan Township, J. M. Culver and C. Helms, February 15, 1872.

The first birth in Harrison Township was that of Grundy White, March 9, 1870; in Salt Creek Township, Abigail Slater, February 20, 1869; in Lafayette Township, Robert Narrow, July 5, 1870.

The only Democrats that have been elected to offices of importance on a square political fight were Col. Donaldson, County Attorney; Eli Titus, Sheriff, and E. S. Cummings, Representative.

L. P. Getman established the first store in the county, at Elgin, and John Lee, William Gamble and Beadle Welsh started the first saw mill at the same place, and which they brought from Wisconsin in 1870.

It was at this place that the first preaching in the county was held by Rev. S. Records, in the first schoolhouse that was erected; and W. C. Watkins was the first class-leader. Watkins, it is claimed by some, was the first settler in the county.

In 1875, two men by the name of John Bybee and Jesse Peterson, living in what is known as "Hell's Bend" in the southwest part of the county, and who had been long-time friends, got into a quarrel which almost resulted in the loss of life. On the 4th of July of that year, Bybee, in company with others, went to Peterson's residence, a log house, and shot at Peterson through a crack between the logs, but without effect. Bybee was arrested and brought to trial, which was delayed by one means and another, lasting through a period of between two and three years, and was finally acquitted. The old feud, however, stood unabated, and in 1877 the parties again came in contact at Cedarvale, and operations began. Bybee shot at Peterson without effect, who in return shot his antagonist through the jaw. Peterson was held for trial and was discharged, and soon afterward left the county, going to Texas. Following this escapade, Bybee fell a mortal victim to a shot fired by a man named Fell, whom Bybee had accused of stealing his horses.

Another instance of a murderous character was that which took place between a sporting man by the name of Jack McCallister, familiarly known as "Happy Jack," and L. M. Finch, the two having become involved in a difficulty, whereupon Finch shot McCallister.

In 1871 is recorded the murder of Jones by one McClarning.

The trouble arose at a dance that was held south of Sedan, a short distance, at which Jones made some remark concerning some of the ladies which the other in resenting, caused a disturbance, resulting as above related. McClarning was arrested, tried and found guilty, and is now serving out the penalty of his offense in the penitentiary.

In the spring of 1872 took place the murder of one Harper, by his brother, the scene of the affray being in the vicinity of Peru.

The quarrel from which the murder took place arose concerning a water bucket.

ORGANIZATION AND OTHER COUNTY MATTERS.

The incorporation of Chautauqua County was provided for in the act under which its formation took place, taking effect June 1, 1875. Upon that day M. B. Light, as Clerk of the county of Chautauqua, removed to Sedan, the place appointed to be the county seat by the terms of the division act. The other county officials were detained at Elk Falls by injunction, until the constitutionality of the act should be tested by the Supreme Court, the matter having been brought before that tribunal.

The constitutionality of the measure, however, was upheld by the judgment of the court; the entire matter was put to rest, and the necessary changes were made.

The sentiment of the people of Chautauqua County upon the location of the county seat was put to the test in the general election of 1875, and by this means all the disagreeable and expensive features of a county seat election were happily avoided. As a further inducement to allow the matter to remain quiet, a proposition was made by the town of Sedan, to donate a court house, in an uncompleted state, to the county, in case the county seat be allowed to remain with them, which offer was accepted. According to the terms of the promise, the substantial stone walls of a court house were at once erected, and turned over into the hands of the county authorities for the completion of the building.

By this means the county was provided with a suitable building for all needful purposes, at the minimum expenditure of only $2,500, which otherwise would have cost the county not less than $8,000. The first corps of officers elected in Chautauqua County were: Representative, H. Berry; Sheriff, J. L. Mattingly; District Clerk, T. N. King; County Clerk, E. B. Hibbard; Probate Judge, N. Wheeler; County Attorney, J. D. McBrian; Superintendent Public Instruction, J. C. Ross; Treasurer, W. W. Jones; Register of Deeds, W. F. Lemmon; Surveyor, A. Ellis; Commissioners, John Lee, E. M. Hewins, J. W. Springer; District Judge, W. P. Campbell; State Senator, H. C. St. Clair.

The present (1882) county officials are: William Boyd, Sheriff; C. M. Knapp, Clerk; E. W. Davis, Treasurer; M. B. Light, Attorney; A. Kilmer, Register of Deeds; R. G. Ward, Clerk of the District Court; N. H. Merrill, Probate Judge; D. E. Shartel, County Superintendent; A. D. Woodman, County Surveyor; C. B. Sipple, Coroner; J. E. Lewis, J. M. Short, S. Holroyd, Commissioners.

Subsequent to the organization of Howard County, the finances of the county suffered very materially from a number of causes, until the people became loaded with a weight of indebtedness, which even yet weighs upon them heavily. This indebtedness was brought about in several ways, beginning as early as 1871, when Elias Lovett, Sheriff of Chautauqua County, swindled it out of $500, and during the same year C. P. Douglas, County Treasurer, from some unknown cause, could not balance his cash account by exactly $1,662.41.

Following this, in 1874, E. D. Custer, County Treasurer, proved a defaulter to the amount of $10,000, making a total sum of more than $12,000 that had been stolen from the people of the county. In 1873, the records had been stolen, requiring heavy expenses in obtaining their recovery; the tax rolls had been destroyed, and had to be duplicated and legalized by the Legislature, by reason of which, parties in some instances were called upon to pay levies they had already paid. This, with the continued drain upon the treasury in the county seat contests, all served to pile upon the people of the county an enormous indebtedness, which at the time the division was made, amounted to nearly $60,000.

When the division of Howard County was effected, and equal division of its indebtedness was also made between the two counties into which it was formed. Thus the new county of Chautauqua sprung into existence, under the unfavorable condition of being weighed down with a debt of almost $30,000.

On the 1st day of July, 1876, the county issued bonds to the amount of $18,060, to fall due at dates ranging from 1885 to 1891, at ten per cent interest, with which the county indebtedness became funded. Later, in October of the same year, another issue of bonds was made, to the amount of $7,560, which were given in exchange for bonds already due.

The bonded indebtedness of the county in 1882 was $26,493.50, and the amount of outstanding county warrants was $873.50. The amount expended for county purposes during the last year was $15,840.92. Funds received during year, $26,343.18, and the total disbursements for the same time aggregated the same amount.

The total liabilities of the county is $37,289.37, while the assets, including the values of such property as belongs to the county in its corporate capacity, amounts to $27,843.60, or $9,445.77 less than the liabilities. The amount of outstanding school bonds at this time, and which were issued by the several school districts, amount to $16,980. From this it will be seen that the bonded indebtedness upon the people of the county for all purposes amounts to $43,473.50.

Directly upon the erection of the county, and the establishment of the county seat, it became supplied with a commodious court house. The promptness with which this want was supplied, was occasioned by the fact that one of the conditions upon which the town of Sedan was made the county seat, was that she should donate the unfinished walls of a court house to the county. The proposition was submitted by the town, and upon its being accepted by the county, no time was allowed to intervene until a compliance was made on the part of the city. Accordingly, in 1875, the substantial walls of the building were prepared and turned over into the hands of the county authorities for their completion.

It is a two-story stone structure, the lower floor being occupied by the several county offices, and the upper as a court room.

A substantial stone jail with steel cages was built in 1877. In connection with the jail is also a residence for the Sheriff of the county.

SCHOOLS, MANUFACTURES AND STATISTICS.

The first schoolhouse in Chautauqua County was erected in 1870, at the village of Elgin, in Hendricks Township, and houses in other townships were erected as follows: Salt Creek, May, 1872; Summit, summer of 1872; Caneyville, October, 1872; Harrison, summer of 1873; Lafayette, 1870; Belleville (Peru), 1875; Sedan (Sedan City), 1872; Jefferson (Cedar Vale), spring of 1872.

Since the first settlement was made in the county, the establishment and improvement of the educational department has kept even pace with the physical and material development. Schools became established in localities as rapidly as the settlements would justify, and no means were spared nor delay suffered to interpose, until suitable and convenient school privileges were secured in every part of the county. There are, at the present time, eighty-seven school districts in the county, an increase of forty-five in the last two years, each of which is supplied with a comfortable building.

The census of 1880 shows the school population of the county to be 2,097, while at present (1882) it is 4,421; or more than double what it was in 1880. The number of teachers employed in 1880 was 54, in 1882, 100. The estimated value of school property in 1880 was $4,550; in 1882, $52,200. The tax raised in 1881 for school purposes aggregated $71,242.48.

J. C. Ross was the first County Superintendent, R. G. Ward second, J. T. Bradley third and D. E. Shartel the fourth and now in office.

There are three graded schools in the county, and are located at Sedan, Peru and Cedar Vale, these being the highest order of educational institutions in the county. Considerable attention is given to the educational interests by the people of the county, great care being taken in the selection of competent and judicious men for the position of Superintendent, under whom the grade of the schools has been advanced as rapidly as practicable, and the schools will compare in point of efficiency with those of older and otherwise more advanced communities.

Chautauqua County boasts of ten manufacturing establishments, aggregating a capital of $21,900. These, however, are mostly flouring and saw mills, there being one cotton gin and a few other unimportant establishments. These are as follows:

At Cloverdale—flouring-mill, Frank Clark proprietor, capital $3,500; corn mill, W. N. Hall, proprietor, capital $600; flour mill, Tabler & Maxwell, proprietors, capital $3,500. At Sedan—Steam flour mill, M. Liebenburg & Co., proprietors, capital $3,000. At Harts Mills—flour mill, William Vail, proprietor, capital $1,000; Peru steam and water, flour and saw mill, P. M. Norris, proprietor, capital $7,000. At Mantanzas—steam saw mill, J. Pennington, proprietor, capital $800. At Peru—cotton gin, horse power, Logan, Fairfax & Co., proprietors, capital $500; saw and grist mill, H. Brauen, proprietor, capital $1,000. Harts Mills—a water-power flour mill, Maim & Kyger, proprietors, capital $1,000.

A careful attendance upon the facts exhibited from the following comparison of statistics for the years 1878, 1880 and 1882, will show the progress of development and the increase of the material wealth and prosperity of the county. In 1878, the number of taxable acres of real estate in the county was 179,108, the assessed value of which was $633,568; the value of town lots was $34,353 and of all personal property $277,786.35, or a grand total of $945,907.35. In 1880, there were 206,966 taxable acres, valued at $659,037; town lots valued at $48,849, and the aggregate value of the personal property was $319,595, making a total value of all the property in the county amounting to $1,027,481, an increase over that of 1878 of $81,573.65. In 1882, the taxable acreage of real estate was 268,901, of which there were 68,377 acres in cultivation. The assessed value of the taxable farm lands was $773,363; of town lots, $73,521; of personal property, $417,921, making, as the aggregate value of all the property in the county, the sum of $1,264,805.15, an increase over 1878 of $318,897.80, and over 1880, $237,324.15.

From these figures it will easily be determined that the increase of the value of property for the two years between 1880 and 1882 exceeds that for the same period between 1878 and 1880 to the amount of $155,750.50.

The increase in value of the live stock in 1880 over 1878 was $31,952.25; of 1882 over 1880, $113,027.75, and the increase of the same for the four years from 1878 to 1882 was $144,980.

In 1882, the number of acres planted to wheat was 1,796; rye, 44; corn, 46,430; barley, 6; oats, 698; buckwheat, 4; Irish potatoes, 366; sweet potatoes, 4; sorghum, 665; castor beans, 513; cotton, 456; flax, 348; tobacco, 5; broom corn, 19; millet and Hungarian, 6,936; timothy, 42; clover, 5.

Of fruit trees, there were in bearing 28,435 apple; 888 pear; 131,729 peach; 2,546 plum, and 8,160 cherry.

The number of fruit trees not bearing were, apple, 46,140; pear, 2,213; peach, 46,539; plum, 3,833; cherry, 10,873.

Number of acres in raspberries, 19; blackberries, 21; strawberries, 2. Number of acres in vineyard, 28, and the number of gallons of wine made, 17.

Artificial forestry has received but slight attention, there being cultivated 33 acres of walnut, 9 acres of maple, 18 of cottonwood and 43 acres of other varieties of trees.

Of dairy products, there were produced 246,865 pounds of butter and 4,830 pounds of cheese.

The value of animals slaughtered and sold for slaughter during the year was $228,308, and the production of wool amounted to 30,171 pounds.

SEDAN.

The city of Sedan, the county seat of Chautauqua County, is situated near the geographical center of the county on the middle of Caney Creek, in Sedan Township.

Until the establishment of the county seat in 1875, Sedan was an unimportant point, at which there was a store, blacksmith shop, a district school building and one or two residences. In 1873, Capt. Farris started a small store which proved unprofitable, and was taken away. He was followed by M. C. Webb and C. Tiffin, who established a business, dealing in general merchandise.

The property upon which the town was founded belonged to F. G. Bowers. When the location of the county seat was fixed, it at once became the busy site of a rapidly growing town. All attention throughout the county was centered at this spot and the process of building was brisk and continuous. Business men became established, and men of other avocations flocked in to obtain the advantages of being first established, and to hold a place, as it was destined to be the chief town in the county. Every effort to assist in its growth was made. A town company, of which L. L. Turner was made President, was formed for the purpose of furthering the project of the building of the town. The leading lights in this organization were Mr. Hewins, Titus Donaldson, Turner and Bowers. As a means of hastening the progress of the place, lots were gratuitously donated to any one who would build upon them.

After the laying off of a town, the first business house was established by L. G. Getman in the fall of 1875, followed in the spring of the next year by J. I. Crouse, who started a general store.

Those who had located at other points in the county, attracted by these flattering prospects, removed thither, and new firms became established. Indeed so rapid was the filling up of the town that in the short period of seven years, since 1875 to the present time, the town has grown from an unimportant country trading point to a city of 1,000 inhabitants. Large business houses supply the demands of a wide, extended and flourishing trade. Substantial brick and stone business blocks adorn the streets, while numerous tasteful residences embellish the outskirts, and back grounds. An air of neatness, thrift and enterprise is everywhere visible, the merchants and tradesmen are industrious and prospering, and everything speaks favorable for the future of the city.

A post office, under the name of Sedan Post Office, was established in April, 1871, and James Dasher held the appointment of Postmaster.

Shortly following this the office was discontinued, there not being sufficient demand for it, and the office was kept at Ross City, about eight miles west of Sedan. On the 1st of October, 1874, however, it was opened under a re-establishment, under the official management of S. U. Stearns.

A. H. King succeeded to the appointment of Postmaster, and began the exercise of his official duties January 1, 1876, which he held until the regular installment of J. T. Hamar, April 1, 1878. Hamar's cupidity was equaled only by his necessities, and being unable to resist the self-appropriation of the pelf he was called upon to handle officially, and after collecting the sum of $1,000 together, absconded, leaving the office to take charge of itself, and the Government Department so much money behind. His whereabouts, however, was discovered and the authorities held communication with him, the arrangement being such that he is permitted to make up the deficit.

Following the defaulting and dethronement of Hamar, D. J. Moore took charge of the office on May 31, 1880, and has since that time occupied the position. The office is now graded as a fourth-class office.

CITY GOVERNMENT AND OFFICERS.

By an order made by W. P. Campbell, then Judge of the District Court, pursuant to a petition presented as required by law, the town of Sedan became incorporated as a city of the third class on the 16th of March, 1876, and an election for the choosing of officers was ordered to be held on April 3 following, and J. I. Crouse, R. S. Turner and G. W. Mullinix were appointed Judges of Election. Frank Addleman and E. B. Lansing, Clerks, and J. D. McBrian, L. P. Getman and R. M. Ross as a board to canvass the votes:

The election was held upon the appointed day, and the following persons were elected to the various official places: A. H. King, Mayor; R. S. Turner, J. P. Rhoads, J. W. Sitton, C. S. Tiffin, J. I. Crouse, Councilmen; F. P. Addleman, Clerk; J. I. Crouse, Treasurer; W. H. Tibbits, City Attorney; G. W. Mullinix, Police Judge; W. D. Jolly, Marshal.

The present city officers are L. L. Turner, Mayor; James Milton, Police Judge; T. N. King, J. R. Tulloss, R. S. Turner, M. Liebenberg, H. H. Albright, Councilmen; M. C. Webb, Treasurer; T. T. Ball, Clerk; C. J. Peckham, City Attorney; C. M. Ellis, Marshal; Dexter Wade, Assistant Marshal.

The matter of education and the establishment of a school had received attention long before the idea of founding a town came into existence. As early as 1872, a district school was provided and a school building erected, which stood upon what was afterward selected as the town site. This same building served the town for school purposes as late as 1877, when the increase of the school population demanded enlarged accommodations. With this a two-story addition was appended to the old house, affording in all the advantages of three apartments. This has now become insufficient for the necessities of the schools, and calls are made for still further enlargement, in consequence of which efforts are being made to secure the erection of a building sufficiently commodious to satisfy all the demands for this purpose. The schools, having an enrollment of 354 pupils, were graded during the fall of 1880 by Prof. J. B. Sands, and comprise two primary, two intermediate and the grammar school departments. The instruction afforded is generally regarded as most excellent and efficient under Prof. J. B. Sands as Principal, Miss Ada Wellington teacher of the first primary, and Miss Anna Taylor, teacher of the second primary, Miss Belle Taylor, teacher of the first intermediate, and T. W. Tout, teacher of second intermediate departments.

The good people living in the vicinity of where the city of Sedan now stands received occasional visitations from itinerant missionaries, who declared to them, not always in very eloquent sentences, the doctrines of religion and the prospects of salvation. With what effect this was done cannot, of course, be determined, but from the attending circumstances it would be exceedingly unwise to imagine that any miraculous change was performed. At this time and place churches were not numerous, nor disciples superabundant.

The Methodists were earliest in the enterprise of establishing a church in the town. This was effected in the fall of 1876 by "Old Father Record," a local preacher. The denomination started off weak and halting, having only six members, but the few were faithful and kept together, securing accessions as fast as the possibilities would admit. The first services were held in the school building, in which they remained until their church edifice was erected.

The church was incorporated April 22, 1878, at which time immediate steps were put forth looking to the erection of a church. The effort proved successful, and during the summer of 1878 the building was completed ready for occupancy, costing $1,600, and during the fall was dedicated to spiritual uses by Rev. D. P. Mitchell. The congregation, now numbering fifty members, is in a flourishing condition under the pastorate of Rev. J. N. Bealls.

The United Brethren Church became established in Sedan in the summer of 1878 by the Rev. J. B. McCue. The services were conducted in the schoolhouse until the erection of a church, which took place in 1880, the house costing $2,000; is a neat one-story brick building forty-five feet in length by twenty-eight feet in width, and finished with a towering spire. The church is in charge of Rev. John Blake, and has a membership of twenty-four.

The Presbyterian Church was organized with ten members in the early spring of 1880, under the direction of Rev. A. H. Lackey, of Peabody Several of the ladies of the town, however, were the prime movers in the work, chief among whom were Mrs. E. A. Merrill and Mrs. M. E. Mathews. The place of organization was in the court room, in which services have since been held, and which are now conducted by Rev. Reuben Hahn, the congregation numbering seventeen members.

The Baptist Church was organized in April, 1882. This also was chiefly the work of several ladies zealous in the cause, the chief of whom were Mrs. Albright and Mrs. L. Kilmer, The congregation numbering twenty members, hold services regularly in the court room on the second Sabbath of each month, conducted by Rev. F. L. Walker.

THE PRESS AND SOCIETIES.

The first news journal established in the town was the Wide Awake, which began its issue in June, 1874, by Joseph Mount, a mute. The paper, however, was short lived, having run only little over a year, when it expired in September, 1875.

The Chautauqua Journal was brought here from Elk Falls, where it had been established in 1873 by Ward & Pyle, who sold out in December of that year, to Kelly & Turner. After nearly three years, the removal to Sedan was made, where the firm continued the publication of the paper until January, 1879, at which time it was sold, being purchased by R. H. Turner, the present editor and proprietor. It is a seven-column folio in size, all home print, Republican in politics, and has a circulation of 900 copies.

The Sedan Times first began its existence under the title of the Chautauqua Times, in May, 1878, and was owned by P. H. Albright. On the 1st of July, 1880, it was sold to A. D. Dunn, who changed the name of the paper to its present title, March 1, 1881. At first it was a six-column folio, but on May 1, 1881, was changed to a seven-column folio, and in May, 1882, was enlarged to a six-column quarto, its present size. The paper at first was Democratic in politics, but at a subsequent date was changed in sentiment, becoming an advocate of Republicanism, and has a circulation of 675 copies.

The fraternal spirit among the inhabitants of the town is proven conclusively by the establishment of its secret orders, of which there are four in excellent working condition:

Vesper Lodge, No. 136, A., F. & A. M., was instituted under a dispensation from the Grand Lodge, on July 23, 1872, by J. M. Nevins, of Independence, who was named as special Deputy Grand Master for this purpose. On October 16, 1873, the lodge was duly chartered and started upon its mission with seven members. The first officers of the lodge were:

L. P. Getman, Worshipful Master; D. J. Moore, Senior Warden; J. L. Dewey, Junior Warden; Norris Harer, Treasurer; Thomas Stanley, Secretary; J. H. King, Senior Deacon; J. W. Guill, Junior Deacon.

The present officers are C. M. Turner, Worshipful Master; A. H. King, Senior Deacon; J. W. Johnston, Junior Deacon; J. E. Lewis, Treasurer; D. J. Moore, Secretary; J. D. McBrian, Senior Deacon; C. Roe, Junior Deacon; R. R. Turner, Tiler.

The society now has sixty-four members, and is in fine working order, supplied with all the necessary equipments of wardrobe and emblems for the performance of all rites and ceremonies.

The Syroc Chapter, No. 42, R. A. M., became established in the summer of 1880, and was chartered February 15, 1881. The institution took place under W. H. Waters, of Independence, Special Deputy Grand Master.

The officers elected were: L. P. Getman, High Priest; B. E. Bius, King; R. S. Turner, Scribe.

The lodge began weak, but has continued to increase its membership slowly, and at present numbers thirteen members under the official control of B. E. Bius, High Priest; R. S. Turner, King; J. E. Lewis, Scribe.

Sedan Lodge, No. 141, I. O. O. F., was instituted April 18, 1877, with five charter members, viz.: W. W. Jones, J. W. Sitton, Ezra Hayden, L. C. Walt and R. S. Turner. The membership of the lodge has steadily increased, and now numbers about forty-three. At present the lodge is officered as follows: J. S. Wade, Noble Grand; John R. Butler, Vice Grand; O. G. Hayes, Recording Secretary; W. F. Lemmon, Permanent Secretary; B. E. Bius, Treasurer; A. C. Mathews, Warden; M. T. Evans, Conductor.

PERU.

In the southeastern part of Chautauqua County, in the valley of Middle Caney Creek, lies the village of Peru.

The existence of the place takes date July, 1870. The land upon which it is built was entered by a town company composed of E. R. Cutler, L. Blanchard, D. B. Teeny, C. A. Zinglefield, Patrick Looby and John Lee and others, comprising in all ten shares of $100 each. The entry was made upon a full quarter-section, but a part of this was contested by A. Johnston, who succeeded in establishing his right to forty acres of it, leaving the town company only 120 acres. But forty acres of this was sold in order to get money to deed the balance, and the site was then cut down to eighty acres. Later, two tracts, one of twenty acres and the other of fifteen, were taken off from this, thus leaving a tract of forty-five acres, which measures the area of the present town site.

The first structure erected upon the site was a log house belonging to F. F. Spurlock, in which he placed a stock of general merchandise in 1869. He was followed by David Clark, who began business in the same line the next spring. During the same year, H. Brown built a small frame house, in the front part of which he kept a saloon, and a hotel in the rear.

A hotel of respectable size was soon afterward built by a man named Crow, and the house was familiarly known as the "Crow House" or "Crow's Nest." In October, 1870, J. S. Cunningham and C. H. Inglefield established a hardware business as a branch from the house of W. T. Cunningham & Company, of Oswego, Kan., which continued as a branch business until May, 1872, when Inglefield severed his relations with the firm and purchased the entire business at this place.

About the same time, H. C. Draper began the grocery business as a branch of an Oswego house, and in September, 1871, sold out to F. Thomas, who has since added boots and shoes to the stock.

Several business establishments were begun during 1870. Besides those already named, there was a grocery house by L. R. Close, a general store by N. N. Smith and a similar business by J. Sheldon. James Alford started a saloon, as did also L. Stauffer.

The society at this time was very much disorganized, and a good many rough characters abounded in the vicinity. Drunkenness was looked upon as a matter of course, and post mortem examinations were a common thing. A grave-yard was started as a "potter's field," in which the unfortunates found a final resting-place. Out of nine persons who were the first buried in the spot, seven "died with their boots on."

The post office was established here in the summer of 1870, and David Clark held the appointment as Postmaster. At this time there was no Government mail line, and the citizens were compelled to "chip in" and hire some one to ride to Independence for the mails. The office was first kept in Clark's store-house, a small frame which he had built for merchandising purposes. After about a year, Clark was succeeded in the office by A. E. Line, who in about two years gave way to S. D. Moore, and he in turn was succeeded by the present incumbent, A. B. Garlinghouse.

The first school was taught in the place in 1870, by a man named Ward, a sort of Baptist preacher. The school was raised upon subscription, there being no regularly organized district. A school building was erected in the spring of 1872, for the building of which the district voted bonds to the amount of $2,000. The district was organized in the fall of 1871. The house was a frame one, 24x50 feet in its dimensions, finished with belfry and bell. In June, 1879, a light tornado swept across the town, and the schoolhouse was one among the several buildings that was dilapidated by the storm. The house, however, was at once rebuilt, for which the district voted bonds a second time to the amount of $1,000.

The earliest divine mininistrations were held in the town in 1871, by Father Records, and the services were conducted in the second story of a building, the first of which was in use at the time as a saloon. The congregation organized in 1872, but being extremely weak soon fell through, and has not since revived. A congregation of the Christian denomination became organized as a church in 1879, and is in a healthy condition. The body began the erection of a church building in the spring of 1882.

The only secret order in the town is that of Peru Lodge, No. 106, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. This society was instituted in 1873, with six charter members, as follows: E. Hayden, A. Howden, N. N. Smith, J. K. Slaughter, James Sprague and Joseph Baker. During the night of its institution, the order took in thirteen members, which has since liberally increased and at the present there are thirty-five. The present officers of the lodge are R. M. Hartzell, Noble Grand; G. M. Stearns, Vice Grand; C. H. Inglefield, Secretary; F. Thomae, Treasurer; J. W. Morrison, Past Grand. The financial standing of the lodge is excellent, having $1,000 in the treasury. It has also become supplied with a building for lodge purposes.

A water and steam flouring mill was erected in 1874, by A. Norris, since deceased. The mill is now owned by his son, P. M. Norris. The establishment contains three run of buhrs; two for wheat and one for corn, the whole costing when completed about $8,000.

At the election for the location of a county seat for Howard County, in 1871, Peru became the favored spot, and the seat of government for the county was taken from Elk Falls to this place. In this, as in all new countries, the county seat means the best town in the county, and in consequence all eyes became directed toward Peru. Building became brisk and the growth of the town was extremely rapid. Everything now pointed to its future importance and greatness. But the greatest prosperity is sometimes overtaken by adversity, and so was it to be with Peru; so long as she retained the seat of government she enjoyed gratifying prosperity; but the day of removal was at hand, and by an election by the people in 1873, the county seat was returned to its former place at Elk Falls. The scene of commotion was changed. Like a nomadic tribe the people of the town halting again at Elk Falls, where the county seat was unloaded. With this misfortune, Peru at once fell to decay, the glitter of her prospects became corroded, and in the changes of a day she lost that prestige which she has never since been able to recover. But Peru, although unimportant as a town, is a good trading point, and with its surroundings is destined to witness a moderate growth and prosperity. The place now contains a population of 250, and eight good business houses. A newspaper was established in the town in November, 1875, by S. P. Moore & Son, which continued in operation for several years, and then suspended issue. There is no newspaper now published in the town.

He then located some land in Bellville Township, on Section 15, Howard County, and secured a farm of 257 acres, which he lived upon and improved. CHAUTAUQUA SPRINGS.

This little city sprang into existence August 10, 1881. The presence of mineral springs, highly celebrated for the medical properties of the waters, was the chief incentive to its starting.

The place is situated in the south part of Chautauqua County, about eight miles south of the city of Sedan, and one mile from the picturesque Indian Territory. Its surroundings are beautiful, lying as it does on the brink of a small rocky cañon, a branch of Turkey Creek, from which stream it is a short distance. The landscape is interestingly diversified with hill, cañon and rocky cliff, and is covered with a dense growth of shrub and timber. The city lies in the midst of a grove of forest trees, much of the timber being allowed to remain, giving it the appearance of a city in the woods.

The first house erected on the site belonged to B. F. Bennett, which e used for a drug store. Following this, during the fall, and in almost consecutive order, was the establishment of a dry goods house, by T. J. Johnston, a livery barn by F. M. Fairbanks, dry goods store by Thomas Bryant, a grocery and provision store by Bennett & Binns, and a drug store by George Edwards. In February, 1882, "Dick" Foster opened a stock of hardware, which he sold to W. Williams, in September of the same year. About the same time C. C. Purcell began the drug business. A grocery store belonging to James Randall was opened in October, 1881, and about the same time Mrs. Bush started a millinery establishment. James Sipples opened a dry goods store in August, 1882. Besides these, there are also two livery barns, two blacksmith shops, two wagon shops, and a saw mill belonging to James Allreid, who began the business in December, 1881.

The first hotel was built by a man named Castleberry, who ran it about six months, and after changing hands several times, it is still used as a hotel, of which there are now three in the city. Two of these, the Ginn and Meeks houses, are small affairs; but the other, the Eagle Hotel, erected in June, 1882, by James Ferguson, is the finest public house in the county. It is a large two-story stone structure, seventy feet long and forty feet wide, containing twenty-five rooms, having accommodations for about sixty guests. The house is constructed with long verandas on two sides, and on either floor. It stands on the slope of the cañon, a few steps from the springs, and overlooks the deeper cañon of Turkey Creek, and the beautifully timbered hills, stretching far away in the smoky distance, into the Indian Territory.

The original town site comprised eighty acres, one-half of which belonged to Dr. G. W. Woolsey, and the other half to Dr. T. J. Dunn, to which additions of forty acres each were made by J. C. Kiles, Binns and B. F. Bennett, making a total in the town site of 200 acres. The place was incorporated as a city of the third class in February, 1882, and Thomas Bryant was elected Mayor; S. Booth, Clerk; I. H. Wilson, Treasurer; B. F. Atkinson, Marshall, and M. O. Shoupp, N. M. Lee, F. A. Fairbanks, E. Moore and S. Cheny, Councilmen.

At the regular city election held in April, 1882, E. P. Moore was chosen Mayor; S. Booth, Clerk; I. H. Wilson, Treasurer, and F. A. Fairbanks, M. O. Shoupp, N. M. Lee, S. Cheny and C. E. Moore, Councilmen.

The educational advantages of the city are in common with those of the country district within which it is included, the district having been organized and the house built in 1880. It is situated outside of the city limits, a short distance. Religious services are held at periodical times by the Baptist, Methodist, United Brethren and Church of Christ denominations in the schoolhouse, there being no regular church building provided.

The press has only a brief history at the place, only one attempt at journalism having been made. This was the establishment of the paper called the Chautauqua Springs Spy, on May 19, 1882, by C. E. Moore and L. G. B. McPheron, and is a seven-column folio, independent in politics, and has a circulation of 350 copies.

THE SPRINGS.

The main attraction in the city and the cause which gave rise to its building, is the presence of the mineral springs. These springs are highly valued on account of the medical properties contained in the waters, which are regarded invaluable in the cure of a variety of chronic sores and other diseases. The curative properties of these waters are known, not only through medical and chemical analysis, but are also attested by the apparently miraculous cures effected by their experimental use and application in many instances.

The discovery of these springs was made in 1873, by Dr. Minna, a physician who practiced in the vicinity at that time. It was his custom, when riding by, to drink of the water, and although recognizing the presence of mineral taste in them, yet made no further analysis. His belief during all this time, however, was that, possibly, there were in these same waters medical ingredients that might prove valuable in the healing of diseases. In the latter years of his life the Doctor was afflicted with dropsy, and for a long time was under the treatment of medical skill, from which he derived little benefit.

Finally the physicians gave up the case as incurable, and the old Doctor turning to the scriptural injunction of "Physician heal thyself," concluded, as a last hope, to try the waters which he had discovered. A quantity of the water was brought, of which he made frequent use and application, and from which he believed himself to experience much benefit. But the old man had too long been weighed down with the wasting disease, and the "treatment of physicians," to ever hope to regain health from any cause, and at length passed away, leaving, as a testimonial, his belief that had he begun the use of the water in time, he would have succeeded in removing the disease, and been restored to health.

Nothing was done toward making further test of these mineral springs until opened by Dr. G. W. Woolsey in August, 1880. The spring is neatly and substantially walled up, and is constructed with a large basin for holding the water, the whole being covered by a commodious spring house, tastefully built, paved with flag rock, and conveniently seated with benches. An analysis of the waters was made by practical chemists of some note, of the cities of St. Joseph and Kansas City, showing the water to contain, in different proportions, iron, potassium, salts and magnetic gas.

While excavating the earth, in opening up the spring, the workmen struck upon rocks, standing upright, and arranged in a sort of basin shape, presenting evidence that it had been the handiwork of man, and giving rise to the theory that perhaps one day these waters were known to some Indian tribe, who made use of them in their primitive way, for the curing of disease.

The curative properties of these springs is as yet but little known, and it is safe to predict that when their efficacy shall become known to the world, and a thorough test is made, hundreds will flock in to partake of the benefits of the healing fountain.

The city as yet presents an appearance of newness, the most of the houses being unpainted and scattered.

The population of the town at this time numbers about 300, to which addition is being made by the incoming of settlers almost constantly.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

B. F. BARRETT, merchant, was born in Medina County, Ohio, in 1831; in 1839, located in Trumbull County, remaining there until 1845; then, until 1861, was traveling through New York and Pennsylvania; from 1861 to 1866, was in Ohio; thence to Omaha, Neb., and after a few months located at Kansas City, where he remained until 1869. He then came to Kansas, locating in Howard County, on a claim five miles west of Howard City, on Clear Creek; the survey was not made, and it was eighty-five miles from a railroad. Was among the pioneers of the county, and after improving his place and remaining there two years, sold out and engaged in the stock business in the south part of the county, now Chautauqua County, and was in this business until 1881. He then bought a lot in the new town of Chautauqua Springs, and built the first business house in the place and put in the first stock of goods, consisting of groceries; at the end of six months, closed out his groceries and put in a stock of drugs. Mr. Barrett has built up a good trade and has made a host of friends. His trade has grown 50 per cent during the past year. In 1852, was married to Miss Annie Grenning, of Williams County, Ohio.

ERI BENNETT, merchant, was born in Wayne County, N. Y., in 1844; emigrated with his parents to Knox County, Ill., there working with his father at the wagon-maker's trade. In 1862, he enlisted in the One Hundred and Second Illinois Infantry, Company F, and served three years; was in the famous march with Sherman to the sea, serving as a scout most of the time. After coming out of the army he returned to Knox County, and there learned the miller's trade; then in 1871, he came to Kansas and took a claim in Summit Township, Howard County, and improved the place, engaging in farming until the summer of 1881; health failing, he then engaged in the mercantile business with Mr. Binns, of Sedan. In the fall of 1882, went to Chautauqua Springs and laid out forty acres in town lots, and these were known as Binns & Bennett's Addition to Chautauqua Springs. He then put up a store building, and put in a stock of goods and has a good trade; the business is carried on under the firm name of Binns & Bennett. The subject of this sketch expects to erect a steam flouring mill in the near future. Mr. Bennett is a thorough business man, and has been successful in all his business moves. He came to Kansas and settled eighty miles from a railroad point. In October, 1871, was married to Miss E. L. Allen, of Monmouth, Ill.; they have four children—Sylvia F., W. Elmo, Walter A. and Edwin D.

JAMES FERGUSON, proprietor of the Eagle Hotel, was born in Scotland in 1836; when twenty-two years of age he emigrated to America, locating at York, Clark Co., Ill., and remained there until 1861; he then enlisted in the Tenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was discharged on account of disability; but in 1862, re-enlisted in the same regiment, serving until the close of the war; he was wounded at Dallas, Ga. In June, 1865, he received his discharge at Chicago, and returned to Clark County and engaged in farming. In the fall of 1870, emigrated to Kansas and took a claim in Belleville Township, Howard County (now Chautauqua); this was before the survey, and he was one of the pioneers of the town. He then improved his place and lived there about ten years, when he sold out and engaged in contracting on the Southern Pacific and Atlantic & Pacific Railroads for about eighteen months. He then returned to his old home and bought lots in Chautauqua Springs and built a fine hotel 40x70 feet, two stories and basement; the house contains twenty-five rooms and in the basement are four bathrooms which are supplied with hot and cold baths, the water of which is supplied from the noted mineral springs of that place; the hotel and goods cost $10,000. The hotel was built as an invalids' hotel and is one of the largest and best hotels in Southern Kansas; Mr. Ferguson is a genial landlord and takes all imaginable pains in making it pleasant for his guests, and all those going there for treatment will receive the best accommodations at reasonable prices. He was married in 1867, at Robinson, Crawford Co., Ill., to Miss Mary A. Brown; they have six children—Robert, George, John, James, Jr., Colista and Helen.

STEPHEN JOHNSON, real estate agent, was born in Lincolnshire, England, in 1839; when nineteen years of age, he emigrated to America, locating at Forestville, N. Y., remaining there four years. In 1862, he went to Freeport, Ill., and was there about three years, thence to Waterloo, Iowa, remaining there four years. In 1871, emigrated to Kansas, locating at Arkansas City before the Government survey, located on a claim which he improved, remaining there about six years; coming from there to Chautauqua County, and took a claim on Section 12, Town 35, Range 11, Belleville Township, and remained on this place five years, improving the place and engaged in farming. In 1882, he bought a half interest in the original town site of Chautauqua Springs, consisting of eighty acres, laid out in nearly 500 lots, and at once began to deal in real estate and to try and build up the town. There are seven valuable springs on the town site, six of which contain mineral with great healing properties, they have improved one of the springs at a cost of $600, and are at work on the second, which will cost $300, complete, and will build a bath house 18x24, with four bath rooms, which will be arranged for hot or cold baths, and, as there have been many cases of miraculous cures during the past year, they expect to have a good many patients as soon as they get everything in readiness. Besides these improvements, Mr. Johnson is arranging to build a steam flouring mill in company with Eri Bennett; they will put in two run of wheat buhrs and one of corn which will be the most valuable improvement in the place, and if they do this they will certainly have laid a good foundation for the growth of the town. Mr. Johnson served nearly a year in the Ninety-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry. In 1866, he was married to Miss Jane Helm, of Cedar Falls, Iowa; they have one son and one daughter—William T. and Mandana H. He is a member of the G. A. R.

CEDAR VALE.

On the 20th of November, 1869, J. R. Marsh left the city of Emporia, journeying toward the southwest in the hope of finding somewhere in the southern part of Kansas, a place of settlement and rest.

After several days of wandering he came to the Valley of Big Caney Creek or river, and being impressed with its beauty and fertility he concluded to spend a few days in exploring it. Although much beautiful and unoccupied land lay along the stream, yet he came to prospect for a place that might prove advantageous for selection as a town site, as well as to locate claims for himself and friends. His first idea was that the site where Cloverdale now is was auspicious for his wishes, and he concluded to make settlement at that place. Upon a second review of the matter he became convinced that perhaps a better selection might be made, and after a careful and judicious weighing of the prospects, etc., determined that the country where Cedar Vale now is, offered advantages in point of surroundings superior to any other along the valley; being far enough from the Indian Territory to shut out the building of a town farther down the valley and also near enough to other prospective points above to discourage the establishment of any place between them; thus absolutely securing the trade of a large scope of country. Upon these considerations he selected his claims and awaited patiently further development.

In the meantime a number of enterprising settlers came in and took claims in the vicinity, among whom were Frederick Kantz, Eli Titus, A. Halverson, S. Gunderson, David Koogle. The matter of establishing a town was talked of among these parties, and an organization into a town company was made for the furtherance of the project, of which Fred. Kantz was made President and Eli Titus, Treasurer. The selection of a site was the next thing to be determined.

Four points along the valley stood prominently before the company, viz.: Osrow, Cedar Vale, Cloverdale and a point called Lookout Mountain. After due consideration the choice was made in March, 1870, and Cedar Vale became the favored spot, being so named from the presence of a few cedar trees which grew not far away, this species of timber being rare in this part of the country. The site was located on unoccupied land which must first be deeded before the company could hold it. Accordingly it fell upon E. W. Davis, one of the company, to file upon the land and to procure a deed for the same, and which he was to turn over to the company as soon as this was done. When it came time for the transfer of the property to be made, some dissensions had been awakened in the company and Davis refused to deed them the land. This refusal caused much indignation among the members who, perhaps, under the circumstances had no legal remedy, and a resort to physical force was determined upon, and threats of hanging Davis were made, through the stern influence of which the company wrung from his hands the coveted instrument.

The legal title to the lands occupied by the town site, was now vested in the company, and everything ready to begin the work of building up the town. The town was advertised in the Eureka Herald, a paper printed at Eureka, Greenwood County, for which the editor received one share of the company's stock, the shares being valued at $10 each.

A proposition to build the first house was made in June, 1870, in which J. R. Marsh agreed to furnish the material, provided some other members would put it into a house. Accordingly, Marsh cut and drew logs to the place, but no one volunteered to erect the building, and after permitting the material to lie unused for awhile, Marsh at length drew them away and made a building of them on his own premises.

In November of the same year, J. R. Marsh, Charles Snyder and O. C. Hill, built the first store room and the first building in the town, in which they opened a stock of goods, and in which the post office was first kept. Immediately following this a company composed of F. Kantz, L. Garrett, A. Holverson and Charles Snyder, was formed for the purpose of building a hotel, which was run a short time as a public house, and was sold to D. G. Kenneson for a store room. The next house was built by Riley Brothers, which they occupied with a stock of general goods, and the next was built by three brothers named Grant, and was used as a boarding house by Luke Phelps, and soon afterward as a dwelling by a man named Tubs.

E. W. Davis and E. B. Slocum, as the firm of Slocum & Davis, began dealing in general goods, having erected a house for that purpose.

Previous to these, and immediately following the building of the company hotel, Dr. A. A. Corbin put up a store room in which he kept a stock of drugs, this being the same house now occupied by G. Baird as a hotel, it having since been enlarged by the erection of additions.

Tubs established the first blacksmith shop in the fall of 1870, and in the next spring Woods began the same business. A man named Lynch erected a hall; O. Howard a store room, in which he kept a stock of general merchandise; Mrs. Smith built a hotel, and S. Hill a millinery store; G. Lapp built a room in which he kept a saloon, and is the building now occupied by Dr. Donaldson with a stock of drugs.

These improvements were made during the fall of 1870, and the spring and summer of 1871. Dwelling houses were erected as the necessities demanded, and the town grew steadily and healthily until at the present time it numbers a population of 250, and contains four general stores, two drug stores, two hardware stores, two blacksmith shops, one wagon shop, one repair shop with turning lathe, two livery barns and two hotels.

A grist and flouring mill was built in 1871 by D. F. Tabler, and was a small "one horse concern" propelled by water-power. In 1880, the old mill was torn away and replaced with a commodious new one, the best of the kind in the county. It is run by both water and steam power, and contains two run of buhrs.

Down the Big Caney Valley a distance of four miles, stood the town of Osrow, which started about the same time as Cedar Vale, and which she aspired to rival. For awhile, the place grew equally rapid with Cedar Vale, and although she did not discourage the founders of that place yet she gave them considerable uneasiness. The nearness of the two places made certain the fact that sure death and extinction was the destiny of one or the other, which served to stimulate exertions on the part of both. At length Cedar Vale secured the ascendency and outstripped her rival, and Osrow soon was numbered with things that had been.

A post office called Cedar Vale was located at a point about a mile and a half north of where the town now is, and was established in the spring of 1870, with J. R. Marsh as Postmaster, the office being kept in a house on the claim belonging to David Koogle. The office remained at this point until June, at which time it was taken to a place owned by J. R. Marsh, now known as the "Wheeler farm," about a mile and a half north of the town site.

In November, 1870, the office was removed to the town and was kept in the store-room of Marsh, Hill & Co. Marsh held the position of Postmaster until January, 1872, at which time he was succeeded by W. P. Lynch, who in turn gave way to Charles R. Pollard, the present incumbent.

The first celebration held in the town was on the Fourth of July, 1870, at which it was estimated there was in attendance a crowd of not less than one thousand people, gathered in from all surrounding points. This, for the time and place, was regarded as a large number of people to assemble on such an occasion. Dr. William Stover was orator of the day. Amusements of a primitive and rude character were indulged in, and the day passed off as one of pleasant and peaceful enjoyment. Great solicitude was felt at Cedar Vale as to what should be done for a flag for the day, none being at hand, nor no place near where it could be secured. But to hold a celebration of this kind without a flag would be no celebration at all. So thought many of those interested in the affair, and a party was dispatched to Eureka, where the material was procured, and a few of the zealous ones spent the previous night in making a flag to be used at the celebration of the next day. The significant emblem was completed and in readiness, and the dawn of the famous day witnessed it waving in the breezes, and, although hastily and crudely prepared, yet each recurring Fourth of July sees it floating over the wooden buildings of the little town.

A school district for the town of Cedar Vale and the immediate vicinity was organized May 30, 1871. A preliminary meeting or convention was held to elect a School Board, of which J. R. Marsh was President and A. A. Corbin, Secretary, and a board was elected, consisting of G. W. Dale, Director; O. C. Hills, Clerk, and E. W. Davis, Treasurer. A petition was circulated for signers, asking that an election be called for the purpose of taking a vote on the question of whether bonds should be issued by the district for the building of a schoolhouse. The election was called to be held September 21, 1871, of which five notices were posted in different parts of the district, resulting in favor of the bonds by a majority of twenty-one votes, the vote being twenty-six for, to five against, the bonds. Bonds were at once issued and their sale negotiated at 85 cents on the dollar. The contract for the erection of a schoolhouse to cost $700 was awarded to Bennett & Smith. The building was erected during the winter and spring, and on the 30th of April, 1872, after some caviling over the defects in the construction of the house, it was received by the board.

The first school in the village was taught by Miss Lizzie Conkling in the summer of 1872, and was held in the new school building, with an attendance of thirty-three pupils, fourteen of whom were boys, and nineteen, girls. The district now contains 151 pupils of school age, 126 of whom attended school during the past year.

A commodious new school building was erected in the fall of 1882, at a cost, including furniture, etc., of $1,500, and is a very handsome building, constructed of unchiseled sandstone. It is one story high, comprising but a single large room

The first religious meeting in Cedar Vale was in 1872, services being held by "Old Father Record" at that date, in the school building. At intervals following this, other itinerant preachers held services in the town. A congregation was organized by the Methodists, as the first in the town, and held their worship in the schoolhouse until the erection of a church in 1878. The building is a one-story stone structure and remains yet unfinished, the congregation being weak and the raising of funds a matter of difficulty.

The Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Free-Will Baptists and Universalists have also organizations, but are extremely weak, both in membership and finances.

In 1856, he emigrated to Kansas, locating in Douglas County; was there during the border troubles, and served in the militia, which was raised there for the protection of the settlers. He located a claim near Lawrence, and commenced to improve his place, but was obliged to leave it on account of the troubles with the border ruffians, they burning his house and taking his team on one of their raids. In 1862, he enlisted in the Twelfth Kansas Infantry, serving three years; a part of the time was on detailed duty acting as guide for Government trains through Louisiana. During a skirmish on Cow Creek, in the Indian Territory in 1864, was severely wounded, and was captured, but was paroled on the field. In 1869, he came to Howard County (now Chautauqua) and settled on Grant Creek, his wife being the first white woman on the creek. It was 175 miles to a railroad point, and 100 miles to a point where supplies could be had, and about sixty miles to a post office. The Indians still claimed the land where his claim was located, and there was a camp of 500 near his place the most of the time during the first summer, but they were friendly, and made little trouble. His claim is on Section 34, Township 33, Range 9. He now has a farm of 240 acres watered by the creek, with plenty of timber, and it is one of the best stock farms on the creek. At that time, it was 100 miles from a railroad, and for a time, that was the nearest point where supplies could be had. At the end of three years, Mr. K. sold out, and the firm was known as Cox & Baloo for one year. Since then, Mr. Cox has been carrying on the business alone; he has a store 22x56, with ware-room, and handles a fine line of goods, and has built up a large trade, his present sales being nearly double the first year's trade. He was married in 1859, at New Hampton, N. H., to Miss Martha Harris. They have two children—Estella N. and Lumni M. He is a member of the Masonic order.

In 1867, he emigrated to Kansas with his father, Col. Samuel Donelson, locating in Crawford County, where they engaged in the stock business. In 1868, they moved their business to Labette County, remaining there until the spring of 1870; then came into Howard County, as they supposed, and again engaged in the stock business, but which proved to be in the Indian Territory when the survey was made. In the fall of 1870, the subject of this sketch returned to Labette County, and resumed the study of medicine remaining there two years, and in the winter of 1874-75 finished his course, and was graduated at the medical department of the University of Louisville, Ky. It was 120 miles to a railroad point, and there were but few settlers. He improved his claim and lived there for ten years; he then traded for a farm on Sections 11 and 12, Township 33, Range 8, on the Big Caney River, and proceeded to make a stock farm of it. His place contains 800 acres, with forty-eight acres of timber, and all conveniences for stock-raising; 640 acres are inclosed by fence, 200 acres in cultivation, and good house, and orchard of two and one-half acres; and has the place stocked with forty cows. Besides this, he owns one-half interest in 250 head of fat cattle, and will make it a point to fatten that number or more each season. A. HOLVERSON, farmer, P. O Cedar Vale, was born in Norway in 1825. In 1839, he emigrated to America, locating at Beloit, Wis., and engaged in farming, remaining there until 1869; emigrating from there to Kansas, locating in Howard County (now Chautauqua), and located a claim on Section 1, Township 34, Range 8. The survey had not been made, and the land belonged to the Indians, and for two years he paid a rent or tax of $5 for the use of the land. There were but few settlers in the county at the time, and the nearest neighbor on the north was thirty miles distant, and the nearest railroad was 175 miles, and nothing in the shape of supplies could be had nearer than Eureka, eighty miles distant, and for a time this was the nearest post office. Mr. Holverson has a fine farm on the Caney River bottoms, with plenty of timber and water; has 100 acres under cultivation, with good fences, hedges and orchard, large stone residence, good barns and sheds; and the place is well stocked with 125 head of cattle, 30 hogs, 1,000 sheep and 10 horses. O. HOLVERSON, farmer, P. O. Cedar Vale, was born in Beloit, Wis., in 1848, and lived there with his parents until 1869, when he emigrated to Kansas with his father, locating in Howard County (now Chautauqua), locating a claim on the Big Caney River, and is now the oldest settler on the river except his father. The land then belonged to the Indians. The country abounded in game of all kinds. The nearest railroad point was 175 miles distant, and he went about 100 miles for supplies. His claim is on Sections 1 and 2, Township 34, Range 8, consisting of 160 acres of fine valley land, which is watered by the Big Caney River, with an abundance of timber along its banks. He has improved the place by fencing, planting hedges, and a fine orchard. Ninety acres of land are cultivated. He has built a fine residence, and other farm buildings. This place is one of the finest in the county, and is desirably located for stock-raising, which business Mr. Holverson has been engaged in for some time, having stocked the place with fifty head of cattle, and sixty head of hogs, and good horses. He is about three-fourths of a mile from the city of Cedar Vale, and hence has a very valuable farm. The subject of this sketch is one of the most enterprising men of the county, and has accumulated a nice property through his attention to business, starting, as he did, without any capital. In 1880, he was married to Miss Frances Schatz, of Canada. They have one son—George.

Wauneta, was born in Madison County, Iowa, in 1845, where he lived until nine years of age; thence to Texas, and was there nearly two years; thence to Arkansas; at the end of one year located at Kansas City, Mo. In 1858, located at Lawrence, Kan., and was there but a short time when he took a trip to the Western Territories, and during the war was employed as a scout through the mountains and on the plains. At the close of the war, he returned to Douglas County, Kan., and engaged in farming. In the spring of 1869, he settled in Howard County (now Chautauqua), locating on Grant Creek, and took a claim on Section 27, Township 34, Range 9. The county was not organized, and the survey was not made; there were no improvements on the Creek, and there were plenty of Indians; the distance to the nearest railroad point was 175 miles, and it was sixty miles to a post office. Mr. Johnson has 220 acres of land, with sixty acres in cultivation, the entire place fenced, three acres of orchard, the place watered by several nice springs, and on the whole has a good farm for stock-raising. He raises from twenty-five to thirty head of cattle, besides buying and selling and feeding other stock. He has been very successful in his business, and is noted as one of the enterprising men of his township. He was married in 1864, at Clinton, Kan., to Miss Sarah E. Betts. In 1869, he started South and got lost and came to a creek which proved to be the Big Caney River, and being pleased with the country, was satisfied it was the place to start a town, and picked out a claim; but when he had gone some fifty miles on his road home, felt dissatisfied, and returned and took the claim of the present town site of Cedar Vale. He at once returned with his family, located another claim, and a man by the name of Acres deeded the claim for the town site of Cedar Vale, Mr. Marsh having helped to organize a town company, and being a member of the same; he then opened a store, putting in the first stock of goods in the town. He is one of the most public-spirited men in the county, and is highly respected by all. When he made the settlement, there were but two or three families in the township and it was 150 miles from a railroad, not much to encourage a man to settle, and was considerably worse off than nothing. Mr. and Mrs Marsh have three children, viz.: Robert, Orris and Locen. Mr. Marsh is a member of Cedar Vale Post, No. 99, G. A. R., and of the I. O. O. F. ELGIN.

Elgin is situated in the southern part of Chautauqua County, on the line of the Indian Territory, and about the center of the county east and west. The town was started in 1869, by L. P. Getman. For a time the town grew rapidly and promised much for the future, being located in the beautiful and fertile valley of the Big Caney River, the extensive settlement of which was to be its main support and stay. The land, however, was not then surveyed, and men calculated on prospects merely, for when the survey was made nearly all the best farming lands were cut off into the Indian Territory, and thus shut out from settlement by the whites. This was a death blow to the town, which at the present time contains but a single business house. It was in this place that the first Masonic lodge in the county was organized.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

W. W. ANDERSON, farmer, P. O. Hart's Mills, was born in Parke County, Ind., in 1847, living there until twenty-one years of age. In 1869, he emigrated to Kansas, locating in Howard County. The county was unorganized, the survey was not finished, and there were but few settlers in the county. The subject of this sketch located a claim on Section 6, Town 36, Range 9, which he improved and has carried on since. When he first located here he commenced handling stock, and has been engaged in the business the most of the time since. In 1879, he engaged in the mercantile business, and served as Postmaster at Hart's Mills, remaining there three years. Mr. Anderson has been very successful in all his business projects, and is one of the enterprising men of his township. In September, 1880, he was united in marriage to Francenia Finch, daughter of Martin Finch, one of the pioneers of Chautauqua County.

B. A. TWEEDY, Postmaster and merchant, Hart's Mills, was born in Vermillion County, Ind., in 1857, and was raised there until twelve years of age, when he located in Edgar County with his parents, remaining there until 1874; thence to Kansas, locating in Chautauqua County. Soon after locating here, he accepted a position in the store of H. Davis at Hart's Mills. At the end of three years, the store changed hands, and he remained in the employ of the new firm. From 1877 until 1883, he served as Assistant Postmaster, and since that time has been Postmaster of Hart's Mills. In April, 1883, he bought the stock of goods of his employer, and at present has the only stock of goods in the place. His store is 25x33, filled with a good stock of general merchandise, and enjoys a good trade. Mr. T. is a wide-awake business man, and has succeeded in getting a good business started, although $2,500 was the extent of his capital when he located in the State. In 1882, he was married to Miss A. C. Hopper, of Chautauqua County, Kan.

L. C. WAIT, merchant and stock dealer, Elgin, was born in Sugaring Falls, Ohio, in 1847. In 1856, he emigrated to Wisconsin, locating in Richland County, where he remained until 1865; then returned East, remaining in New York State one year; thence to Jackson County, Mo., where he remained until 1873. Going from there to Kansas, he located at Elgin, Howard County, and engaged in the drug business. From 1875 to 1882, he had several mail route contracts, a part of them being among the largest contracts in the State. In 1882, he engaged in general merchandising at Elgin, and at present has the only store of the kind in the place. Besides his mercantile business, he is carrying on a large stock farm of 100 acres, close to the town of Elgin. Of this place, has 300 acres in cultivation, the whole place enclosed by fence, except forty acres of timber. The place is watered by the Caney River and Cedar Creek, and is stocked with 700 head of cattle. Since 1879, has been handling from 500 to 700 head annually. Mr. Wait not only raises, but buys, feeds and ships a large amount of stock all the time. He has one of the finest farms in the county, it being all bottom land, surrounded by a range of hills, and he is one of the largest stock dealers in the county, and it was through his close attention to business that he has been enabled to accumulate so much property, as he came to the State with but a few hundred dollars to invest. In 1882, he was elected County Commissioner for the Second District. In 1868, was married to Miss Florence C. Slaughter, of Barber County, Mo. They have four children. Is a member of Vesper Lodge, No. 136, A., F. & A. M., and Sedan Lodge, No. 154, I. O. O. F.

ST. PAUL.

This place was founded by Martin Knuckols in 1869. The prospect upon which the town was started was that it was thought it would fall upon the line of the Leavenworth, Lawrence & Gulf Railroad when that road should be built, and from that cause would make a good town.

Knuckols threw his whole soul into the project, in the hope of making a fine speculation. He erected a large hotel at a cost of about $3,000, and was pushing other improvements as rapidly as possible. But the railroad failed to connect as Knuckols had anticipated, and in going in another direction Knuckols and his town were left high and dry. The hotel has since burned down, and the town to all intents and purposes has become defunct, nothing remaining except a few houses, blacksmith shop, post office, etc.

MATANZAS.

This point was started in 1871. A petition was sent to the Post Office Department, asking that a post office be established at the place, to be called Matanzas. The petition was so poorly written that the authorities were unable to make out the name that was desired, and wrote to D. Clark, Postmaster at Peru, asking him what it was. Clark, cognizant of a good joke, wrote back the name Jay Hawk, and accordingly the office under that name was duly established. The people of the village and vicinity were very much perplexed over the joke that had been played upon them, and afterward had the name of the office changed to the name desired.

The place contains one business house, owned by J. Ross, a blacksmith shop, and a saw and grist mill.

JONESBURG.

This place began its existence in 1876, under the proprietorship of H. V. Jones, who erected a hotel called the Jones House. S. White began a merchandising business, which he afterward sold to Mr. McGuire. In the summer of 1880, J. T. Yates opened a general store, and in 1882 Minner & Mayfield started a drug store, and a man named Kidd a general store.

In 1862, he enlisted in the Sixteenth Kansas Cavalry, serving until the close of the war. The first of the service was in Kansas and Missouri, and the latter part of the time served on the plains in the Powder River Country. Remaining there until the war broke out, and being among the strong Pro-slavery people, he found he could not express his sentiments without getting in trouble, as he was a strong anti-slavery advocate, and when the conscript law was passed they tried to force him into the Confederate army, but he got away and went to Helena and enlisted in the Federal army. As soon as it was known he had gone, a party went to his place and abused his wife and family, and took the most of his goods and furniture and whatever they wanted, and told his wife she must not try to go to the d——d Yankees. She then took a team that night, and put a few things and her children, and started for Helena, fifteen miles distant, but was stopped by some of the Confederates, and taken out of the wagon and the balance of her property taken, and told that she must not go to the Yankees. But she pleaded with the officers to go to the nearest house, and finally received their consent, and that night, with a little help, succeeded in getting an old boat, and after getting her children into it, went down the river to Helena, where her husband was stationed, and he received a furlough and took his family to Illinois. He then returned and served three years in the Second Arkansas Cavalry. The Doctor was one of the pioneers of this county, as there were but a few settlers here and the surveys had not been made when he settled here. He also took a claim, and he and his partner started a trading post there when the nearest settlers were twelve miles distant. He also practiced medicine all the time while there. In the spring of 1882, he went to Cowley County and remained there until the following September, when he settled in Chautauqua County, and remained in Sedan until March, 1883, when he secured one-third interest in the town site of Wauneta, and located there and put in a stock of drugs, and engaged in the practice of medicine. While in Sedan, he formed a co-partnership with Mr. Ackerman, and bought the steam flouring mill at that point. When his last term of office expired, he closed out his interest in the mill, and bought a farm on Section 1, Town 34, Range 9, of 360 acres, on Shanghai Creek; has the place all fenced, 150 acres in cultivation, two acres of orchard, good buildings and good timber. The place is under the supervision of his son, while the Doctor devotes his time to his practice, which keeps him busy.
